House Approves $100,000 For Town Brook Flood Project

Funding legislation proposed by Cong. William Delahunt earmarked for the Town Brook flood protection project has been approved by the U.S. House of Representatives.

The House approved $100,000 to complete the final stage of the Town Brook flood protection project in Quincy and Braintree

-- specifically to continue reconstruction of the Quincy Dam, which began in 1992.

In addition, Delahunt advocated funding for other projects in his district, including:

- $500,000 for maintenance dredging in Plymouth Harbor's federal channel, which is critical to the

Would Ease Tax Burden On Commercial Property Sheets Will Submit 169% Classification Next Year

By CRAIG SALTERS

Mayor James Sheets has told Quincy business leaders that he will submit a 169 percent tax classification for commercial property next year, down six points from the state maximum 175 percent currently in place.

Sheets told a meeting of the Quincy Business Council last week that he would submit a 169 percent tax classification for the city's commercial, industrial, and personal property (CIPP).

"What I told them (the QBC) was that I will present the same tax classification as I presented for this year and that I was hopeful the council would pass it," Sheets explained.

In December of 1999 Sheets did submit a 169 percent tax classification for the city's commercial property but, by a 4-3 vote, the City Council voted to increase the classification to the state maximum of 175 percent.

The change was proposed by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi who said the move would shift $1.2 million of the city's tax burden off the shoulders of homeowners.

Councillor Timothy Cahill, who voted for the amendment, said at the time the increase was a "one shot deal" which was needed for the bailout of then Quincy Hospital.

A special meeting to reconsider the vote the next week lasted only a few minutes when a vote to discuss the issue failed, angering many business leaders who had come to speak against

Where John Hancock Declared His Love Dorothy Quincy Homestead Is Closed To Visitors

By TOM HENSHAW

One of Quincy's most popular and romantic historical treasures was closed to visitors over the busy July 4 holiday weekend and apparently has been since the tourist season began in May.

And no one is quite sure if or when the Dorothy Quincy Homestead at the corner of Butler Road and Hancock Street will open again.

A Quincy woman, who visited the house three times in June and July to show visitors from New Jersey, reported that a sign on the Homestead door said only, "Enjoy the Grounds."

The house on the banks of Furnace Brook, where John Hancock wooed and won Dorothy Quincy's hand, is owned by the MDC but operated by the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames under a 99-year lease.

Pat Flynn, a spokesman for the MDC, said the last he heard was that the Dames were seeking a new caretaker couple to live in the house and show visitors around.

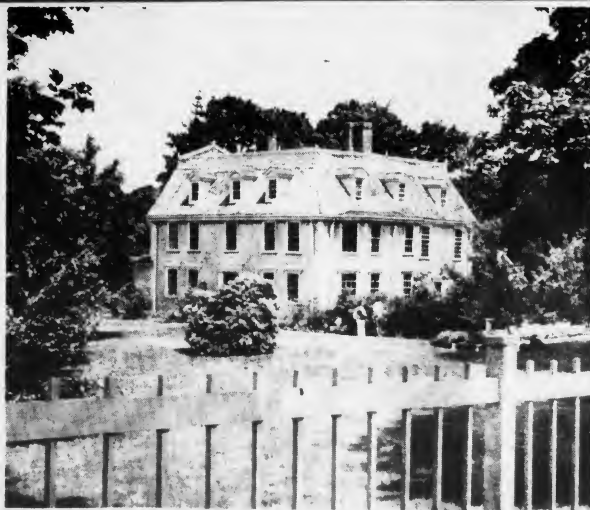

Colonial Dames President Julie Guild was not available for comment.

The oldest part of the house was built in 1685 by Col. Edmund Quincy II on land that was granted to Edmund I in 1638. The major part added in 1706 by Edmund III.

It was acquired and restored with vintage furniture, utensils and clothing by the Colonial Dames in 1904 and given to the state. The Dames retained a lease which expires in 2004.

Flynn said the MDC is responsible for the upkeep of the grounds while the Colonial Dames have charge of maintenance inside the stately old mansion. In previous years, the Homestead was open to the public May through October, Wednesday through Sunday, from 12 noon to 5 p.m. and by appointment 10 a.m. to 12 noon for groups. Admission was $3 for adults and $1 for children.

In the days prior to the Revolution, the house was the home of Edmund Quincy IV and the social center of Old Braintree, mostly because Edmund had five beautiful daughters.

The youngest, the vivacious Dorothy, was betrothed to a Quincy boy,

John Hancock, a wealthy young Boston businessman, already a leader of the rebels, who was to be the first to sign the Declaration of Independence in a bold hand "so that King George can read it without his spectacles."

Still visible on a window pane of the Homestead are the words "You I Love and You Alone," scratched by John Hancock with his diamond ring as he prepared to flee to Lexington with the British on his heels.

Special wallpaper with blue cupids and pink flowers was imported from France for the marriage of Dorothy and John but the war intervened.

Eventually, they were wed but it was at the home of Thaddeus Burr, uncle of a future vice president, Aaron Burr, in Fairfield, Conn., on Aug. 28, 1775.

THIS SIGN WELCOMES visitors to the Dorothy Quincy Homestead, but the historic site is closed.

QUEBEC CITY

Beautifully preserved and the only fortified city in North America, Quebec City is an exquisite historic place to visit. The city can easily be seen on foot, with some wonderful alpine views atop the city walls or at its highest point, Cap Diamant, near the Citadelle. Upper Town and Lower Town are divided by steep rock that has been carved into 25 different staircases. In Upper Town, see the city's impressive historic and political buildings, many of which have copper roofs and towering steeples. St. Jean Baptiste, the Ursuline Convent are all worth a visit for their beauty and history. Lower Town, or Basse-Ville, is more modern, featuring shops, boutiques, restaurants and art galleries.

It's always nice to know your neighbors and this is especially true of our Canadian neighbors to the north. Look to PRIME TRAVEL, your good neighbors here in Quincy, for good ideas on where to go and what to see. As travel advisors to our community, we've been lucky enough to get to know many wonderful places, and meet fascinating people all around the world. Take advantage of our experiences - we're happy to share them with you here at 500 Victory Road, Marina Bay. PH: 617-472-3697.
P.S.: Outside the city walls, Eglise St. Jean Baptiste, Quebec Museum and the Plains of Abraham are excellent sites to visit.

DA's Office Set To Get Asian Victim's Advocate

A bilingual victim advocate for the Asian community will be added to the staff of District Attorney William R. Keating's staff, possibly by the end of the summer, under a federal Victims of Crime Act grant.

"We have been working to expand our contact with the Asian community throughout Norfolk County and expand of support network," said Keating.

"This is a very important step, both in the service we will be able to offer in court and in the additional outreach services we will be able to provide."

The grant, which is distributed through the Massachusetts Office for Victims Assistance, totals $39,212 for fiscal 2001, which started July 1.

"This new advocate will both do direct services in court and perform outreach services to the Asian community," said Keating. "Specifically, that will mean doing prevention, education and intervention work on hate crimes and domestic violence."

The Asian community in Quincy now exceeds 20 percent of the city's population of roughly 88,000.

Some 51 Quincy residents graduated from the first class of the Asian Citizen's Academy, a joint effort by Keating and Police Chief Thomas Frane aimed at reaching out to the Asian community.

Sheets Will Submit 169% Tax Classification

Sheets, citing the need to send out city tax bills on time to avoid a cash flow problem, approved the amended tax plan.

Sheets described the meeting with the QBC, the local arm of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, as a friendly, productive one and said the classification issue was only mentioned for a moment or two as part of an overall discussion on property values, which are expected to rise.

Tax classification, a method of shifting the overall tax burden from residential to commercial property, multiplies actual commercial property value by a percentage (in this case, 175 percent) and adjusts the figures accordingly.

Without any tax classification, the city's tax burden would be split roughly 77 percent residential and 23 percent commercial.

With the 175 percent tax classification, that burden changes to roughly 60 percent residential and 40 percent commercial.

Until the change, the tax classification had been set at 169 percent since the early 1990's.

Current tax rates are $15.71 residential and $35.25 commercial per $1,000 valuation.

A Report From Senator Kennedy

Paid Family Leave Makes Sense

By SEN. TED KENNEDY

Under a new federal regulation, finalized this week, states may elect to provide paid parental leave for employees who want to take time off from their job to care for a newborn or newly adopted child.

The federal regulation authorizes states to use their unemployment insurance trust funds for paid parental leave. This is a sensible idea whose time has come.

It is vitally important for employees who are parents to be able to care for their newborn and newly adopted children, without putting their jobs at risk. Since its enactment in 1993, federal legislation has helped millions of Americans by providing up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave a year to care for a newborn or adopted child, with a guarantee that their jobs will be there when they return to work.

But many workers do not take the leave because they can't afford to go without a paycheck. A recent report by a bipartisan commission showed that the loss of a paycheck during unpaid leave prevents two-thirds of eligible employees from taking the leave when they need it. For many citizens in Massachusetts and across the country, taking leave means losing a paycheck and possibly missing a mortgage payment or going without other necessities. No parent should be forced to make such difficult choices, especially when faced with the jobs and difficulties of being a new parent.

Parents deserve an affordable, realistic way to take family leave. That is why many of us in Congress urged President Clinton to allow states to use their unemployment insurance trust funds to provide paid leave for new parents. This new federal regulation will help parents to spend crucial time with their newborn or newly adopted children, instead of continuing to work because they cannot afford to lose their paycheck.

The federal regulation is entirely voluntary. Each state will evaluate its unemployment compensation system and decide whether to implement the new benefit. The voluntary nature of this effort ensures both the preservation of a sound unemployment insurance system in each state and the opportunity to provide paid parental leave.

Using unemployment insurance to fund paid parental leave makes sense. An important goal of the unemployment insurance system is to increase workers' attachment in the workforce. The system was originally established as a safety net at a time when men were the sole breadwinners in most families. Since then, women have been entering the workforce in record numbers, and the unemployment insurance system should evolve to meet the changing needs of American families. In today's economy, where both mothers and fathers work, paid parental leave funded through unemployment insurance is an effective way to help meet the real life challenges faced by new parents.

This initiative is good for workers and for business. Many states, including Massachusetts, have substantial surpluses in their unemployment insurance system. Paid parental leave provides workers with a realistic opportunity to take the leave they need. It strengthens workers' attachment to the workforce, and it increases their loyalty, productivity and morale. Without parental leave, employers face the costs of high turnover and low morale.

It is gratifying that Massachusetts is likely to be the first state to act under this new federal regulation. Legislation has been introduced in both houses to use the state unemployment insurance trust fund to provide paid leave to Massachusetts workers who are new parents, and I look forward to its enactment.

About Time: A New Quincy Postcard

Joanne Dondero decided to do it herself. She just got tired of tourists and local customers coming into her Quincy Sq. gift shop -- Abigail's Crossing -- and asking the same question: "Do you have any Quincy postcards?"

And she just got tired of having to tell them: "No, I'm sorry. The old ones are pretty scarce and there aren't any new ones."

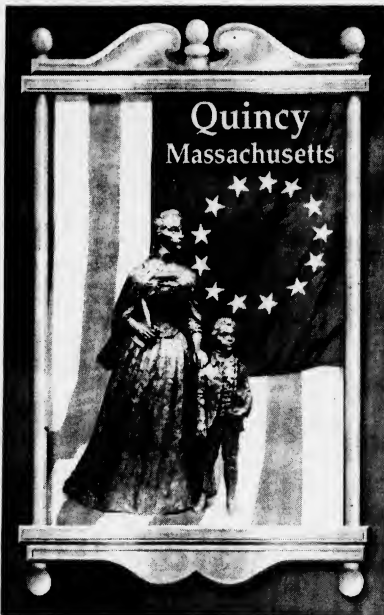

But now there is a new one.

Joanne had it created herself.

It shows the statue of Abigail Adams and her young son, John Quincy Adams, the future sixth President, which stands beside historic First Parish Church.

DONDERO

QUINCY'S NEW POSTCARD

And, it may be the beginning of a whole new series of Quincy postcards.

The statue is an appropriate starter for Joanne since it is also located just across Hancock and Temple Sts.

from Abigail's Crossing.

The four-color card features a photo of the statue taken by John Black of Presidential Camera. "Presidential" seems an appropriate touch, too, since Abigail was the wife of one president, John Adams, and the mother of another, John Quincy Adams.

The figures of Abigail at age 32 and John Quincy at 10, are in a cut-out over the background of an original American flag with 13 stars and the words "QUINCY, Massachusetts" and set in an early American gold mirror-like frame.

A very attractive card.

"I was really ashamed to have to tell people that we didn't have any Quincy postcards," says Joanne.

"I thought it was disgraceful. Think of all the historic sites we have here and no new postcards showing any of them."

There have been a limited number of old cards with old photos, she notes.

She has a few cards of pictures of John and John Quincy Adams.

"But tourists," she says, "want a card showing Quincy and the words Quincy, Massachusetts to mail back home."

She also has found cards of the Adams Mansion but says they feature an old photo.

Her Abigail Adams statue card, she believes, is the first new Quincy card in 30 or more years.

She commissioned the printing of 2,000 of them and is selling them at 75 cents each. She says she is willing to wholesale some of them to other Quincy outlets.

Those attending last week's dedication of the Abigail Adams statue got a preview of the new card. And got to take one home. Joanne distributed them free.

Reaction to the card has been so good, she plans to do a series of updated postcards of Quincy's historic sites and other landmarks.

The series would include the Adams Birthplaces, the Adams Mansion, First Parish Church, Dorothy Quincy Homestead, the Thomas Crane Public Library and Marina Bay and other sites.

The Adams Birthplaces are an example of the need to update the postcards. The old cards, if you can find one, show them when they were painted red. The cottages have since been restored to their original look under the U.S. National Park Service.

Joanne hopes it won't be long when tourists come in and ask if she has Quincy postcards that she will be able to say:

"Yes, we do. Which one would you like?"

Summer Institute For Talented Students Opens July 10

The Quincy Public Schools 19th annual Summer Institute for talented and motivated students will be held July 10 through Aug. 18.

The program serves students entering kindergarten through Grade 9.

Enrollment is filling but there are openings for students entering Grades 5 through 8 at North Quincy High School.

Classes still available are: Bon Voyage (French), Buen Viaje (Spanish), Computers, Chemistry Lab, Art Studio

READERS FORUM

More Thoughts On The Shopping Cart Issue

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

This is a letter in response to a letter appearing in the June 8 edition of The Quincy Sun. The letter was entitled "Believes Shopping Cart Problem Is Getting Worse" and was authored by Ms. Michelle Boyne-Granskie.

In responding to the letter regarding the ongoing issue of shopping carts strewn throughout our neighborhoods, I would like to first commend Ms. Boyne-Granskie on bringing forth her cogent thoughts. Indeed, the notion that a private company, Stop and Shop, must be to blame for the chronic illegal confiscation of their own property is inherently flawed. When we strive to punish the law abiding rather than punish the perpetrator we find ourselves engaging in utter futility. We may note this strategy at play in our city councillors' management of many issues in our city.

When one engages in reckless driving resulting in a tragic accident, for example, we find that the "remedy" is invariably a swiftly installed set of ostentatious traffic lights and restrictive signage. This is clearly socialistic thinking and only results in the punishment of the law abiding, well driving citizen who must incur further delay and gridlock while traveling about our city. We should propose increased policing of the troubled cite or area, instead. Our efforts must always focus on those at fault, not the innocent.

I would like to expand on and take exception with a couple of Ms. Boyne-Granskie's points regarding the shopping carts issue. Indeed, these displaced carts are an eyesore in any neighborhood graced with their presence. The claim that they pose some sort of a "hazard to individuals" strays from the key to the argument, the fundamental issue at hand. In this case, Stop and Shop's carts are being routinely stolen. Where they are ultimately deposited is incidental to the fundamental issue.

It would be appropriate for Stop and Shop to pledge to encourage and support law enforcement actions taken on their behalf by our fine city police officers. They may even choose to publicize the increased efforts to prosecute those who steal carts for private use. Ms. Boyne-Granskie's strategy of arguing on behalf of Stop and Shop's potential or actual budgetary insults and the speculated impact on our grocery prices is probably both naive and overstated. It is truly unlikely that the nominal fiscal impact of relatively few shopping carts in the streets will reflect in any way on the price of Cherrios in Wollaston.

Lastly, the proposal that a committee be formed to address this issue is utterly preposterous. Ms. Boyne-Granskie argues quite effectively that what we have here is a simple case of people who steal not being held accountable. She goes on to purport, however, that a committee be formed, presumably to sort out the mysteries of this issue! She states that "we" need to teach people right from wrong! Who, pre tell, is "we"? Is "we" the government? Is "we" Stop and Shop? Is "we" you and I? Isn't it reasonable to expect people to know "right from wrong" without "our" help? Rather, shouldn't we spend our energies holding people accountable to their adherence thereof? Besides, I'm still busy teaching people to be "nice."

A 'Thank You' For Letter Carrier Food Drive Success

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The annual Letter Carrier Food Drive, which was held May 13, was a tremendous success. Letter carriers all across the nation promote this day, encouraging people to leave non-perishable food out to be picked up by the carriers for distribution to local food pantry agencies.

The Quincy Crisis Center was one of the local agencies that benefited from this food drive. There was excitement in the air as volunteers worked together through the day picking up the food from the local postoffices, unloading it at the Crisis Center, and then sorting it to the pantry shelves and to boxes for storage. The total amount of food that the Crisis Center received from this food drive was 5,585 pounds. The food will be used for distribution throughout the summer months.

"Thank you" to everyone in Quincy who participated in this food drive. Special thanks go to the letter carriers who have "extra duty" to do on this day. They not only lighten their letter bag by distributing the mail, but they then fill it up again with the donated food. Thank you for doing this with such a positive attitude and a smiling face. Thank you to each person who donated food.

This event embodies the Quincy Crisis Center's mission of "advancing a culture of compassion"—those who gave are responding to help those who are in need, neighbor to neighbor. The Quincy Crisis Center, and those we distributeto, say "thank you."

Sweeny Boosts College Courses

By PAUL HAROLD

School Committeeman Charles Sweeny said he was extremely encouraged by the interest shown in the college courses that were being offered by the school department.

He noted that while only 17 students had signed up for the second round of courses being offered in the fall, one hundred inquiries were made concerning the program.

Other school committee members were not as enthusiastic as Sweeny as to the future success of the college program. Paul Duffy called the experiment a "dismal failure."

"We were told they would be breaking down the doors to get in," he said.

Committee members Dr. Joseph McDermott and A. Wendell Clark questioned the financial stability of the program noting that there was only a few hundred dollars left in the college courses account.

Sweeny's hope was that the program would eventually evolve into an independent two-year junior college.

PERMIT GRANTED FOR NEW ROXIE'S

Building Inspector Alrick Weidman granted a building permit for the construction of a $75,000 structure at the corner of the Southern Artery and Canal St. to house a new Roxie's supermarket. It was expected that the current Roxie's in the basement of the Bargain Center would relocate to the new location.

Martin Rubin, one of the three brothers who operated Roxie's in Quincy and Roxbury, said he was drawn to the Southern Artery site because of the city's plans to widen both Southern Artery and Canal St.

Also granted a permit this week was the Archbishop of Boston for a new entrance to St. Joseph's Church at a cost of $9,000.

BARRETT ELECTED HEAD OF STATE BAR

Quincy Atty. Raymond Barrett was elected president of the Mass. Bar Association making a pay increase for state superior and supreme court judges his first priority.

Barrett said the current salary of $19,000 was too low for judges and not in line with other states, for example New York. He praised the recent appointment of Quincy's Paul Reardon as head of the superior courts, noting that he was making unpopular but necessary changes.

Two other initiatives Barrett wanted addressed during his presidency was the defense of indigent clients and the establishment of a continuing education program for lawyers.

In reflecting on his 32 years of practicing law in the city, he said he missed the "formal and colorful figures" that made the practice in Quincy Court particularly enjoyable.

QUINCY-ISMS

City Manager Edward Lewis announced that the city received approval from the state Emergency Finance Board to transfer funds from the Broad Meadows School account to the Atlantic Junior High School account. The extra money was needed for the new North Quincy school because six homes had to be taken, adding $80,000 to the original estimates. . . Councillor Edna Austin was the only council vote for urban renewal in the city. Many rumors were floated regarding its impact on Houghs Neck. One claim was that under urban renewal of new housing. . . W. Robert Kilbourn was the winner of the Tirrell cup from the Quincy Community Players. Mrs. Rudolph Oberg was the club photographer. . . Irving Saltzman and the former Evelyn Cohen returned from their honeymoon in Bermuda. . . Members of the Young Adult Fellowship of the Houghs Neck Congregational Church were engaged in "clean-up, paint-up" project at the church. Included were Robert Johnston, William Riepkke, Dianna Gordon and Carol Schuerch. . . The members of the board of directors at the Jewish Community Center included Elliot Davidson, Mrs. Albert Slate and Mrs. Sumner Hirschberg. . . Past exalted ruler of the Quincy Elks, Joseph Brett, was a delegate to the national convention in San Francisco. . . At Quincy City Hospital, a daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Gino Marini of East Squantum St. and a son to Mr. and Mrs. Harold Williams of Gilmore St. . . The only candidates filing nomination papers for city council to date were incumbent Carl Anderson and Joseph Halter of Independence Ave.

String Bean/Zucchini Fritter

Over the Memorial Day weekend, we had our usual buffet/open the pool day. Even though it was pretty cool, some of those little darlings still took a dip.

One of the foods I prepared for this bash was a fritter I usually cook with string beans which is everyone's favorite.

However, there was this small zucchini in the refrigerator too small to make anything big out of, so I decided to shred it and add it to the string beans. It was a terrific blend.

String Bean/Zucchini Fritter

1 large can string beans (cut in smaller pieces)

1 small zucchini (shredded)

2 eggs

2-3 tablespoons Bisquick or flour

1/2 cup grated cheese

Vegetable oil (a bit of olive oil can be mixed with the vegetable oil.)

salt and pepper to taste

In a bowl, place the string beans, and with a knife, just cut through making them in smaller pieces. Add the zucchini, and the rest of the ingredients. The mixture should resemble pancake mix when you're ready to cook them. If it seems watery, add a bit more flour. If dry, add a little water.

In a frying pan, in the hot oil, drop by the tablespoons and cook, turning until brown on both sides. Drain on paper towel, and keep in a warming oven until ready to eat. They are also great as an appetizer.

(P.S. Whenever I cook any of my own creations, I hardly ever use measuring spoons, but when the recipe is printed, I try to estimate just how much I've used. So sometimes, you have to know by the look or feel of a recipe.)

Summer Concert Series Aboard USS Salem

The musical sounds of blues, Irish, disco, country, folk-rock, the 1940's, Broadway, and even Elvis, will echo from the deck of the USS Salem this summer as the heavy cruiser launches its first annual outdoor summer concert series.

Each Sunday afternoon, beginning July 9 and running through Sept. 10, in the shadow of the ship's heavy guns, the Salem will host some of the region's best performers.

The concerts begin at 2 p.m. Admission is $6 for adults and $4 for children and seniors. Price includes a tour of the ship. Acts scheduled to appear include:

July 9: The Yardrock presents Basic Black Blues Band, featuring the best in red-hot blues.

July 30: Platform Soul, a 7-piece dance band with horns, taking audiences boogying back to the days of 1970's disco and funk.

Aug. 6: Hot Spot Cabaret, featuring Broadway favorites, '40s & '50s.

Aug. 13: Scott Douglas & the Memphis Connection, celebrating Elvis' birthday with a concert tribute to The King.

Aug. 20: Dave Foley Band, "Outstanding Country Act" (Boston Music Awards).

Aug. 27: Les Sampou, local favorite offering the best in folk and rock.

Sept. 10: For Sentimental Reasons, returning to the USS Salem with their outstanding World War II USO Show, after attracting close to 350 people on the ship this past Memorial Day weekend.

The USS Salem, a 17,000 ton heavy cruiser, is at the Fore River Shipyard, just off Rte. 3A, next to the Fore River Bridge. Use the main entrance off the bridge rotary near the Harbor Express. The Salem is open seven days a week, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and can be reached by calling (617) 479-7900, or on-line at www.uss-salem.org.

Pat Maloney In Thayer Musical

Quincy resident and Thayer Academy Middle School student Pat Maloney was in the cast of "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown," a musical staged recently in the school's Thompson Hall.

Maloney is a member of the Class of 2005.

NEWEST DESIGN ADDITIONS of the popular Cat's Meow collection was recently introduced at an open house at Abigail's Crossing, 1350 Hancock St., Quincy Center. Cat's Meow Village creator Fannie Jones (right) made a personal appearance and signed purchases. Joining her is Joanne Dondoro, owner of Abigail's Crossing. This year's special annual celebration piece is the Humane Society Tree. Abigail's Crossing will donate a portion of the sale to a local humane society. The shop is an official membership center carrying a complete line of Cat's Meow Village items which include custom designs depicting Quincy, Milton, Braintree and Boston.

Irish Folk Singer To Open Library Lawn Concerts

The Thomas Crane Public Library's Concerts on the Lawn series will begin Thursday, July 20 with Tom O'Carroll, a Dublin born folk singer.

O'Carroll presents "Irish Music: Songs and Stories" from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. on the library's front lawn for both adults and children.

Krisanthi Pappas, a swing/jazz vocalist, will be accompanied by a jazz combo in concert July 27 in a medley of swing and jazz standards.

Guitarist Michael Nix will present "Lutes and Limberjacks" Aug. 3. His interactive presentation features guitar, lute and banjo for listeners of all ages.

The concert series concludes with INCA SON performing the music of the Andes Aug. 10. INCA SON, a music and dance ensemble that dresses in authentic and colorful Inca attire, will perform both traditional songs and original compositions. Their concert will appeal to all ages.

All concerts are on Thursdays from 12:30 to 1:30 p.m. Concert-goers are welcome to bring lawn chairs, blankets, and picnics. In case of rain the concerts will be held at the Adams Shore Branch Library, 519 Sea St. Both sites are accessible, and concerts are free.

They are funded in part by the Quincy Cultural Council, a local agency supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Quincy Art Association Offering Summer Classes

The Quincy Art Association will offer summer art classes for both children and adults.

Children may sign up for a summer art adventure where they will learn techniques in drawing, water color, papermache, clay and collage. All materials will be supplied.

Classes will run from July 17 through July 28.

Arrangements can be made for morning, afternoon or all day sessions. Half days are $60 and all day sessions are $110 per week.

Call the Quincy Art Association at 617-770-2482 to register.

Adults may sign up for a clay class at the Center, 24 High School Ave.

This is a wide ranging course which will be tailored to the individual student.

It is geared to the beginner and intermediate level. A variety of glazes are offered, as well as underglazes.

Materials and firing are included in the price of $65. There are four sessions: July 3, 10, 17, and 24. Classes will run from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m.

Call the Quincy Art Association at 617-770-2482 to register.

Caitlin Maloney Wins Second Prize In MWRA Essay Contest

Caitlin Maloney of Quincy, a sophomore at Archbishop Williams High School, won second prize in an essay contest at the recent 18th annual Massachusetts

Water Resources Authority Awards Ceremony at the Federal Court House in Boston.

The MWRA conducted a statewide essay contest asking students to write about and offer solutions to the statistic that there are 1,000 households in the state living without indoor plumbing.

Adams Historical Park Summer, Fall Events

The Revolutionary War and the early days of the Republic will be on display for the public this summer and fall at the Adams National Historical Park.

Tuesday, July 11 - A wreath from President Bill Clinton will be placed at the crypt of John Quincy Adams, the sixth president of the United States, on his 233rd birthday. The Mendi Bible, a gift to Adams from the African people in appreciation of his efforts on behalf of the Amistad captives, will be on exhibit in the Stone Library.

The event will be held at 12 noon in United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St. Admission is free.

Sunday, July 23 - The Park, along with the Castle Island Association and the MDC will collaborate to present a program highlighting the contributions of citizens during the Civil War. It features martial music, historical characters, Civil War reenactors, period games and old fashioned refreshments.

The event will be held from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Castle Island in South Boston. Admission is free.

Friday, Aug. 25 - The Park will waive the usual entrance fee and conduct parkwide tours in honor of Founders Day, the day the National Park Service was founded.

The event will be held all day at the Old House, 135 Adams St. Admission is free.

Sunday, Sept. 10 - The Park will host a celebration of the Victoria Era (the Gay Nineties) with lawn games, period entertainments and refreshments. Guests are invited to come dressed in Victorian finery.

The event will be held from 12 noon to 4 p.m. at the Old House, 135 Adams St. Admission is free but guests should call 617-770-1175 for reservations.

Sunday, Sept. 17 - The public is invited to play a role in the passage of the United States Constitution by the Constitutional Convention on Sept. 17, 1787.

Members of the audience assume the roles of delegates to the convention and represent their states in debates. Afterward, each delegate will sign the document, ring the Liberty Bell and receive copies of the U. S. and Massachusetts Constitutions to keep as a memento.

The event will take place at 2 p.m. at the Old House, 135 Adams St. Admission is free.

Sunday, Oct. 8 - Visitors are invited to picture themselves as patriot refugees in 1775 fleeing British-occupied Boston. They will meet Colonial characters, investigate Colonial lifestyles, help with farm chores, and practice military maneuvers with a captain of militia who "pays" them. Patriots will celebrate with a cup of cider and a slice of liberty cake.

The event will be held from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Adams Birthplaces, 133 & 141 Franklin St. Admission is free but visitors are urged to call 617-770-1175 for reservations.

Friday, Oct. 20 & Saturday, Oct. 21 - A two-day program of dramatic performances, lectures and debates offering perspectives on the nation's first partisan presidential election in 1800 and a perspective on the presidential election of 2000.

The program will be presented at 7 p.m. Friday and 12 noon to 7 p.m. Saturday at a location to be announced. Admission is free.

Saturday, Oct. 28 - Visitors will be taken on a candlelight tour of one of New England's oldest burial grounds. Historic figures will come back to life to share their experiences in the community. The program will be followed by refreshments of cider and angel's or devil's food cake.

The tours will take place from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. in the Hancock Cemetery on Hancock Street and refreshments will be served across the street at United First Parish Church.

Geraldine Maus Receives Teacher Of The Year Award

Fontbonne Academy English teacher Geraldine Maus of Quincy was recently selected as Teacher of the Year as part of the Wal-Mart Foundation's Teacher of the Year Program.

She was nominated by Fontbonne Principal Sharon Gouveia and her peers.

"This award recognizes teachers who go above and beyond — mentors, motivators and innovators — the kind of teachers who make learning fun and exciting," Gouveia said. "Mrs. Maus is known as a teacher with a flair for the dramatic, whose classroom strategies help students experience and appreciate 'what they read...she was a natural choice.'"

Mr., Mrs. Kenneth Parlee Parents Of Daughter

Karen and Kenneth Parlee of Pembroke, are parents of a daughter, Madison Katherine born May 25 at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth. She joins a brother, William and a sister Samantha MacKenzie.

Grandparents are William and Margaret Corliss of Quincy and Wayne and Lucy Parlee of Braintree.

Mrs. Maus was among an elite group of teachers from across the country to receive the 2000 Teacher of the Year Award. Selected for demonstrating excellence in teaching, recipients receive a plaque, a commemorative Wal-Mart Teacher of the Year vest, and a $550 education grant to be applied toward their classroom efforts.

Mrs. Maus has been teaching English at Fontbonne Academy for more than five years. She is a Fontbonne Academy alumna, class of 1970. Two of her daughters, Christine and Siobhanna, are also Fontbonne graduates and a third, Caroline, will enter her junior year at Fontbonne this fall.

LAURA JANOWITCH of Quincy recently took part in Thayer Academy's stage production of Robert Lawlor's 'Much Ado About Murder,' which was held in the school's Frothingham Hall. Janowitch is a member of Thayer's Class of 2001.

At Broad Meadows Students Work Locally To Aid Children Globally

By RON ADAMS
(Ron Adams is a Language Arts Teacher at the Broad Meadows Middle School and an advisor to the Operation Day's Work Program)

You are seeing the future of youth service if you have noticed groups of blue and yellow shirted young people raking, planting, and cleaning historic sites in the city.

If you look more closely, you'll also see those same students volunteering across Quincy at nursing homes, at food pantries, anywhere else they see a need.

The unique feature of their work is that these youth also see need in communities thousands of miles away.

The blue and yellow shirts are emblazoned with the words "Operation Day's Work-USA," which is the name of their student run program. Many of these students have been involved before in community service projects through church, school, and scouting programs. However, all have agreed to move youth service to the next level, namely global service.

The students' strategy is to help improve their own community and, at the same time, to help educate poor children in other countries. Putting community and global service together is the essence of Operation Day's Work-USA.

Students in Operation Day's Work first select and perform "sponsored" community service projects. Armed with a pledge sheet, students enlist neighbors, family, and parent's co-workers to "pledge" monetary support for each community service project completed.

Students select which service projects they'll attempt. Once a project, like the cleanup of the Thomas Crane Public Library grounds, is completed, students return to their sponsors and collect their pledges. One hundred percent of the money collected goes to establish a new educational project in a developing country of the students' choice.

Unlike conventional community service, the fruits of the young people's local labor will extend far beyond this community, all the way, for example, to an orphanage the students have voted to build in El Salvador.

Last year, through Operation Day's Work, students raised funds for aid and education to poor families in rural Haiti. One "Day's Work" done here may result in a lifetime of change for hundreds of poor children in developing countries. It is the goal of the young people in Operation Day's Work-USA to bring new educational opportunities to their peers in one developing country each year.

Each year, students vote on which country they help. Students then accept from non-governmental organizations proposals for establishing a new, sustainable, educational program in that country. The students believe that breaking the cycle of poverty is complex, but education is a key to ending poverty. One of the founders of Operation Day's Work, Mary Bloomer, age 12, a student at Broad Meadows Middle School, said, "This is not charity. We are youth, helping youth, to help themselves."

In 1999, participating students in six states raised $31,000 which was enough to provide literacy, seeds, and livestock to over 2000 poor families in rural Haiti. This year, as the number of participating U.S. schools has grown to 31 schools in 14 states, the goal has been increased to $90,000.

This year, the students chose to build an orphanage school for 300 children, all victims of the brutal civil war in El Salvador. In addition to helping the youngest victims of the civil war in El Salvador, the Quincy students have decided to also launch a service project on the grounds of Boston College, in memory of the Jesuit priests and other religious leaders who were murdered by rebels during the civil war in El Salvador.

Operation Day's Work-USA is student run and open to students of all ages. Quincy's Broad Meadows Middle School is one of the six founding schools of Operation Day's Work-USA.

Co-founder Evelyn McInnes, an eighth grade student at Broad Meadows Middle School, said, "This program gives youth a chance to take action and to stop sitting back and watching bad things happen to the world. The coolest thing about being in ODW-USA is that work we do in our communities and our fundraising helps thousands of children's lives. For me, to know I've done something like that gives me the greatest feeling."

According to Elizabeth Bloomer, another co-founder and now a freshman at Archbishop Williams High School, "Our goal is to grow Operation Day's Work into schools in all 50 states by 2003."

Creating a new, national program is not easy, as the students are discovering, but high hopes, a big heart, and the latest technology just might overcome all obstacles. The State Street Foundation donated funds to provide a state of the art computer to the Operation Day's Work Quincy.

The students would like to thank some of the other adults who have been encouraging their efforts to improve the Quincy community while improving the lives of poor children in developing countries.

eyes, ears, and heart in Haiti," Peace Corps Volunteer Jeann Robichaud; Congressman William Delahunt (House Foreign Relations Committee); Fran Ryan of the Thomas Crane Public Library; Nanette Canniff of the St. Boniface Hospital in Haiti Campaign; the staffs of the Eventide Nursing Home; The Quincy Crisis Center; the Blue Goose of The Emmanuel Gospel Center of Boston; the Protestant Social Services Bureau; Father Bill's Place; the Quincy Animal Shelter; and the USS Salem in Quincy.

Technology has helped pull the participating schools together. For three years, Quincy students have been communicating weekly with other ODW students in other states by email, web site, and conference calls.

To spread the word about Operation Day's Work-USA to other schools, students have accepted invitations and have given talks about the program at: Pine Manor College; at a Youth Congress held last month in Puerto Rico; at the Harvard School of Public Health; at the annual Quincy Martin Luther King, Jr., Breakfast; at the Boston Public Library in Copley Square; on live TV on the Massachusetts Corporation for Educational Television; and at Team Harmony V at the Fleet Center in Boston.

Locally, Operation Day's Work is being led jointly by students from the Broad Meadows Middle School, Quincy High School, Archbishop Williams High School, the Snug Harbor and Merrymount Elementary Schools including: Migdalia Tracy, Mike Quigley, Katie O'Driscoll, Katie Saul, Alicia Cappellano, Evelyn McInnes, and Fran Ryan.

The United States

Agency for International Development (USAID) is encouraging young people in all 50 states to join Operation Day's Work. In fact, USAID is providing the funds for annual summer conventions in which ODW leaders from every participating school can finally meet face to face to work together to improve their program. Last year, the meeting was dubbed a "Constitutional Convention" because participating students elected constitutional delegates to formalize the program by writing an Operation Day's Work Constitution.

The convention was held in steamy Philadelphia in July. The site was chosen carefully to inspire the 100 plus students by bringing them to Philadelphia, the birthplace of the U.S. Constitution. This year, the convention will be held in Minnesota.

To involve your school or your child's school, or your grandchild's school, or for more information, you can call Broad Meadows Middle School in Quincy at (617) 984-8723 or phone Paul Austin at USAID in Washington, DC at (202) 712-4021.

The Operation Day's Work web site is <http://odw.info.usaid.gov>.

Donations can be made payable to ODW/BMMS and mailed to Broad Meadows Middle School, 50 Calvin Rd., Quincy 02169.

Interpretative Wayside Dedicated At Abigail Adams Statue

Representatives from the National Park Service, the Quincy Partnership, and the City of Quincy were on hand Friday to officially dedicate the Abigail Adams Statue Interpretative Wayside across the street from City Hall.

The statue itself, featuring Abigail Adams with her hand upon the shoulder of a 10-year old John Quincy Adams, has been at the site for two years but now bears a colorful marker inscribed with a passage from one of Abigail's letters to her son while he was in Europe with his father John Adams.

The passage reads: "Improve your understanding for acquiring usefull (sic) knowledge and virtue, such as will render you an ornament to society, an Honour to your Country, and a Blessing to Your parents ... your ever affectionate Mother, AA."

Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets and his representative that day, remarked how appropriate it was that dedication ceremonies were taking place so close to July 4, given Abigail Adams' status in history as one of America's first champions of the independence of women. "She was one of the most singularly individual thinking women of that time period, a period where women couldn't own property and were even considered property in most of the colonies," Mader said. "So this is quite timely."

Marianne Peak, superintendent of the Adams National Historic Site, said the inscription "helps tell the story of Abigail Adams and her relationship with John Quincy Adams" and that its message of education and national service was as important at the turn of the millennium as it was at the dawn of the 19th century. "She always directed her children to do the right thing," Peak said of Adams.

Ward 5 Councilor Stephen Durkin represented the City Council, commending the Quincy Partnership on their efforts over the past two years and calling Abigail Adams "a very forward thinking person."

Durkin, who pointed out that the young John Quincy Adams would grow up to be not only the sixth president of the United States but a distinguished congressman after his presidency, said the new inscription would help to ease the confusion among tourists who have admired the statue but, in some cases, have been in the dark as to just who the striking figures are.

Mark Bertman, owner of Rogers Jewelry in Quincy Center, spoke on behalf of the eight-to-12 member Quincy Partnership, thanking the city, the National Park Service, and the hard work of his fellow partnership members.

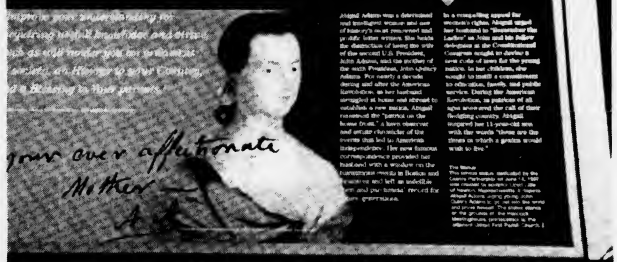

Bertman called the members of the partnership "unnamed, unknown, but very active in this city."

The efforts of Peak and the National Park Service were lauded by every speaker at the ceremonies, most notably Mader, who emphasized just how large a contribution the NPS made to the culture of Quincy. "They really know their stuff," said Mader.

The ceremonies ended when children were invited to release red, white, and blue balloons into the sky as a tribute to Adams and her son.

The Abigail Adams

Statue is located next to the United First Parish Church (Church of the Presidents), where Abigail, husband John, son John Quincy, and daughter-in-law Louisa Catherine are entombed.

Manet Health Honors Dr. Karen Musolf For 12 Years Service

The Manet Community Health Center, Inc., recently recognized Karen Musolf, M.D., for her 12 years of service to the center at a gathering of 70 colleagues, patients, and friends at the Neighborhood Club.

Dr. Musolf has accepted a teaching position at the University of Michigan.

Dr. Musolf, who received her undergraduate and medical degrees from the University of Wisconsin and completed her family practice residency at Duke University, came to work as a family practice physician in Houghs Neck and the Snug Harbor Germantown sites of Manet Community Health Center in 1986.

Dr. Musolf and her associates care for 2,700 patients at Snug Harbor, providing 6,600 primary care visits annually.

Dr. Musolf was recognized by Fred Dolgin, M.D., medical director of Manet CHC. Dr. Dolgin praised Dr. Musolf for her "high quality of care, comprehensive knowledge of medicine, and dedication to her patients."

Mary Sweeney of Quincy Medical Center presented Dr. Musolf with the Historic Quincy Sites Health Education Foundation Print. Sweeney commented on the contributions Dr. Musolf had made over the years to the entire Barbara Morris, president of the Manet CHC board, and Judy Kolson, representing patients, spoke of the high regard Dr. Musolf's patients have for her.

Dr. Musolf has concentrated her practice at the Snug Harbor site for the past three years.

In accepting the gifts and recognition, Dr. Musolf remarked that her "colleagues and patients had become a family to her" as she brought family practice medicine to the community. She also said she would miss providing care in such a close-knit community as she moves into a teaching role but promised to keep in touch with her colleagues and patients.

Dr. Musolf added that she was pleased to have had some time to work with Dr. Meera Mathew, the family practice physician who has filled her position.

Dr. Mathew brings nine years of experience to her new role, having worked in community-based practices with affiliations at community and teaching hospitals, most recently in Baltimore, MD.

State Street Donates $250,000 To Germantown Neighborhood Center

By CRAIG SALTERS

"Build it, and they will come."

Ward 1 Councillor and Germantown native Gregory Hanley echoed this famous line from the movie Field of Dreams at ceremonies Thursday at the Snug Harbor School, trying to express just how grateful he and his neighbors were for State Street Corporation's $250,000 gift to build a new Germantown Neighborhood Center.

Coupled with a $270,000 commitment from the city, the State Street donation, part of its worldwide Millennium Gift campaign totaling $1.8 million, makes what once was the hope of a permanent community center a reality or, as Hanley put it, "a dream come true."

Kathy Quigley, executive director of the neighborhood center, said planners were still exploring locations and construction details for the project but that it would most likely continue to run out of the Snug Harbor School, only with brand new facilities and increased services.

According to State Street, the current plan calls for a 1,500 square-foot addition to be built at the Snug Harbor School to create a permanent home for the center, which provides such community services as after-school/drop-in services for local youths, daycare, and adult learning programs.

Hanley -- speaking alongside Mayor James Sheets, State Street Chairman Marshall Carter, State Street Vice President of Community Affairs George Bowman, and Ann Marie Hanley, president of the Germantown Neighborhood Council and wife of the councillor -- detailed for the crowd his own experiences growing up in Germantown and how the three institutions of the Snug Harbor School, St. Boniface Church, and the Germantown Service Center provided the framework for both his family and others like it to better themselves and grab their share of the American Dream.

Specifically, Hanley praised the efforts of his mother, who made use of education and job opportunities to eventually graduate from Curry College and become a paralegal.

And like his family's success story, Hanley told State Street's Carter that the new neighborhood center would become a similar "field of dreams," enabling future generations to escape situations of poverty or hopelessness. "And much like that movie, little voices of the heart have whispered to many to build this community center," Hanley said. "That's why I stand before you, Mr. Carter, and those from State Street, and say thank you."

Mayor Sheets also thanked Carter for the company's generous donation and reminded the audience that "communities are not built by bricks and mortar and concrete, but by people."

The new community center, said Sheets, would become as important to the community as the nationally recognized Snug Harbor school next to it. "We're creating a center where people can meet, associate, share their burdens, and plan," the mayor said. "It will strengthen this community."

Carter, who said State Street had worked on a smaller scale with the neighborhood center in the past and realized their impact in the community, said the Millennium Gift was part of the company's continued commitment to Quincy, where it employs roughly 12,000 workers, and to international efforts where the company does business. "It's really our honor to be here and to help the neighborhood center," said Carter.

Carter said the $1.8 million Millennium Gifts, distributed to 11 locations worldwide, were in addition to the company's annual charitable donations of roughly $8 million annually, or one and a half percent of State Street's pre-tax profits.

Of that annual $8 million, Carter emphasized, close to 75 percent is targeted to the Greater Boston area. "This is our home," Carter said simply.

State Street, Carter said, was founded in 1792 in Boston and gave out commemorative donations similar to the Millennium Gifts in 1992 to celebrate the company's 200th anniversary.

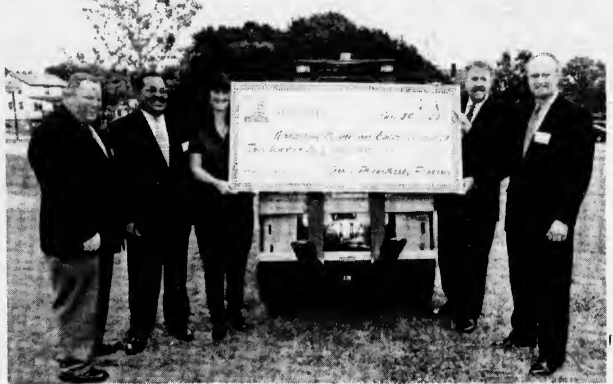

The Snug Harbor ceremonies were well attended, especially by some of the boys and girls from the center, and there was a dance routine performed by the Germantown Neighborhood Center Cheerleaders, who are instructed by Erica Limoncelli of Squantum.

The highlight of the ceremonies came when a front-end loader rode onto the grass carrying the oversized check from State Street. "I had to catch my breath, it was so exciting," Ann Marie Hanley remarked.

Ralph Yohe, president of the South Shore YMCA, which has partnered with the neighborhood center and runs the organizational aspects of the program, called the event "a real partnership" among such groups as the YMCA, the center, the city, the School Department, and private groups such as State Street, adding that it was just the natural growth of already strong relationships. "The Germantown neighborhood is a special place, where people are always willing to help each other out, and we're very proud to be involved," Yohe said.

An involvement which Hanley was quick to add was vital to the neighborhood. "Without the YMCA, there would be no neighborhood center," said Hanley.

THE GERMANTOWN Neighborhood Cheerleaders performed cheers and dance routines Thursday as part of a big neighborhood thank-you to State Street Corporation, which is donating $250,000 to build a new neighborhood center as part of its $1.8 million worldwide Millennium Gift program. From front row left are: Shari Murray, Heidi Van, Lauren Adams, Shannon Carey, and Sarah Constable. From back row left are: Michelle O'Leary and Elizabeth Gruchy.

During his remarks, State Street's Bowman discussed the 10 other recipients of the Millennium Gift, which include, among others, $300,000 for a demonstration food kitchen at Boston Medical Center, $250,000 for a Habitat for Humanity project in Kansas City, $50,000 to train over 500 Red Cross workers in Hong Kong; and $50,000 to underwrite Project Orbis' three-week mission to provide medical training and conduct blindness-curing operations in China.

Elizabeth Harrington, principal planner for the city's Planning Department, explained that plans for the Germantown Neighborhood Center would be "integrated" into the $30 million plus Hope VI Project application, awaiting HUD notification in September. Despite that connection, Harrington sees no problem with the neighborhood center moving forward, Hope VI or no. "This project has a momentum of its own," Harrington said.

The Germantown section of Quincy has the lowest per capita income in the city and contains 1,000 units of public housing. According to recent statistics, single mothers head 65 percent of households.

Affordable Homebuying Programs Offered By MHFA

As the homebuying season heats up, prospective homebuyers in Quincy and surrounding communities may be able to take advantage of the affordable home purchase programs available from the Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency (MHFA), the Commonwealth's affordable housing bank.

That was the message delivered by local and state officials who gathered recently at Quincy City Hall. Mayor James Sheets was joined by local lenders, homebuyer counseling agencies, other local officials, and MHFA Executive Director Steven Pierce to outline MHFA's lending programs available to help low and moderate income Quincy residents realize the American dream of homeownership.

"Quincy has always been on the cutting edge in the creative use of MHFA funding," said Sheets. "I strongly urge all those people eager to share in the pride of owning their own home to learn more about all the great MHFA programs."

Sheets emphasized the importance of homeownership as a way to strengthen the city's neighborhoods. "There is no one more energized and committed than the first-time homebuyer," Sheets said.

Since it began operations in 1970, MHFA has invested over $42 million in financing for low and moderate income first-time homebuyers in Quincy. The agency has also provided over $8 million in funding for 334 units of rental housing in 4 multi-family housing developments located in the city.

Pierce said it was particularly important for people to be aware of the housing assistance programs provided by the Commonwealth as the summer home-buying season moves into high gear. "As the state's affordable housing bank, MHFA has developed programs designed to meet the needs of young working couples, single parents, and the range of others seeking to buy their first home," said Pierce. "We especially focus on the needs of city residents to help them get into the homes that will assist in building strong, vital neighborhoods."

MHFA's first-time mortgage funds are loaned through participating lenders on a first-come, first-serve basis to buyers who have signed a Purchase and Sale Agreement or an Offer to Purchase. Borrowers must meet regional income guidelines and properties must meet federally established price limits. To be approved for a three percent downpayment option, potential buyers must complete MHFA's Homebuyer Counseling Program before their home purchase.

While the average 30-year conventional mortgage interest rate has risen to 8.52 percent — its highest level in five years — MHFA is offering rates as low as 7.65 percent for eligible first-time homebuyers. A loan of $150,000 with a market interest rate of 8.50 percent would cost a homeowner $1,153.37 per month. The same loan with an MHFA rate of 7.99 percent would cost the homeowner only $1,099.60 per month, a savings of $53.77 per month. Over 30 years, the homeowner would save $19,356 by using MHFA financing.

MHFA currently offers 30-year fixed rates of 7.99 percent with zero points, 7.80 percent with one point, and 7.65 percent with two points.

Pierce pointed out that MHFA programs also reach out to those who can afford a home mortgage but who have not been able to save enough money for the up-front costs of buying a home. He noted there are also programs that provide funding assistance to current homeowners for improvements and necessary repairs and for people in rural communities who are striving to own a home.

"MHFA has worked to make it easier to coordinate with city homeownership program efforts," said Pierce. "We've simplified and streamlined the mortgage application process while continuing to offer lower interest rates, three percent downpayment options, flexible underwriting ratios, and statewide availability of mortgage funds throughout the calendar year. All of these improvements are designed to make it easier for low and moderate income peoples to become homeowners in Massachusetts."

The FreshRate Program is the agency's newest statewide affordable housing program. It offers up to four percent of the loan amount for downpayment and closing cost assistance in the purchase of a 1-4 family home. The program is not restricted to first-time homebuyers and features 30-year fixed rate loans at Federal Housing Administration (FHA), Veterans Administration (VA), and Rural Housing Services (RHS) maximum mortgage limits, and expanded MHFA income limits which are (for the Boston Market Area) $75,000 for a 1-2 person household and $86,000 for three or more persons.

To assist people as they purchase a home, MHFA's Homebuyer Counseling Program offers homebuying help and guidance through community based organizations. These organizations provide homebuyer counseling including discussion of the mortgage application process; downpayment and closing cost requirements; credit evaluation; making an offer to purchase; home inspections; and post-purchase issues. All borrowers wishing to purchase a two, three, or four-family residence, and those with downpayments of less than 5 percent, must complete an approved counseling class to be eligible for MHFA financing.

of six, with long-term exposure often causing permanent learning disabilities and brain damage. Although lead paint was banned in 1978, over 5,300 children have been diagnosed with lead paint poisoning since 1990. It is estimated that one million homes in Massachusetts still contain lead paint.

MHFA's Get the Lead Out Program funding is available for one, two, three, or four-family structures for up to 20 years, with a minimum of five years.

To qualify for the program, total household income may not exceed $46,000 for one-to-two-person families and $52,000 for households of three or more people.

The Homeowner Septic Repair Loan Program offers below-market interest rates to eligible homeowners, condominium owners, and condominium associations with failed sewage disposal systems statewide under the Commonwealth's Title 5 requirements.

Homeowner septic repair loans are available at interest rates of zero percent, three percent, and five percent depending on income guidelines for loans ranging in size from $1,000 to a maximum of $25,000. Loan terms range from three to 20 years and must be paid in full upon sale, refinancing, or transfer of the property.

The septic repair program is the result of the combined efforts of the MHFA, the Massachusetts Executive Office for Administration and Finance, and the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). There are 34 participating lenders in the program.

To help spur the construction of new affordable homes, MHFA's Acquisition and Development Financing Loan Program assists small-scale homebuilders that may not be able to access conventional sources of construction financing.

Last year MHFA announced the establishment of a $1,000,000 fund called "The Habitat Project." Money from this fund is loaned to Habitat for Humanity affiliates throughout the Commonwealth to assist them with the construction of affordable housing.

The first loan commitment was made to the South Shore Habitat for Humanity Chapter for $200,000. To date, Habitat for Humanity International has built 70,000 houses around the world, providing more than 350,000 people with safe, decent, affordable shelter.

MHFA is the leading provider of affordable housing in Massachusetts. Since 1970, the agency has invested nearly $6 billion across the state helping tens of thousands of low and moderate income people buy their first homes, make home improvements, or rent affordable apartments.

For more information on MHFA's homeownership programs, call the Single Family Consumer Line at (617) 854-1020 or access the agency's web site at <http://www.mhfa.com>.

Morrisette Bats Burn Out

By CHRIS POISSON

A week ago, the Morrisette American Legion baseball team showcased its holiday fireworks display by pounding out a season-high 20 hits in a 13-1 rout of Braintree.

It has come up with nothing but duds since.

Sunday night, Morrisette managed only three hits as it fell to Weymouth, 3-1, in 10 innings, wasting a sensational pitching performance by Keith Doherty.

The loss was the third straight, dropping Morrisette's record to 8-5 with seven games left in the season. After a two-day break for the Fourth of July, Morrisette played Canton yesterday (Wednesday) and it takes on rival Quincy today (Thursday) at 8 p.m.

Morrisette, even with its Red Sox-like offense, hung around thanks to the left arm of Doherty, who went all 10 innings, allowing three runs on six hits with 16 strikeouts.

By the 10th, it was clear he had no more after he walked the first two men, the No. 8 and 9 hitters. After getting the next batter to ground into a fielder's choice, Dan McMann tattooed him for the game-winner, a two-run double that snapped a 1-1 tie.

Morrisette had its chances to steal a win. In the bottom of the seventh, it tied the game when the Weymouth right fielder dropped Pat Bregoli's (2 for 4) fly ball with one out, allowing Doherty (walk, stolen base) to score from second. On the ensuing pitch, Bregoli, who reached third on the error, was tagged out at home as Morrisette botched a squeeze attempt. The batter then grounded to second to send the game into extra innings.

The real heartbreaker came in the bottom of the ninth when Morrisette loaded the bases with one out. But Drew Locke, who came on in relief in the seventh, escaped the jam by getting the next batter to bounce into a 1-2-3 double play on a 3-1 count.

Weymouth took a 1-0 lead in the second inning by touching up Doherty for a single and double with two outs.

In previous action, Morrisette gave up three unearned runs in Saturday's 3-2 loss to Milton in extra innings. Milton scored the game-winning run on a throwing error in the eighth inning.

Milton went up 2-0 in the fifth, scoring both runs on wild pitches. Joe Flynn got the start and went 5 2/3 innings, giving up just two hits and three walks while striking out seven. Rob Celata pitched two innings in relief.

Keith Doherty went 2 for 2 with two doubles and Brian O'Hanley went 2 for 4. Bregoli and Chris Doherty each had RBI singles.

Against Braintree Friday, Morrisette again squeezed out only three hits in a 4-1 loss. T.J. Bell tossed six innings, giving up four runs on nine hits with seven strikeouts. John Gavin collected two of the three hits and Flynn had the other. Chris Doherty drove in the run with a sacrifice fly in the sixth.

In the 13-1 win over Braintree last Thursday, Dan O'Toole (2 for 3, 5 RBI) belted a grand slam in the first inning to power the offense. Bregoli and Gavin each had three hits and two RBI. O'Hanley stroked a two-run double and Adam Goodrich gathered three hits.

Matt McCann went the distance to pick up the win. The only run he gave up was a homer to Nick Angelini in the second inning.

Last Wednesday, Morrisette put together a four-run fifth inning against Braintree ace Mike Crane to take a 5-2 win. Celata notched the victory by giving up one run in 5 2/3 innings.

Derbes Family Honored By Quincy High School

The Friends of Quincy High School Alumni Association recently selected the Derbes family as its QHS Alumni Family of the Month.

The family was chosen for its longtime community involvement and its strong connection to Quincy High School: nine family members, including five brothers, are all QHS graduates.

Founded in 1957 by the family, Derbes Bros., Inc., and Derbes Automotive started out with one 1938 one-ton dump truck, one 1934 Chevy pickup truck, one 1/2-ton roller, and hand tools. 43 years later, they are now the South Shore's largest road and paving contractor with inventory of $2 million in heavy highway road building equipment.

While at QHS, eldest brother Robert participated in football and baseball. He also attended night classes at South Shore School of Refrigeration and Air Conditioning. After graduation he attended Wentworth Institute for estimate and plan reading. He is the treasurer of QH/NQH Football Hall of Fame and was the 1997 Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year.

Richard "Hus" Derbes was an all-star in both football and track and was offered a full football scholarship to Indiana University. However, he chose to attend Northeastern University and also Wentworth Institute for engineering. He spent two years as a backfield coach for a semi-pro team, the Varsity Club.

Frank Derbes graduated from "Quincy Trade" in 1960 specializing in Automotive and Electronic Theory. As was Derbes tradition, Frank played QHS football. After graduation he was drafted and served in Vietnam, attached to the 82nd Airborne.

Fourteen years later, in 1974, Kimal Derbes became the last of the five brothers to graduate from QHS. Once again there was a Derbes on the QHS football team. In fact, Kimal had a 67-yard punt against Weymouth and was offered a full scholarship to West Point as a punter and place-kicker. However, he attended Ferrum in Virginia on a football scholarship and later attended the Dallas Cowboys camp for try-outs. He played semi-pro for the Plymouth Rocks.

DPW Fishing Tournament July 15 Benefits Nancy Gorman

The city's Department of Public Works (DPW) will hold its fifth annual "Great Fishing Fiasco" Saturday, July 15, leaving from the Quincy Yacht Club.

A portion of this year's proceeds will benefit Quincy native and 1981 North Quincy High School graduate Nancy Gorman, who has battled with Quadriplegia CP since birth and needs to raise funds to pay for her highly trained assistance dog Daisy.

A story on Nancy and Daisy appeared in the June 15th issue of The Quincy Sun.

In the past the fishing tournament, which is open to all who register, has raised between $1000 and $1500 and donated to such causes as the Kevin Moore Scholarship Fund and the battle

Tournament start time is 7 a.m. and finishes with a 2 p.m. weigh-in to determine $250, $150, and $100 prize winners.

A check presentation to Gorman and a cookout for all participants and family follows immediately after the tournament.

Entry fee is $20 per person and covers the cost of the cookout and a T-shirt. Those registering the day of the event will not be able to receive T-shirts.

Tournament organizers are DPW Water Distribution Supervisor Brian Carlisle and DPW Timekeeper Thomas Travis.

For more information, or to register for the tournament, call 376-1914 and ask for Thomas Travis or leave a message.

Babe Ruth Baseball

Golden Print ended its regular season by beating Quincy Fire, 11-4, in recent Babe Ruth action.

Catcher Justin Thorley and first baseman Mike McLaughlin each scored three runs. Matt Germain smacked two singles and scored two runs.

Fire opened the game with four runs on singles by Anthony Boyle, Chris Marinelli and Jeff Bossart. Print came back on hits by Steve Pizzi and winning pitcher Paul McAttee to tie the score at 4.

Singles in the second inning by Germain, Thorley and Matt McNeil put Print ahead by three and third-inning hits by Ed Laura and Germain added two more runs.

McAttee gave up only five hits and two walks while fanning seven in the win. Kevin Holleran played well in left field for Fire.

Golden Print — 13 Quincy Police — 5

Matt Germain, Ryan Feldhoff and Mike McLaughlin each had two hits and scored three runs. Josh Hersey, Steve Pizzi and Matt McNeil also had two hits each. Germain shined in center field and Pizzi was solid at shortstop.

For Police, John Folino hit a triple and Frank McKenna a double.

Golden Print — 14 Barry's Deli — 1

Stephen Pizzi picked up the win, allowing five hits while walking two and striking out seven. Matt Germain went 3 for 3 and scored four runs. Mike McLaughlin, Justin Thorley, Adam O'Hara and Jeff Green all had two hits. Josh Hersey stroked a single and scored three runs.

For Barry's Deli, Mookie DeAngelo had an R31 double that scored Brian Lee for its only run. Dean Sandonato, Chris Villanueva and Bill Cosgrove added singles.

Granite Ready To Rock Eastern Football League

By CHRIS POISSON

Last year when the Quincy Granite was looking to enter into a league, the expansion team had its sight set on the well-established Eastern Football League.

For co-founders Sean Halpin and David Harris, landing in one of the nation's top semi-professional football leagues would've been like eating Oreos instead of Hydrox, or drinking Mountain Dew instead of Mountain Mania.

But the EFL's Randolph Oilers feared that Quincy's entry would take away some of its players and fan support, so they voted against Quincy stating it would be violating the league's 25-mile radius territorial right.

Well, it took a little longer than expected, but after one season in the New England Football League, Quincy is finally a member of the EFL. Look out Randolph.

"The level of play in the EFL is head and shoulders above the NEFL," said 44-year-old place kicker Paul Doherty. "The EFL is the league we want to be in."

"It's an upgrade certainly," said coach Ken McPhee. "Week in, week out, it's going to be tough. There's much more talent from top to bottom. I think the best teams in the other league (NEFL) could compete in this league."

Quincy, one of the top teams in the NEFL last season, will compete in the EFL. It returns most of the players from a year ago and has sprinkled in some new talent. Also, there is no limit on the roster size in the EFL so the Granite should have more depth than last year.

"The nucleus is the same," McPhee said. "We've added some skilled kids and some young kids. But the nucleus of the team is back and that's important. In this league, continuity makes a big difference."

The defense, which allowed only 10.7 points per game last season, will once again be asked to lead the team. McPhee said his "talented" secondary — Louis Boullard, Felipe Ogaldez, Derrick Epps, John Skiebekis, Troy Parks, John Murphy — will be the strength.

The defensive line, led by Al Casey and Jason Vega, should pressure the quarterback, and Ryan Craig, one of the league's top linebackers, will anchor the middle of the defense along with Halpin.

Offensively, the Granite is strong at the skilled positions but shaky on the offensive line. If the line can hold up, Quincy should be able to move the chains and punch the ball into the end zone for six points.

"The question mark is the offensive line," McPhee said. "But we have the ingredients so we'll see what happens."

In the backfield Quincy is loaded with bodies. Bernard Lynch, Will Felix, Jackson Vetiach, Greg Harty and Ogaldez should all see action. Farouk Brown, a bruising 5-foot-11-inch, 250-pound fullback out of Boston College, will start with Will Epps splitting the duties.

"Do we have a talented backfield? Without question," McPhee said. "Probably the most talented group of kids I have ever had on the field."

Liam Higgins returns as the starting quarterback and he has some targets to throw to in wide outs Bill MacDougall, Charlie McCall, Matt Fratarillo, Epps, Parks and tight end Jeff Powers. If Higgins is unable to play for some reason, Quincy has a capable backup in JR Rendle who played well in a couple of starts last year.

"We want to do well in this league," said McPhee about his team's goals. "We want to be representative of a semi-pro football team in this league. We have to go out and bang with people for the entire season. If we do that, I think we'll be all right. I really do. I have a good feeling about this group."

There's one X-factor that may hurt — the back-to-back byes in weeks 5 (Aug. 5) and 6 (Aug. 12).

"Awful, awful, awful," McPhee said. "We're the only team in the league that has that."

Actually, the Hyannis Hurricanes also have the misfortune of a two-week hiatus. When informed of the Hurricanes' schedule, McPhee said, "It's still awful."

"It hurts you for a couple of reasons," he said. "Number one, your fan base starts to get used to not being where you want them, and that's at the stadium. Number two, you have guys in the middle of the season not playing. These guys only have so many hits in them and you don't want them hitting each other. I really don't like bye weeks."

Quincy, though, knows the schedule is something it can't control so it won't pay much attention to it, except for the teams it's playing. And some of those teams should turn into potential rivals.

"Our rivalries should be Randolph, Charlestown and the Boston Cowboys," McPhee said. "Randolph has to be. They're going to bring their fans and we're going to bring our fans. I think it will be a good rivalry. I can't wait."

Friday, Sept. 9 at 8 p.m. has been circled on the calendar — look out Randolph.

Steve Sullivan Grand Slam Powers Nationals, Wins MVP

Steve Sullivan crushed a mammoth grand slam to power the National League over the American League in the recent Junior League All-Star game at a packed McCoy Field.

Sullivan's heroics earned him the MVP award for the National League. Ray Marchand pitched two scoreless innings to picked up the win.

Drew Loud's defensive skills earned him MVP honors for the American League. He also belted two doubles and scored two runs. Zack Eaton pitched the final inning without allowing a hit.

In the Home Run Derby, Eaton hit six round trippers to capture the crown. Sullivan finished second and Loud was a finalist.

SENSING TROUBLE

As their name implies, the sensors in today's vehicles function as sensing devices that provide the computer with information such as the chemical content of exhaust gases and speed rotation, among other data. Thus, sensors act as input devices for the computer. The coolant sensor serves a similar function to the carburetor choke. It enriches the mixture when cold and leans the mixture when hot. In the event that a coolant sensor goes bad, it can adversely affect the air-fuel ratio and ignition timing by not accurately informing the computer of the engine operating temperature. When performance problems crop up, the coolant sensor is one of the sensors the technician will look at as the possible culprit. Our ASE Certified service technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO will do their part in making sure your car is properly maintained for maximum performance and efficiency. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550), we look forward to meeting you and to giving your car the same level of personal attention we give our own. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." We're your local source for propane for grills, motor homes and converted vehicles.

Old Timers Recall Sox' 1918 Champs, Babe Ruth And Local Big Leaguers

From John Rudderham to Dick Donovan

By TOM HENSHAW

The recent "baseball night" at the Quincy Historical Society stirred memories for Ed Spargo, one of the few fans who can remember 1918, the year the Sox last won the World Series, and John Noonan, who saw his first Sox game in 1927.

Spargo, 92, was 10 years old when the Red Sox beat the Chicago Cubs, four games to two, for the title in that war-shortened season, and Noonan, who just turned 80, is the longtime director of the Quincy Council on Aging.

The baseball night at the Adams Academy headquarters of the Historical Society featured a talk by Lee Springer, co-author of the book "The Year the Red Sox Won the Pennant."

As an added attraction, Society Director Ed Fitzgerald conducted a contest to see who could "name as many major leaguers as you can who had any sort of a Quincy connection."

Spargo won, barely edging out Noonan.

Included in Spargo's list were Quincy natives like Dick Donovan, who pitched 15 years in The Show, Quincy residents like Derek Lowe, who hurls currently for the Red Sox, and big leaguers who played in Quincy in the twilight of their careers.

Quincy natives:

- Dick Donovan, who pitched and won two World Series games for the Chicago White Sox against the Los Angeles Dodgers in 1959 and won 122 games in all.

- "I had the honor of interviewing Dick Donovan on Quincy Cable TV about his career," said Noonan. "He hit 15 home runs during his career, which was pretty good for a pitcher in those days."

- Ted Olson, who played three years in the late '30s for the Red Sox, winning one and losing one of a total of 18 games.

- Bill Ferrazzi (not the former police chief), who got into three games for the Philadelphia Athletics, forerunner of the Oakland A's, in 1935 with a 1-2 record.

- Pete Varney, who caught 69 games for the White Sox and Atlanta Braves from 1973 to 1976 with a batting average of .247.

- Foster Pirie (call me "Babe") Ganzel, who hit .311 for the Washington Senators while patrolling the outfield in 1927-28.

- John Rudderham, who roamed the outfield for the Boston team in the Union Association for one game in 1884. Only Ed Spargo would recall the major league Union Association, let alone Rudderham.

Quincy residents, in addition to Derek Lowe:

- Bill Vargas, who pitched 15 games for the Boston Braves (remember them?) in 1926-27.

- Steve White, who pitched 6 2/3 innings in four games for the Senators and Braves in 1912.

- Sam Mele, the Sox right fielder alongside Ted Williams and Dom DiMaggio, and later managed the Minnesota Twins to the American League pennant.

- Charlie Ganzel, Babe's father, who caught for Boston's National League team during a 14-year career that began with St. Paul of the Union Association.

- Tim Naehring, the recent Red Sox infielder whose promising career was cut short by injury.

Big leaguers who played in Quincy:

- Jim Lonborg, the Red Sox pitcher in the 1967 season whose career was hobbled by a skiing injury. He later became a Scituate dentist and played against many South Shore teams at Adams Field.

- Blondie Ryan, who graduated from Holy Cross and played third base for the Fore River team in the New England League in the '30s before joining the New York Giants and Yankees as well as the White Sox and the Philadelphia Phillies.

"If you count the major leaguers who worked at the Fore River shipyard and played baseball for the Fore River team," added Noonan, "Shanty Hogan, Rabbit Maranville, Deacon Danny MacFayden and Hank Gowdy of the Braves would be included as local ties during the first World War."

Noonan also recalled Elbie Fletcher, the old Braves and Pittsburgh Pirates first baseman, who played many games in Quincy while growing up in his native Milton.

Some other major leaguers who undoubtedly played games in Quincy included:

- Dan Howley, the light hitting (.125) East Weymouth catcher who played for the Phillies and later managed the Cincinnati Reds for six years in 1927-32.

- Ezra Sutton of Braintree, whose career spanned the five years of the National Association (1871-75). He had a career average of .327 for Cleveland and Philadelphia teams.

- Jack Manning of Braintree, who played for Boston, Baltimore and Hartford in the National Association. He hit .282 as an infielder-outfielder and had a 17-17 record as a pitcher.

- Jack Cameron, Canadian-born but a resident of Braintree, who started the 1906 season with a Braintree semi-pro team and wound up that September playing the outfield for the Boston Nationals.

Noonan recalled his first encounter with big league baseball.

"My father took me to my first major league baseball game in 1927 to see the Red Sox versus the New York Yankees at Fenway Park in a doubleheader on a Sunday afternoon," he said.

"There were no lights then and the Sunday Blue Laws stated that game must be completed by 5 p.m. I had the thrill of seeing Babe Ruth in two games on one day for 50 cents. I later saw Ruth in 1935 when he finished his career with the Braves.

"I also remember attending a game between the famous House of David and Colored Giants teams at upper Merrymount Park way back years ago."

Noonan and Spargo had some good-natured fun involving the Sox famed Ted Williams.

"I saw Ted Williams hit his last home run at Fenway Park," recalled Noonan.

"My late wife and son Billy also saw that Ted Williams homer with about three million others who claim they were at Fenway that day," said Spargo.

"I recall the crowd of 10,000 gave Ted a standing O for 10 minutes but he refused to tip his cap. Today he regrets that he didn't."

Spargo had "a flood of bitter-sweet memories of our beloved and frustrating Red Sox" in that Series-winning season 82 years ago.

"Euphoria over the Red Sox triumph was dampened by the loss of thousands of American boys who sacrificed their lives 'to make the world safe for democracy' and countless millions of lives lost in the worst influenza epidemic in history," he said.

"The war-shortened season of 1918 was also marked by a players' strike for more money. You will find it incredible that the victorious Sox players received a paltry $890 and each member of the Cubs $535 as their shares of the series receipts — after deductions for war charities.

"The 1918 Sox were a strange aggregation under Manager Ed Barrow, a crew of banjo hitters with only Babe Ruth batting .300. But superior pitching and airtight fielding carried them to the series where pitchers Ruth and Carl Mays scintillated with two victories each and ERAs of 1.00 for Mays and 1.06 for the Babe.

"In sharp contrast to today when a club usually uses three pitchers per game, every Sox starter in the series went the distance, except for one game when Joe Bush relieved winning pitcher Ruth in the ninth inning.

"The bombshell that ended the Sox dynasty and started a most remarkable Yankee domination came after the scandal-scared 1919 season when owner Harry Frazee ruined a championship club by selling first Babe Ruth and Carl Mays, and later pitchers Waite Hoyt, Joe Bush, Herb Pennock, Sad Sam Jones and George Pipgras and catcher Wally Schang to the 'damn Yankees.'

"Sad to relate, the 1918 championship ended the glory days for our Sox, who had qualified for five World Series and, believe it or not, had won all five.

"A World Series championship was registered in 1903, when they were called the Boston Pilgrims. Until club owner John I. Taylor of the Boston Globe's Taylor family, changed the name to the Red Sox the following year.

"The Sox then rattled off four pennants in seven years (1912, 1915, 1916 and 1918) and triumphed in all four World Series.

"And 82 years later, we're still yearning for another world's championship flag."

Builders Licensing Summer Course

The Builders Association of Greater Boston announces the next Builders Licensing Course will begin Monday, July 10 at its Quincy location, 700 Congress St.

Classes held each evening from 7 to 10 p.m. and continue for seven weeks with a mock exam given during the last class. Certificates issued upon completion of course.

The next state exam is Sept. 9. Deadline to register for the exam is Aug. 11. Contact the Board of Building Regulations & Standards at (617) 727-7535 for license eligibility requirements.

Summer's Here: Better Safe Than Sorry

By JOANNE GOLBURGH, NP

The smiles on the faces of your children can only mean one thing: school's out for summer. Kids have more free time on their hands to play outside in pools, parks, fields and streets. Exercising certain precautions will help keep your kids safe and healthy.

Below I speak of some common culprits for summer injury or illness and how to combat them:

Sun

The American Academy of Pediatrics (AAP) and most dermatologists recommend the liberal use of sunscreen containing a Sun Protection Factor (SPF) of 30. There is no benefit of using an SPF higher than 30. Sunscreens are safe for use over the age of 6 months, and can be used minimally in small areas of the body for infants under 6 months old.

Sunscreen should be applied a half hour before exposure to the sun so it can be absorbed by the skin. It should also be re-applied after swimming (even if the sunscreen claims its water-proof), and sweating. Don't forget to use sunscreen on hazy as well as sunny days, as the sun's ultraviolet rays are powerful. The use of sunglasses and hats are also recommended.

Bicycles, In-line Skates

Riding a bike or using in-line skates are both extremely popular among children, and even more so during the summer. The same precaution applies to both: wear a helmet. Some statistics indicate that 50 percent or more of all bicycle riders, especially the 10-16 age group, don't regularly use a helmet, and that's asking for trouble.

Most of my patients under the age of 12 usually wear a helmet while bicycling but once they reach middle school age and beyond they say peer pressure is the reason they no longer wear one.

I also recommend the use of elbow pads, knee pads and wrist guards, as wrist fractures are the most common injury suffered by skaters.

Heat

Even with young children and infants, increasing fluid intake, particularly water, is the best medicine against the heat. Stay indoors during the sun's peak hours of 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., especially on hot and humid days.

Insects

In general, use of repellents, such as Skintastic and Skee-daddle that contain Deet concentration of less than 10%, are safe and effective for children against black flies and mosquitos. They can also repel deer ticks that can cause Lyme disease. Ticks are usually found in tall, grassy areas and the woods, and it's best to wear long pants tucked into socks, a long-sleeved shirt, shoes and a hat when in known tick-infested areas.

Insects like bees, hornets and wasps sting; the best way to treat the bite is to apply ice immediately on the affected area and to administer a dose of oral Benadryl. If the swelling from the sting begins to spread and hives or respiratory distress develop, you should call 911 or visit the Emergency Room immediately.

Pools, Swimming Spots

Most water accidents occur in pools. Extreme caution needs to be taken to ensure that a young child does not have access to a pool. Children should not be left unattended in a pool area. The AAP suggests that swimming lessons before the age of 4 may give a child a false sense of security regarding his ability to swim. It is, however, recommended that older children learn to swim.

Mark C. Jaehnig D.C.

WHAT IS A SLIPPED DISC?

The term "slipped disc" has been used commonly, by doctors and patients alike, to generally describe an injury to one of the 23 "jelly-like" shock absorbers found between each of the bones or vertebrae of the spine. These intervertebral discs are ligaments which actually consist of a "jelly-like" middle surrounded by rings of cartilage. While these discs do not actually "slip" from between the spinal bones, they can be worn, compressed, bulged, or ruptured causing pressure on the adjacent spinal nerves. It is this bulged or ruptured disc that pressures or "pinches" the nerve which actually causes the severe back and/or leg pain that may result. Often times, muscle spasms will accompany a disc injury as the body attempts to stabilize or splint the damaged lower back or neck.

While the intervertebral discs may lose some of their height and resiliency and dry out slightly over the years, the final straw of a disc injury may be a sudden twist or slip, an improper lift, or a seemingly minor accident.

Chiropractors are well qualified in the prevention and/or treatment of disc injuries and often employ the modern technology of MRI or Catscan to ensure accurate diagnosis. Chiropractors use a drugless, non-surgical approach which may include manipulation, forms of therapy, proper exercise and bed rest.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment please call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-4400.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"
Will a hearing aid correct my loss right away?

Not! You will notice an immediate difference in volume and some sounds will be clearer but it takes time to re-learn how to hear with a hearing aid. Your maximum potential may not be reached for a full year. Hearing is a learned process, the brain needs to store information received from the ear. When you first get a hearing aid, it is foreign to the brain. The brain wants to hear and will learn to the best of its ability, if you give it enough practice. Try to be patient, practice, and keep in touch with your Hearing Instrument Specialist for adjustments and fine tuning. Don't wait too long to get help. The longer you wait, the more difficult it is for the brain to re-learn how to hear again. This is a major reason why a hearing aid can end up in a desk drawer instead of an ear. There are other reasons, most of which can be overcome if your Specialist is dedicated to your success! If you carefully select your Specialist, he or she will carefully select your hearing instrument.

Free Tree-Identification Guide Book Available

"What Tree Is That?", a pocket guide for identifying trees, is available free-of-charge from The National Arbor Day Foundation.

The 72-page guide will help you identify 135 different trees found in the eastern and central U.S.

Well-known trees included: oaks, maples, spruces, and pines. Also species such as horsechestnut and mockernut hickory, sassafras and shadbush, persimmon and pawpaw and pagodaree and pecan.

Dozens of drawings illustrate the trees' leaves or needles and acorns, berries, seed pods, cones, etc. "What Tree Is That?" is organized to make it easy to identify trees in a simple step-by-step fashion.

"Helping people enjoy and appreciate trees is central to the educational mission of the Arbor Day Foundation," said John Rosenow, the Foundation's president. "Being able to identify trees is important to knowing how to care for them and how to plant the right tree in the right place."

To obtain your free tree ID guide, send your name and address to "What Tree Is That?", The National Arbor Day Foundation, Nebraska City, NE 68410.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Ever wonder why people will remain loyal to one product or one firm over another? We feel that the biggest reason is service...There still remains a vast difference in the quality of the services offered by different firms. We are well aware that the public knows this, and here at Deware, each family is considered special. Our service is always personalized, NEVER ROUTINE. Your wishes and needs are always first in our thoughts and whatever they may be, you can depend upon us to give them our closest attention.

A quote by Calvin Coolidge comes to mind: "No enterprise can exist for itself alone. It ministers to some great need; it performs some great service, not for itself, but for others; or failing therein, it ceases to be profitable and ceases to exist."

If you should wish any additional information regarding our service, please contact us anytime...This, of course, is without cost or obligation...

Born in Portland, Maine, he was raised and educated in Quincy, and lived there for many years. He was a resident of New England Sinai Hospital in Stoughton for the past 12 years.

He is survived by his parents, Thomas "Knobby" Walsh and Mary J. (Coletti)

Walsh, both of Quincy; a sister, Cheryl Walsh Barter of Quincy; two nephews, Michael Barter and Shawn Barter, both of Quincy; and many aunts, uncles and cousins.

Burial was private.

Funeral arrangements were by Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 326 Copeland St.

Donations may be made to the New England Sinai Hospital, 150 York St., Stoughton 02072.

Jo-Ann M. Clapp, 56

Worked At The Former Bargain Center

A funeral Mass for Jo-Ann M. (O'Shaughnessy) Clapp, 56, of Quincy, who worked at the former Bargain Center in Quincy Square for more than 20 years, will be celebrated today (Thursday) in St. Jerome's Church.

Mrs. Clapp died July 1 at Quincy Medical Center after a long illness.

After working at the Bargain Center, she was employed at Bradlee's and Shaw's Supermarket.

She enjoyed roller skating and was a member of the Skating Club at the Roll-Land Skating Rink in Norwood.

Born in North Weymouth, she was raised and educated in North Weymouth. She lived in North Quincy for 22 years.

She is survived by her husband, Roger W. Clapp; her parents, John and Kay (McArdle) O'Shaughnessy of North Quincy; three brothers, Jack O'Shaughnessy of Norwell, Robert O'Shaughnessy of Marshfield and Neil O'Shaughnessy of Halifax; three sisters, Kathy Rawdon of Braintree, Denise Mazzola of Kingston and Sheila Walter of Colorado; and many nieces and nephews.

Visiting hours were scheduled from 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday at the McDonald Funeral Home, 40 Sea St., North Weymouth.

Donations may be made to the American Leukemia Society, 495 Old Connecticut Path, Suite 220, Framingham, MA 01701.

Blood Pressure Clinic

Blood pressure clinics are offered at 10 a.m. on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at Hancock park Adult Day Health Center (part of Hancock Park Rehabilitation and Nursing Center) located at 164 Parkway, Quincy.

The public is welcome to a free blood pressure check by a nurse from Managed Health Care Systems.

Early Retirement? Think Twice!

By LAURIE ZASTROW

If you are married, have been the primary wage earner in your family, and are thinking about filing for early retirement, there are some things you should consider.

Most people know they can collect reduced Social Security retirement benefits as early as age 62. However, most people don't know that collecting Social Security before their full retirement age can reduce the benefit amounts paid to their survivors.

Consider the following couple -- Tom was born in 1938 and has just turned 62. His wife, Shirley, has worked, but Tom has been the primary wage earner in the family. Tom is thinking about when he should start collecting Social Security.

Social Security will compute a "basic benefit" for Tom. His basic benefit depends on how much he has earned over his lifetime. If Tom waits until his full retirement age to collect Social Security, he will receive 100 percent of his basic benefit every month for the rest of his life. For someone born in 1938, such as Tom, the full retirement age is 65 years and 2 months.

If Tom collects Social Security before this age, his monthly benefit will be reduced. For example, if he collects Social Security starting at age 62, his monthly benefit amount will be about 79 percent of his basic benefit.

Tom's choice of when to start receiving Social Security not only affects how much he gets each month, but also affects how much Shirley will get from Social Security if Tom dies before she does. When Tom dies, Social Security will pay Shirley a widow's benefit.

If Tom waits until his full retirement age to collect Social Security, Shirley's benefit will be 100 percent of Tom's basic benefit. If, however, Tom received early retirement benefits, her widow benefit will be lower. In general, the longer Tom waits to collect Social Security, the higher Shirley's widow's benefit will be.

According to Social Security, there are currently three million widows and widowers who have less income because they were married to people who filed for early retirement benefits.

A representative at your local Social Security office can talk with you and your spouse about your specific situation. When you are fully informed, you can make the decision that is right for both you and your family.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You feel ready to face up to a major change, although it might involve some risks. A once-dubious family member comes around and offers support and encouragement.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Move forward with your plans, despite discouraging words from those who underestimate the Bull's strong will. Your keen instincts will guide you well.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A misunderstanding is easily cleared up. Then go ahead and enjoy some fun and games this week. A Libra might have ideas that merit serious consideration for the future.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might feel as if you're in an emotional pressure cooker, but the situation is about to change in your favor. Take time out for some well-earned fun.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A shift in your workplace responsibilities creates resentment among some co-workers. Deal with it before it becomes a threat to your success on the job.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Expect some surprises in what you thought was one of your typically well-planned schedules. Deal with them, and then enjoy some light-hearted entertainment.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Be careful: What appears to be a solid financial opportunity might have some hidden risks attached. A hairy personal matter needs to be cleared up.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It's a good time to strengthen ties with family and friends. You might feel unsure about a recent, workplace decision, but time will prove you did the right thing.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Just when you thought your relationship was comfortable and even predictable, your partner or spouse could spring a potentially life-changing surprise on you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your usually generous self is overshadowed by your equally strong suspicious nature. You might be judging things too harshly. Keep an open mind.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Love and romance dominate the week. Married Aquarians enjoy domestic harmony, while singles could soon be welcoming overtures from loving Leos.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An old health problem recurs, but it is soon dealt with, leaving you eager to get back into the swing of things. A favorable travel period starts this week.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You have an independent spirit that resists being told what to do. But you're also wise enough to appreciate good advice.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

John Boucher President, COO At South Shore Savings

Arthur R. Connelly, chairman and chief executive officer of South Shore Savings Bank, announces the promotion of John C. Boucher of East Bridgewater to the newly created position of president and chief operating officer.

The move was voted unanimously by bank trustees and corporators at their annual meeting.

"Over the years, I have watched John develop into a superb banker in the true sense of the word," said Connelly. "He understands and appreciates the financial services industry, but he has the ability to view it through the lens of the community and the customer."

"It is that type of vision and leadership that will propel South Shore Savings Bank to new heights," Connelly added. "John Boucher is the perfect one to carry that torch going forward."

Boucher joined South Shore Savings Bank in 1973 and has held positions of increasing responsibility, most recently as executive vice president and chief operating officer, in charge of planning and policy implementation in the areas of retail banking, human resources, marketing and facilities.

In addition to acting as clerk of the bank's Board of Investment, he is a member of the executive committee and also serves on the Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) committee and the technology committee. He is also a corporator of South Shore Savings Bank.

Boucher is also involved in a number of civic and community activities. He is a director of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, a member and past chairman of the Weymouth Business Council, and an overseer of South Shore Hospital. In addition he serves as trustee of the Bridgewater State College Foundation, chairman of the Mass. Bankers Association Group Insurance Trust, and is a member of the Mass. Bankers Association Health Advisory Committee. He is a director and past president of the Weymouth High School Alumni Association. Boucher was president of his Weymouth High School graduating class.

He holds the Bachelor of Science degree from Boston State College and has also completed studies at the Massachusetts School for Financial Studies, the Graduate School of Banking at Fairfield University, and the Executive Development Program at Fairfield University. He is married and the father of three children.

Connelly, former president and CEO, is now chairman and CEO.

South Shore Savings Bank, which operates under an 1833 state charter, has offices in the South Shore communities of Quincy, East Bridgewater, Hanover, and Weymouth, including an Educational and Training Facility at Weymouth High School. The bank is a member of the FDIC/DIF.

Anthony Agnitti Receives Chamber's 'Spirit Award'

Anthony L. Agnitti, owner of Agnitti Insurance Agency Inc., of Quincy and Agnitti Property Management, was recently honored at the South Shore Chamber's annual breakfast.

Agnitti was presented with The Spirit of the South Shore award and recognized for his service as a Board of Director and active member of the South Shore Community.

"Tony is a tremendous positive example of a local business person working for a strong business while supporting his community, a good man to work with!"

ANTHONY AGNITTI

said Dean Rizzo, head of Community Development for the Chamber of Commerce.

Agnitti is on the Board of Horizon Bank, Chairman of the Advisory Board for the Salvation Army, past president of Quincy Kiwanis, Chairman of the Quincy Business Council and is involved in several charities in Quincy.

He sponsors Quincy youth teams and is active on several scholarship boards.

Agnitti's philosophy is: "We are all one and interrelated; citizens, businesses and communities. Service to the betterment of the community not only forges future leaders, but allows us as a great city to continue to have a high quality of life."

President's Wreath To Commemorate John Q. Adams Birthday

A wreath from the White House will be placed on the tomb of President John Quincy Adams in a ceremony Monday, July 10 at noon at United First Parish Church, also known as "Church of the Presidents," 1306 Hancock St., Quincy.

Center.

The wreath laying ceremony marks the 233rd birthday anniversary of the sixth President of the United States.

Commander Charles Wiseman of the Naval Reserve Center in Quincy will present the wreath on behalf of President Clinton. Mayor James Sheets, City Council President Paul Harold, Quincy Historical Society Director Edward Fitzgerald and Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister of the church, will offer brief remarks.

After the ceremony, a tour of the church and the crypt will be offered. The public is invited and admission is free.

Edward Callahan Joins Army Reserve

Edward J. Callahan has joined the U.S. Army Reserve under the Delayed Training Program.

Callahan, a 2000 graduate of Bridgewater-Raynham High School, will report to Fort Benning, Columbus, Ga., for basic training.

He is the son of Kathleen M. Houten of 86 Main St., Quincy, and Edward J. Callahan of 570 Plymouth St., Bridgewater.

He will have the opportunity to become eligible to receive more than $7,000 toward a college education, $20,000 for repayment of college loans, and a maximum $5,000 cash bonus.

After completion of basic military training, most soldiers receive advanced individual training in their career job specialty.

Jennifer Akoury On Dean's List

NQHS Senior Stay-Out Committee Awarded Prom Safety Grant

The North Quincy High School Senior Stay Out Committee was recently awarded a prom safety grant by Norfolk County District Atty. William Keating.

The after prom committee recently sponsored its fifth successful party.

The Norfolk County District Attorney's office helps sponsor safe, responsible and alcohol-free post prom activities through these grant funds.

"The Quincy community, particularly high school parents, should be commended for taking such a proactive approach to prom safety. I'm proud to be able to support the community's efforts in this small way," Keating said in announcing the grant.

"Congratulations again, and thank you for your support of programs like this that help keep our young people safe during prom and graduation season," he added.

Granite Rail Could Be Park By 2001

Agreement On Need To Fill Quarry

By CRAIG SALTERS

Neighbors who have been plagued down through the years with drinking, diving, drownings, and murders in the city's quarry area now have the support of others in their quest to have the Granite Rail Quarry filled in.

Agreement on that point came at a public meeting held by the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) Monday night at City Hall to discuss plans to build a "safe and accessible urban park" there by the spring of 2001.

The meeting, run by MDC General Counsel Thomas Gray, was contentious at times and there was by no means consensus as to the future role of the park or the details of its construction, but there was general agreement on one issue: the quarry, as is, is a safety hazard, responsible for many deaths over the years, and that hazard must be addressed.

"I think the quarry should be filled in," said Thomas Bonomi of Bates Ave, a lifelong Quincy resident whose family has strong roots in West Quincy. "It's the only real solution. I'm glad these groups (the MDC, the climbers, the preservationists, etc.) are finally working together."

Other residents echoed Bonomi's concerns and warned that, even if only a small amount of water were left in the quarry, there would still be the temptation for kids to jump.

The informal meeting, Gray said, was meant to gather feedback from residents and interest groups before the MDC goes before

Quincy Homestead Open But By Appointment Only

Quincy residents and tourists can now view the interior of the historic Dorothy Quincy Homestead after all --- but they'll have to make an appointment to take the tour.

The Quincy Sun disclosed last week that the house at Butler Road and Hancock Street where John Hancock wooed and won his Dorothy has been closed to visitors this season.

Not quite so, said Julie Guild, chairman of the Quincy Homestead for the Massachusetts Society of Colonial Dames, who operate the house under a 99-year lease from the MDC, the owners since 1904.

"We are now open for tours by appointment only," said Guild in a letter to the Sun. "This is stated on the sign by the gate with our by the gate with our

QHA Sets Rent Caps For Federal Housing

The Quincy Housing Authority held a special board meeting recently and approved a new flat rent structure for its federal housing developments to become effective October 1.

The new maximum caps for federal housing are: one bedroom, $564; two bedroom, $706; three bedroom, $883; and four bedroom, $1,036.

The move is intended to benefit tenants who now must pay 30 percent of their income on rent.

According to the QHA, roughly 180 Quincy residents live in federal housing developments.

Includes Water Quality Hotline, Locations, Tidal Charts, Plus Guide To City's Beaches Now Available

The Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission announces the first edition of "A Guide to Quincy's Beaches," which is available at public libraries, community centers, and various shops and restaurants across the city.

Leo Kelly, chairman of the commission, said the guide was a direct result of the commission's recent survey, which was returned by over 2,000 residents.

The survey, Kelly said, reflected a desire by residents for more information on the 27 miles of Quincy shoreline. "Residents want and need to be informed about our area," Kelly said.

In a letter which begins the guide, Mayor James Sheets said it was time for Quincy residents to once again make use of a cleaner, improved waterfront. "We want to encourage all the residents of our great city to return to the beaches," Sheets said. "There is no greater resource than our coastline and beaches."

The guide contains a list of shoreline beaches and their locations, available forms of transportation, and other pertinent information such as tidal charts, a map, and the city's 24-hour Water Quality Hotline which is (617) 376-1288.

Kelly said 5,000 copies of the guide, which also contain a brochure from the Quincy Health Department on the city's Beach Water Sampling program, were printed by the city's Data Processing Department.

Along with Wollaston Beach, which is considered a Quincy beach for the purposes of the guide although it is managed by the MDC, the beaches listed are: Nickerson Beach; Orchard Beach; Post Island Beach; Parkhurst Beach; Rhoda Beach; Edgewater Drive aid, and Michael Morad for their work on the Beach Guide Committee.

Other Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission members are: Doug Gutro, vice chairman; Monique Flaherty; P.J. Foley; Jane

Kelly thanked Mayor Sheets and the city's Park, Health, Data Processing, and Planning Departments for their efforts on the guide and singled out commission members Margaret Milne (secretary), Anne McDon-Gallahue; Bob Galligan; Joseph Joy; Bob Lescinskas, Sr.; David Murphy; Jack Nigro; and Bernie Reisberg.

Copies of the guide are available at the Quincy Sun office at 1372 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

ERIKA MOLLIGNANO is lucky enough to receive one of the first copies of A Guide to Quincy's Beaches, hand-delivered by Leo Kelly, chairman of the Beaches and Coastal Commission. Sheets: State Street's Carter 'Pivotal' In Saving Of Hospital

When Mayor James Sheets declared, "Marshall Carter and State Street are friends of Quincy" at recent ceremonies at the Snug Harbor School, the mayor had more in mind than just pleasing political rhetoric.

And he had more in mind, even, than the reason for the Snug Harbor ceremony: State Street's Millennium Gift of $250,000, presented by its chairman Carter, for the construction of a new Germantown Neighborhood Center.

What Sheets was talking about was the top story of 1999: the saving of Quincy Hospital, now Quincy Medical Center.

Sheets described for the audience a Spring 1999 phone conversation in which Carter, a member of the board of Boston Medical Center, reminded Sheets of that fact and asked if there was anything he could do to help the situation.

A few days later, Sheets said, the mayor called Carter and Carter arranged, and attended, a crucial first meeting between Sheets and Boston Medical Center CEO Elaine Ullian and Vice President Paul Drew. "And the rest, as they say, is history," said Sheets.

It was Quincy Hospital's affiliation with Boston Medical Center which made the federal, state, and local bailout possible and essentially saved the hospital.

"Marshall Carter played a pivotal role," said Sheets. "He's the one who put us together with Boston Medical Center and we owe him a debt of gratitude."

Sheets' remarks come as high praise, indeed, as Sheets is generally considered the single most important figure in the saving of the hospital.

State Street Corporation employs over 12,000 workers in the city of Quincy.

Faxon Park Tour Reveals History Of Stone Benches

At a recent tour of Faxon Park sponsored by the Park Department's Environmental Treasures of Quincy Program, Dave Murphy, program manager at the Park Department, explained the history of the stone benches scattered throughout the park.

The benches, Murphy said, were constructed in the 1930's by the Works Project Administration. The placement of the benches and the design of the park was influenced by the ideas of Frederick Law Olmstead, the first landscape architect in the United States.

In 1870 Olmstead wrote, "We want a ground to which people may easily go after their day's work is done, and where they may stroll for an hour, seeing, hearing, and feeling nothing of the bustle and jar of the streets, where they shall, in effect, find the city put far away from them.

"Practically, what we want most is a simple, broad open space of clean green-sward, with sufficient play of surface and a sufficient number of trees about it to supply a variety of light and shade."

To that end, one goal of the tour was for participants to experience the park as one of the few remaining oases in the city where residents can retreat from the noise and stress of urban life to enjoy the quiet of a natural environment.

The next walk in the Environmental Treasures of Quincy program will place Saturday, July 22, at 4 p.m. at Squantum Point Park. For more information, contact the Park Department at 376-1254.

Kolson, Cheney Eye Return

Two familiar political names may be back on the city election ballot next year.

Both Michael Cheney and Peter Kolson are thinking about a run for city councillor at-large.

"I'm looking at it seriously," says Kolson, who lost a bid for one of the three at-large seats last year. And in doing so, gave up the Ward 1 seat.

"I'm giving it some serious thought," says Cheney, who left the council three years ago because of family considerations that don't exist now.

An MBTA foreman, Cheney notes he will be retiring next June after 23 years.

"That would give me the time to return to the city council," he says.

Cheney served 13 years in the council as Ward 1 councillor and at-large and did a hitch as council president.

He now has a private consulting business and says one reason he would like to return to the council is that: "There is a lack of common sense in the present City Council on business issues."

Kolson, who held the Ward 1 seat for 10 years before giving it up and served four years as council president, says people have been asking him to consider running again.

He says he is watching the council meetings on cable TV.

"I like to keep abreast of things," he says.

Does his miss being there as part of it?

"Yes. I like to serve. I like to do things for people. I like to have a voice in decisions affecting the city. I really thought I did a pretty good job as a councillor."

Kolson was active in the community long before he got into politics.

He was president of the Adams Shore Association, vice president of the Germantown Neighborhood Association and vice president of the Quincy Citizens Association.

He also served on various committees including the city's original recycling committee and one that suc-

Free Smoking Cessation Programs At Medical Center

Bay State Community Services is offering free six-week smoking cessation programs at Quincy Medical Center.

Charlene McDonald, smoking cessation counselor, will lead the group through a series of six smoking cessation counseling sessions that provide education on methods for ceasing tobacco use, supportive counseling during the early quitting period, information and advice on nicotine replacement therapy and referral to individual smoking cessation counseling.

The next session, held on Tuesday evenings at 6 p.m. at the hospital, will begin on July 25 and continue through Aug. 29. Nicotine patches are available as part of this program free of charge along with counseling.

Call McDonald at (617) 472-6027, ext 140, to register or for more information.

cessfully fought off a proposed waste incinerator.

Whether Kolson and/or Cheney run remains to be seen.

HAROLD

An open council at-large seat would probably bring at least one of them back to the campaign trail.

One possibility of an open seat: if Paul Harold wins the Norfolk County Register of Deeds post and decides not to seek re-election to the council.

But there's nothing that says he can't hold both jobs. Tim Cahill decided to remain in the council after becoming country treasurer and has had no trouble handling the two jobs.

If Harold decides to hold onto his council seat, and Frank McCauley runs for re-election, it would seem doubtful that both Kolson and Cheney would run.

That would make four at-large candidates from Ward 1 which would split a lot of votes and weaken all four candidates coming out of the same ward.

SPEAKING OF MCCAULEY, don't know if he is just having a little fun or that it's another sign he is actually thinking of running for mayor next year.

McCauley has a bumper sticker on his car left over from the last city election.

It used to read: "McCauley, City Councillor."

It now reads: "McCauley." He cut the councillor line off.

Could it be that he plans to run for mayor and this is also a reminder that he knew how to save money when he was in that office. And still does.

CHARLES MCINTYRE has rejoined the Norfolk County District Attorney's office as an assistant district attorney. His boss, Dist. Atty. William Keating, has assigned him to handle narcotics cases and special investigations.

McIntyre served as an assistant district attorney from 1994 to 1998 under Dist. Attys. William Delahunt and Jeffrey Locke.

The son of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre, he served briefly as a city councillor and observers were predicting a bright political career for him.

Now that he's back in the D.A.'s office, it could still be there.

BRIAN MCNAMEE is now the treasurer of the South Essex Sewerage District, a regional waste water treatment authority serving Peabody, Salem, Marblehead, Danvers and Beverly. Appointed by the SESD Board of Directors, he's managing the district's funds which total over $30 million.

McNamee, a former candidate for the Ward 6 city council seat, hasn't lost his interest in local politics. Says he's keeping his options open.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A LATE 1920's postcard of Klein's drugstore on the corner of Beale and Hancock Streets in Wollaston Center. A second floor was later added to the Klein Building but the first floor remains pretty much the same as here. It is now the site of the Blackwood Pharmacy Medical Supply which is one of the last two independently owned drugstores in Quincy. The Klein's name can still be seen in faded paint the top of the south side of the building. On the right the tall building is the Wollaston Theater which was built in 1926.

READERS FORUM

Historic Quincy And Charles MacGillivray

Editor, The Quincy Sun: Congratulations once again for The Quincy Sun edition of June 29, 2000 with the special Historic Quincy supplement. This is not only a valuable historic supplement, it is also an important updated addendum of our city's historical past.

As a community weekly newspaper you have captured the historical climate of opinion of past years with that of today. Quite often the newspapers of today are filled with sordid details of negative stories about today's society. The Quincy Sun through its weekly news columns puts emphasis on the good news side of our Quincy neighborhood communities.

The Quincy Sun does not hesitate to show its patriotism. Quite unabashedly I join hundreds of Quincy residents in flying our country's flag and by marching with fellow veterans in various parades to demonstrate that patriotism is alive and well in Quincy. Your newspaper bolsters that patriotic fervor.

Just recently, coincidentally, your paper published the obituary of Charles A. MacGillivray, the local area Congressional Medal of Honor recipient. That same week a motion picture, "The Patriot," became a blockbuster box-office attraction.

Charles MacGillivray was in reality a true patriot, not only for his heroism during the Battle of the Bulge in World War II, but also for his dedication and empathy, in his later life for all disabled veterans.

When veterans returned from World War II affordable housing was a number one priority. The cause of affordable housing led to the establishment of Houghs Neck American Legion Post No. 380, which became Quincy's first World War II Legion Post.

Charles MacGillivray served as mentor to the organizers of that post in his capacity as a disabled veteran. Post 380 leaders played a most important role in obtaining affordable housing for veterans in Quincy. The Quincy Housing Authority was established and Snug Harbor became the city's first veterans housing facility.

That veterans housing facility was Charles MacGillivray's legacy to his veteran colleagues from Quincy. He is a true patriot in more ways than the heroism he displayed during the Battle of the Bulge.

A 'Thank You' For Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run

Editor, The Quincy Sun: I am writing to thank you very much for your support of the recent third annual Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS. This year's event, held on June 10 in Quincy, was a huge success with over 600 participants in the five-mile race and 2.5-mile fitness walk. It was a great day.

Most importantly, approximately $30,000 will be donated to the Cecil B. Day Laboratory at Massachusetts General Hospital for ALS research. I especially appreciated the outstanding Quincy Sun coverage including Mr. Noble's photos of the race and participants.

Your cooperation was greatly appreciated, and I look forward to your continued support in the future as we make the Squirrel Run an annual Quincy activity.

Thanks again.

Boston Firefighters Bike For MDA

Editor, The Quincy Sun: I would like to extend my appreciation to the firefighters who enthusiastically joined together during the Boston Fire Department bike-a-thon.

The bike ride began on Wednesday, June 7, in Lee and concluded 150 miles later in Boston on Sunday, June 10.

When the Boston Fire Department found out that Ed McLaughlin, a Boston firefighter for 29 years, was diagnosed with Lou Gehrig's disease, it wanted to support him. Throughout the years, Ed has selflessly devoted himself to the fire department and the surrounding community. Therefore, the decision to raise funds for the Muscular Dystrophy Association was a no-brainer.

The Boston firefighters recognize a cure for Lou Gehrig's disease is only made possible through research grants. Thank you, Boston

Fire Department, for fighting much more than just fires.

Quincy's Yesterdays Rotary Design To Solve Squantum Traffic

By PAUL HAROLD

The newly organized traffic committee of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce recommended a rotary design to solve the Squantum traffic problem.

Z. Cranston Smith, the committee's chairman, said the rotary traffic design at East Squantum St. and Quincy Shore Drive would provide for the smooth flow of traffic and would resolve the dangerous situation at the intersection. He noted that following a recent accident there the ambulance found it difficult to assist victims because of the traffic congestion.

BRADFORD TO ATTEND OUTING

George Daly, Jr., president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, announced that Governor Robert Bradford would attend the chamber's annual outing at the Braintree Rod and Gun Club.

Ticket Chairman George Goodhue reported a record 350 reservations for the full day program that included sports competitions and a clam bake.

FUNERAL FOR COMMISSIONER DONOVAN

A funeral was held at St. John's Church for James Donovan, the city's commissioner of public streets who worked for the city for nearly 40 years. He began work in 1908 under the administration of Mayor William Shea, following his service in World War I.

Mayor Charles Ross ordered an official mourning period for Donovan, calling his death "a tremendous loss to the citizens of Quincy."

"I know of very few men whose record of public service, helpfulness to others, devotion to duty and interest in public affairs equals that of Mr. Donovan," Ross said.

Arts In The Parks Tonight At LaBrecque Field

Mayor James Sheets and the Quincy Park and Recreation Board announce that the 6th annual season of the Arts in the Parks program will begin tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. at LaBrecque Field in Houghs Neck.

The Arts in the Parks show will travel to six different park locations -- one in each ward -- throughout the city this summer. All shows will begin at 6:30 p.m. Admission and refreshments at all Arts in the Parks events are free.

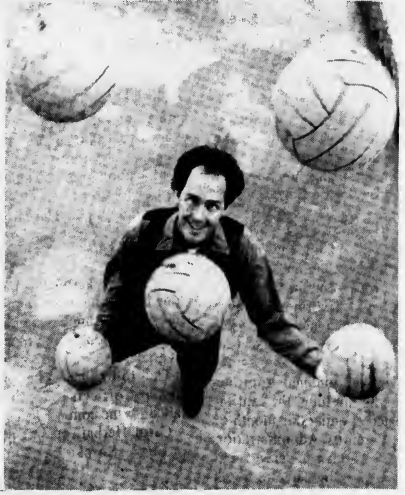

"The City of Quincy is committed to providing families with fun activities throughout the year," said Sheets. "Now in its sixth season, the Arts in the Parks program provides a free, fun, family-oriented night with each of Quincy's neighborhoods. I encourage everyone to come down and enjoy our show and a nice summer evening in the park."

This year's show will feature a new group to Quincy: The Dance Force. The Dance Force is comprised of four young women who conduct a fun, high-energy dance show for audiences of all ages. The Dance Force encourages audience participation and often incorporates children from the audience into their act.

Joining The Dance Force will be comedic juggler Peter Panic, who will begin the Arts in the Parks program with a lively show of juggling and comedy in which he will juggle a variety of unusual items.

Peter Panic has performed in Quincy at First Night, the Quincy ArtsFest, and the City of Presidents' Winter Carnival. He has toured the country and the world displaying his juggling skills.

Following tonight's (Thursday's) performance at PETER PANIC will lead his unique juggling talents to the 6th annual season of the Arts in the Parks program which travels to six different park locations throughout the city this summer. Peter Panic is on the bill with The Dance Force, a high-energy dance group. The program is sponsored by the Mayor's office and the Quincy Park and Recreation Board.

LaBrecque Field, the schedule for the remaining five shows is as follows:

Tuesday, July 18: Whitton Park in Quincy Point

Thursday, July 20: Bishop Field in Montclair

Tuesday, July 25: O'Rourke Field in West Quincy

Thursday, July 27: Mass. Fields in Wollaston

Monday, July 31: Wendall Moses Playground in Squantum

"The Park Department is happy to utilize our facilities for an event that people of all ages can enjoy at the same time," said Thomas Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry, and Cemetery Departments. "Our parks can be more than just a place for a ballgame; they can be the center of community and cultural activity."

The Quincy Park and Recreation Departments will provide an ice cream and cold drink for all those who attend the Arts in the Parks festivities.

"The Arts in the Parks program offers an opportunity for families to walk down to their neighborhood park and enjoy a great show of comedy, dance and music," said Barry Welch, director of the Quincy Recreation Department. "Each year this program brings fun and enjoyment directly to the neighborhoods of Quincy."

Residents are encouraged to bring their own blanket or lawn chair for seating on the lawn.

For more information on the Arts in the Parks program, call the Quincy Park Department at (617) 376-1254 or the Quincy Recreation Department at (617) 376-1394.

Auxiliary Raises $35,000 For Quincy Medical Center

Carol Herbai, president of the Quincy Medical Center Auxiliary, presented a check for $35,000 to the hospital at the auxiliary's annual spring luncheon at the Wollaston Golf Club.

Hospital CEO Christine Schuster said the money will be used to make needed improvements in the Emergency Department, where volume has increased by 30 per cent of the past few years.

Other planned improvements include the anticipated opening this month of a Veterans Administration clinic on site to serve veterans who now have to travel to Boston or Braconckton for treatment.

The hospital will also welcome Asian physicians on July 24 to serve the growing Asian community in Quincy and a Learning Development Clinic offering pediatric services.

Karen Tufts, director of volunteers, presented the annual Bissett Scholarship award of $1,000 to Robert Hanna, a Boston College High School graduate and hospital volunteer, who will begin studying at Harvard where he will major of mathematics.

His other activities include mentoring, math tutor, lector at St. Anne's Church and choir school from 5th to 8th grade.

The following slate of auxiliary officers were installed for the coming year:

Carol Herbai, president; Caroline Bornstein, first vice president; Clarusn McKeon, second vice president; Ilda DiMascio, recording secretary; Lorraine Edwards, corresponding secretary; Yolanda Romanelli, treasurer; Natalie Fossati, assistant treasurer.

Caroline Bornstein was chairperson for the luncheon. Music was provided by the Silver Streak Duo.

SOUTH SHORE ELDER Services Director of Community Services Linda Fitzgibbon congratulates Quincy resident Sy Porter for his 15 years of service as a Meals on Wheels driver.

QUINCY RESIDENT Tom Needham is congratulated for his 15 years as a Meals on Wheels driver by South Shore Elder Services Director of Community Services Linda Fitzgibbon.

2 Residents Honored By South Shore Elder Services

Quincy residents Tom Needham and Sy Porter were among the 600 volunteers recently feted at South Shore Elder Services' (SSES) annual volunteer recognition luncheon at Lantana in Randolph.

For 15 years, the two men have been volunteering for the Meals on Wheels nutrition program. Because of their dedication, ill and frail homebound elders are able to enjoy nutritious meals. For some, it may be their only contact with others.

"It's incredible that they have been doing this for 15 years. Many people don't keep jobs for half that time," said Executive Director Edward Flynn. "Our volunteers are the foundation of many of our programs."

"Last year almost 600 volunteers gave more than 61,000 hours of their time caring for ill and frail elders in our communities. They cared for them in a variety of ways: delivering Meals on Wheels; visiting with those who are isolated and lonely; driving them to medical appointments; shopping for their groceries; helping them to manage their finances.

"If we had to hire staff to provide the same services," Flynn said, "it would cost us more than $600,000. We couldn't begin to do it without them."

Flynn said the luncheon, paid for by contributions of local businesses, is the highlight of the year. "It gives me and my staff a chance to thank the tireless volunteers--many of them elderly themselves--who give so much," he added.

SESS is a non-profit, state home care agency, serving Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate and Weymouth. SSES develops, delivers, and coordinates services that enable elders to remain safely in their own homes and communities with dignity and in comfort. SSES also helps older citizens in improving and maintaining the quality of their lives.

SESS was designated an Aging Services Access Point (ASAP) by the Massachusetts Executive Office of Elder Affairs in 1997. As an ASAP, SSES is one of 27 agencies throughout the state designated to coordinate state-funded services to elders. Services include, but are not limited to: home-making, personal care assistance, Meals-on-Wheels, money management, caregiver support programs, the Senior Pharmacy Program, congregate housing, protective services, and the Elder-at-Risk program.

Call 781-843-3910 for information about volunteer opportunities.

Library Summer Concert Series Opens July 20

Dublin-born folk singer and multi-instrumentalist Tom O'Carroll opens the Thomas Crane Public Library's summer concert series Thursday, July 20, with Irish Music: Songs and Stories.

The hour-long concert begins at 12:30 p.m. on the front lawn of the main library in Quincy Square. O'Carroll will present a mix of old favorites, unfamiliar tunes and originals.

Both musician and folklorist, O'Carroll brings humor and wit to his performances. A graduate of University College, Dublin, he has played at concerts, festivals, clubs and colleges all over the United States and Canada as well as Ireland.

The concerts continue for three successive Thursdays with performances by jazz vocalist Krisanthi Pappas July 27, guitarist Michael Nix on Aug. 3, and music of the Andes with INCA SON on Aug. 10.

Concert goers are welcome to bring lawn chairs, blankets and picnic baskets. In case of rain the concerts will be held at the Adams Shore Branch Library, 519 Sea St. Both sites are handicapped accessible.

The concerts are free and are funded in part by the Quincy Cultural Council, a local agency supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Art Association Awards Two Scholarships

The Quincy Art Association has awarded scholarships to two local high school graduates.

Recipients are Christine

Kurpleski, a recent graduate of North Quincy High School; and Nick DiStasi, a recent graduate of Quincy High School.

Scholarships are awarded to students who intend to attend an art college or any college for the study of some form of art.

Kevin F. Coughlin, a lifelong Quincy resident, was recently inducted into Boston University's Collegium of Distinguished Alumni, and Graduate School of Arts and Sciences.

At the award ceremony addressed by President Jon Westling, Coughlin, a 1976 BU graduate, was recognized for his distinguished service to his profession and society, and his tireless advocacy over the last two-plus decades on behalf of children, youth and families in the state.

Coughlin, the assistant chief probation officer at the Middlesex Probate and Family Court, was a recipient of a 1996 Impact Quincy Community Hero Award, the 1998 Boston Parents Paper Family Advocate of the Year-Public Friend Award, and a 1999 Quincy City Council Commendation.

He is a member of the Middlesex Bar Association Family Court Bench/Bar Committee, the Association of Family and Conciliation Courts, and the Family Court's Committee on Unrepresented Litigants.

He is also vice-chairman of the Family Council/Mayor's Commission on the Family, secretary and past president of the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association, and a member of the Greater Quincy Knights of Columbus, the Quincy Lions Club, the Sacred Heart Parish Council, and co-chair of the Montclair School Parent Advisory Council.

Coughlin lives in Quincy with his wife, Domenica, and three children, Maria, James and Matthew.

Quincy College Earns Honors From United Way

Employees at Quincy College are helping students to achieve their dreams through education.

But their recent support of United Way of Massachusetts Bay demonstrates their desire to help children and families in the community achieve their dreams, too.

United Way of Massachusetts Bay is saluting employees of Quincy College for raising more than $6,650 for the organization -- a whopping 85% increase over funds raised by the college last year. To honor this generosity, United Way of Massachusetts Bay recently presented its President's Award to Quincy College.

"Like Quincy College, we are 'in the business' of offering opportunities," said Marian Heard, president and chief executive officer of United Way of Massachusetts Bay. "We want to empower families in our region with the resources they need to be self-sufficient, and we want to offer all children -- regardless of economics -- the opportunity to succeed in school and beyond. The funds raised by Quincy College take us a step closer to our goals."

United Way of Massachusetts Bay centers its annual investment on community-based human services designed to prevent problems before they take root. Its funds provide critical operating support to agencies providing child care, parent support, after-school programs, services for immigrants, cancer prevention, job training programs, elder services, domestic violence services, HIV/AIDS, and substance abuse, to name a few.

"Every day at Quincy College our faculty and staff are reminded of the good programs and services funded by United Way," said Sean Barry, interim college president. "We know that our students, their families, or someone we know like neighbors or friends may benefit from the contributions we make."

Barry said much of the success stories of Quincy College students include direct connections to the community-focused and health-related organizations empowered by the financial support of Quincy College participants in the United Way drive.

"I'm proud to work with so many generous, compassionate individuals," Barry told employees at a recent reception for contributors. "Every day, in our offices and in our classrooms, students' lives are improved and dreams are realized. Now, in the spirit of this community, we are contributing to lives beyond our campus -- investing in healthy, happy citizens and feeling great about it."

For more than 65 years, the United Way has partnered with local human service providers and community residents to identify community needs and implement effective solutions. The United Way is the largest non-governmental provider of funds for health and human services in our community.

Statewide Referral System Legislation Moves Ahead

State Senator Michael Morrissey reports that legislation establishing a statewide information and referral system has passed the Joint Government Regulations Committee.

Morrissey, chairman of the Government Regulations Committee, said: "This bill would basically simplify the whole process for obtaining information on a variety of government services."

"If a person has a question, for example, about welfare or food stamps, or just wants to contact a state agency, they no longer have to find numerous 1-800 numbers. Instead, citizens can call 211, and this service will connect them to someone who can answer their questions."

The 211 solution was first utilized in Atlanta two years ago, Morrissey noted. Last year Connecticut adopted it with success.

"There are so many state agencies that contacting the one you are looking for can be a daunting, time-consuming process," Morrissey said. "The 211 solution simplifies the process and saves people time. It's just an easier way for people to get the information they need."

Within the state there are literally thousands of phone numbers for social service programs, government offices, community organizations, volunteer referral centers, donation clearing houses, education systems and neighborhood groups, Morrissey noted.

"The 211 solution puts an end to this confusion, and makes it easier for a citizen to make his or her voice heard," he said.

The legislation, House Bill 5130, and its companion bill, Senate 2160, will now move to the House Committee on Ways and Means where the committee will review the cost to operate the program.

NORTH QUINCY High School students Nancy Yankun, Sheila Jafarzadeh, and Sarah Wong were honored recently at Regis College for their top 10 scores statewide on the National Spanish Exams. Thousands of public, private, and parochial school students from across the state and across the country took part in the exams at various levels of proficiency.

NQHS Students Among Top 10 In State On National Spanish Exams

North Quincy High School students Nancy Yankun, Sheila Jafarzadeh, and Sarah Wong were recognized recently for scoring among the top 10 statewide in their respective categories on the National Spanish Exams.

Wong finished among the top 10 for the Level 2 Test; Yankun and Jafarzadeh, Level 3. Massachusetts, which recognizes only those in the top 10 as State Winners, honored the three students and others from across the state during ceremonies held at Regis College. The national exams are proficiency-based tests that focus on oral and reading comprehension as well as vocabulary and grammatical accuracy. Approximately 100 NQHS students took the exams this past semester.

REAL ESTATE

CityView Real Estate Offering Virtual Tour

CityView Real Estate, 63 Billings Rd., Quincy, announces "Virtual Tour," a professional homevideo tour on the Internet, is being offered on homes listed with their firm.

"Virtual Tour" uniquely showcases properties. The interior and exterior features of a property are highlighted thus providing visual information about the property which surpasses any written description.

Joyce Baker, president of the South Shore Board of Realtors and a broker with CityView Real Estate, said the technology is an innovative and efficient way to market a property. Virtual Tour invites potential buyers into a home for a personal viewing without actually having to visit the property.

Baker said sellers appreciate the fact that a tour of their home is now available to a large audience and buyers appreciate this convenient method of viewing many properties in the comfort of their home or at the real estate office.

"CityView Real Estate has proven to be a progressive real estate firm offering sellers and buyers exceptional service in an ever changing real estate market," Baker added.

Home Buyers Workshop At Fleet Mortgage July 15, 22

Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services, an approved First Time Homebuyer Counseling Agency, will hold an accredited and MHFA certified First Time Homebuyer's Workshop in collaboration with Fleet Mortgage on Saturday July 15 and 22.

The workshop will be held at The Fleet Bank, 1400 Hancock St., Quincy Center, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Attendance at both workshops is mandatory to receive your homebuying certificate which is mandatory by all lenders to qualify for the many different mortgage options such as the Mass Housing Finance Agency, Soft Second Programs, down payment and closing cost grants and other special first time homebuyer financing options.

Neighborhood Housing Services is a non-profit organization dedicated to assisting first time buyers through the homebuying process. The staff at NHS is unique in their approach to obtaining down payment and closing costs assistance as well as rehab grants for their clients, which are available throughout the entire South Shore area. Don't miss this opportunity to find out you or someone you know can buy a home with a little or no money down.

The agenda will be comprehensive and individualized. The focus will be on the many changing aspects of homebuying, including how to locate a property within budget, how to make an offer, and determining the best mortgage program.

Advanced registration is required and space is limited. A $10 refundable registration fee is required.

Contact Debbie Kidd at (617) 770-2227 for more information.

Summer Energy Conservation Tips

Now that the summer season has arrived, the NSTAR companies (Boston Edison, Commonwealth Electric, Commonwealth Gas, Cambridge Electric) remind residents of the importance of energy conservation.

Conserving energy will lower electric bills and help the environment. This is especially important during times of extreme or prolonged heat.

NSTAR has prepared the following checklist of energy saving steps to help residents stay cool while being more efficient in their energy use:

- Use window or ceiling fans instead of air conditioners.
- If using an air conditioner, keep the filter clean and adjust the setting so the room temperature is no lower than 78 degrees.
- Turn off window air conditioners when you leave the room for several hours. You'll use less energy cooling the room down later than if you leave the unit running.
- Close shades or drapes to keep out direct sunlight.
- Use a clothesline instead of a dryer.
- Minimize the number of times you open the refrigerator door.
- For cooking, use small appliances like a toaster oven or electric skillet. On average, they use about half the energy of a full size oven.
- Cook outdoors if you can, or use a microwave to avoid heating up the kitchen. Microwaves use less than half the power of a conventional oven and cook in about one-fourth the time.
- Keep lights low or off—electric lights generate heat.

Germantown, Houghs Neck Cub Scouts Hold Pinewood Derby

Cub Scout Pack 6 Houghs Neck and Cub Scout Pack 26 Germantown held a joint meeting recently at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church and brought their Pinewood Derby Cars for a day of racing.

Pack 26 Committee Chairman and Ward 1 City Councillor Gregory Hanley provided a trophy to be awarded to the winning Pack, which this year was Pack 6.

Organizers expect the joint Pinewood Derby Race to become an annual event with the winner displaying the trophy at its charter organization over the course of the year.

After the races scouts and their families enjoyed building and eating ice cream sundaes.

Jones, Avis "we try harder" award.

Other scouts participating were: George Oakes, Sean Carey, Steven Kubit, John Hanley, Josh Wallace, Edward Grennon, Paul Miranda, Rahmy El-toury, Patrick Dean, Matt Shaw, Joseph Grennon, Kevin Williams, Paul Reddington, Dennis Carey, Adam Squatrito, Andrew Shields, Shawn Evju, and Ronnie Bercionne.

Beechwood Harbor Cruise Slated For August 2

Beechwood's Annual Harbor Cruise, scheduled for August 2, will benefit the center's expanding intergenerational programs, reports Don Uvanitte, president of Beechwood Community Life Center.

"This harbor cruise has become a very popular event," stated Sharron Beals, executive director of the center. "Last year tickets sold out early and we expect the same community response this summer. Ours is a three-hour harbor cruise with music, complimentary foods, and a wonderful crowd each year."

Another successful "sail" will ensure the center's expansion of programming, said Beals.

The three-hour, mid-week moonlight cruise features DJ, complimentary food, dancing, and a cash bar. Passengers will board at the Marina Bay dock at 6:30 p.m. The ship departs at 7 p.m.

Cost is $35 per person and $50 per couple.

Tickets can be purchased at the center, from members of Beechwood's Development Committee, and other sites throughout the city.

For more information, call Beechwood on the Bay at (617) 471-5712.

Former Quincy Girl to Attend Young Tech Leaders Summit

Mary Curran of Braintree, a former Quincy girl, has been selected to join 1,000 intensely motivated high school students at the first ever "NexTech," the National Summit of Young Technology Leaders.

The summit will take place in Austin, Texas, from July 16 to July 26 and is designed to introduce exceptional high school students to careers in the rapidly exploding field of technology.

"The NexTech Summit will provide a superb educational experience for those like Mary Curran who are interested in pursuing a career in technology," said Mike Lasday, president of Envision EMI, a Washington-based education, management and marketing company that sponsors NexTech.

PRIME TRAVEL
by George P. Murphy

As heard on WJDA Radio, 1300 AM every Thursday at 11:00am!

CAR RENTALS - FILL 'ER UP OR NOT?

When renting a car, paying for gas is your responsibility. The standard approach is to accept a full tank at pick-up, then return the car with a full tank. You can bring it back without refueling and allow the rental company to fill it and charge you for the gas. This is an expensive option, as rental companies charge a higher price than the going market rate in the area. You may also buy gas at pick-up, paying a posted price per gallon that is supposedly at or below the area's gas prices. You then return the car and receive no credit for what remains in the tank. The cost-effective move here is to return the car as empty as possible. Whether you are renting a car and driving, flying or cruising, you can always count on us for honest, reliable, first class travel services. And at PRIME TRAVEL, our number 1 goal is to provide you with professional, personal, experienced attention to your every travel need. Many times we can actually save you money because of our access to special discounts, packages, etc. Time to travel? Time to call 617-472-3697, 500 Victory Road, Marina Bay.

P.S.: Consider how much you'll drive and how hurried you'll be at drop-off time when deciding your fueling options.

Morrisette Rides Doherty's Arm Into Playoffs

By CHRIS POISSON

In a game where his teammates' bats were dormant, Keith Doherty made more noise for the Morrisette American Legion baseball team Monday night than Sammy Sosa's home-run rampage in Atlanta.

Doherty (4-1) turned in his finest performance of the season, tossing eight scoreless innings as Morrisette (13-5), which had just three hits, squeezed out a 1-0 win over Canton in extra innings at Adams Field. The left-hander baffled Canton hitters all game, allowing only three hits and two walks while fanning 12.

"Keith Doherty has turned into a great pitcher," said manager Ray Cattaneo. "The last few games he has pitched, he has been outstanding. He's the best pitcher in the league right now."

The victory, Morrisette's fifth straight, locked up second place in the District 6 East Division. Morrisette still had a chance to grab the top spot as the paper went to press Tuesday. If it wins its last two games—West Roxbury (Tuesday) and Milton (Wednesday)—and Weymouth (14-4) loses its last two, it will win the division.

Canton made two errors in the eighth that led to the winning run. John Gavin reached on an error and moved to second on Pat Bregoli's sacrifice bunt. With two outs, Adam Goodrich hit a grounder to the third baseman, who tried to tag Gavin heading to third but missed and then threw wildly to first, allowing Gavin to head home.

Earlier in the evening,

Morrisette held on for a 4-3 win against Randolph in game that began June 19 but was suspended when the lights went out at Adams Field. At the time, Randolph trailed Morrisette, 2-1, and had two men on with one out in the top of the third inning.

On Monday, Randolph tied it at 2 when the runner on third stole home. Morrisette regained the lead in the bottom half on Doherty's sacrifice fly that scored T.J. Bell (single). In the fourth, Joe Duffy scored from third on a wild pitch to make it 4-2. Randolph made it 4-3 with a run in the sixth.

Rob Celata (4-1) earned the win, yielding three runs on three hits while striking out 11 in seven innings. He also had two hits, along with Goodrich, Bell and Chris Doherty.

"Those were two big wins for us," Cattaneo said. "It's good to get on a hot streak now and hopefully it will be that way right into the tournament."

Tomorrow (Friday), Morrisette starts postseason play at home in a best-of-three series. If necessary, Sunday's game will also be at Adams Field. Last night (Wednesday) it found out who its opponent will be.

In previous action, Morrisette thrashed

Randolph, 11-1, thanks to a seven-run sixth inning as it sent 11 men to the plate. Brian O'Hanley led the 17-hit assault, going 4 for 5 with three RBIs, and Chris Doherty added two hits and two RBIs.

Goodrich (3 for 5), Flynn (2 for 4), Gavin (2 for 4), Bregoli (1 for 4) and Joe Thorley (1 for 3) all drove in a run. Tommy Hughes added two hits.

Bell (1-2) picked up his first win of the season as he went the distance, allowing one run on three hits with one walk and four strikeouts.

Last Thursday, Celata tossed a gem as he dismantled rival Quincy, 5-0, at Adams Field. Celata allowed six hits and walked one as he punched out a dozen in the complete-game effort. He also did some damage at the plate, going 2 for 3 with an RBI.

Quincy's Brian Deptula was equally as impressive, fanning 14 in seven innings of work. He gave up four runs on six hits and three walks.

Keith Doherty stroked a two-out, two-run double in a three-run fourth inning that gave Morrisette a comfortable cushion. Goodrich had an RBI double, while Gavin (double) and Bell (single) each contributed with a hit.

Last Wednesday,

Morrisette exploded for seven runs on seven hits in the seventh inning to escape with a 14-7 win over Canton at Stoughton, snapping a three-game losing streak.

Matt McCann (4-1, 2 saves) allowed seven unearned runs in the complete-game effort. He gave up seven hits and walked three while striking out three.

Duffy and Gavin each banged out three hits and had two RBIs. Chris Doherty, Bell and Thorley all drove in two runs. Bregoli and Goodrich each had two hits and an RBI. Keith Doherty walked three times and knocked in a run with a sacrifice fly.

Granite Bow To Cowboys; Eye Rebound At Hyannis

By CHRIS POISSON

Mike Thomas, who joined the Quincy Granite two days before the season opener against the Boston Cowboys Saturday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium, hardly had time to learn his teammates' names, let alone the plays.

But when backup quarterback J.R. Rendle went down midway through the first quarter, the third-stringer found himself on the field trying to orchestrate a comeback win.

Rendle, who started in place of Liam Higgins (head injury), broke his collarbone and will be out for the season, leaving Thomas as the signal caller until Higgins returns in a couple of weeks.

Although the Granite (0-1) suffered a 20-8 loss to the Cowboys, Thomas showed flashes of what he can bring to this team, provided he doesn't leave the City of Presidents for a pro camp this summer.

Thomas played college ball at the University of North Carolina (1991-95) and as a senior he passed for 2,436 yards, the most in a single season in school history. So Quincy has a capable QB who just needs to familiarize himself with the offense.

"He's a good player," said coach Ken McPhee. "He's not used to our offense right now, but he'll get used to it. He did a pretty good job for only being around for two or three days. I think he'll be all right."

Quincy will try to rebound when it hits the road Saturday to take on the Hyannis Hurricanes.

After a scoreless first quarter, Boston got on the board in the second when wide out Bunny Jefferson, who led the team in receiving last season with 14 catches for 383 yards and five touchdowns, hauled in a 74-yard TD pass, breaking several tackles along the way. Boston converted the two-point conversion for an 8-0 lead.

Late in the half, Felipe Ogaldez picked off a Cowboys' pass to give Quincy great field position at the Cowboys' 11. On fourth down, with less than two minutes left, Thomas kept the ball and scampered into the end zone from nine yards out, faking out several defenders along the way. He hit Bill MacDougall for the two-point conversion to tie it at 8.

In the third, Boston blocked a Quincy punt and on the ensuing play, wide out Chris Walker beat his defender for a 45-yard TD catch, putting his team ahead, 14-8. The two-point conversion failed.

"That hurt us," McPhee said. "I thought our defense played well. We made a couple of mistakes. Big plays hurt us. But that's gonna happen. We have to cut down on big plays."

The Granite put together a drive at the end of the third that carried over to the fourth, but it ended when Thomas's pass bounced out of a receiver's hands and into Bill Wright's, who returned it 80 yards the other way for a 20-8 lead. Boston missed the two-point conversion.

"I don't think I coached a particularly great offensive game today," McPhee said. "We had no continuity. I just didn't like it. We kind of scrambled with a new quarterback and tried to protect him rather than just let him play. That's what we have to do more—just let him play."

"We showed some of our weaknesses," he added. "We have some work to do. I thought we did a pretty good job in the first half. In the second half, we just didn't execute. We'll be all right. We have to lick our wounds and get back to practice. I'll watch the film tonight and see what we have to do."

Lipton Cup Regatta Starts Friday

The 14th annual Lipton Cup Regatta will be held tomorrow (Friday) to Sunday at the Squantum Yacht Club in Quincy.

The festivities will begin with registration tomorrow from 7-9 p.m.

The Lipton Cup, which will host 1,000 sailors from Canada to Florida, is expected to include the following classes of sailboats in the race: N10, Optimist, Laser, International and Club 420, One Design 14, Hustler, Tornado, Thunderbird and Vanguard 15's.

The Lipton Cup trophy, originally given to the Massachusetts Bay Yacht Clubs Association in 1930 by tea magnate Sir Thomas Johnstone Lipton, was first awarded to Herbert Albright, a victorious skipper in the Indian Class sailboat.

After more than 55 years of inactivity, the Lipton Cup trophy, nearly three feet tall and a silver Victorian splendor, is once more the object of grand sailboat racing competition in the waters of Massachusetts.

Pre-registration forms are available at all of the Massachusetts Bay Yacht Clubs in the South Shore area, or by calling Don McGilvray at (617) 328-5730.

21 Residents To Compete In Bay State Summer Games

Twenty-one residents of Quincy will be competing in the upcoming 19th annual Bay State Summer Games.

The Games begin today (Thursday) and will run through Sunday, July 23, with competitions in 24 different sports taking place in the greater Boston and greater Worcester areas. Over 10,000

Massachusetts athletes of all ages will participate in this Olympic-style sports festival.

The residents are:

Timothy Keating, lacrosse; Amy Jellison, Krystle Neves, Kathleen McCarthy, Makini Thompson, volleyball; Adam Woo, Phil McGillicuddy, basketball; Jenna Woods, gymnastics;

Charlie Sacchetti Memorial Golf Tourney July 31 At Halifax Country Club

The Charlie Sacchetti Memorial Golf tournament will be held Monday, July 31 at the Halifax Country Club.

The tournament is held in memory of Charlie Sacchetti, who was a member of the American Legion Cyril P. Morrisette Post #294.

The cost is $85 per person and includes fees, carts, sit down dinner, awards and prizes. The proceeds, which have amounted to over $2,500 a year for its seventh year of existence, are donated to the Morrisette Post Scholarship Program. Deserving children and grandchildren of members of the post are awarded scholarship funds after acceptance to college.

If interested in participating, contact Triangle Service Station, 15 Centre St., Quincy 02169, or call (617) 472-9517 for an application.

Triple A Baseball Playoffs

In a battle of Division Champions, Yellow Cab scored three runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to edge Century 21, 9-8, in recent Triple A playoff action at Mitchell Field.

Matty Clifford stroked a two-run double and scored the winning run on a wild pitch. Rob Mann, Mike Saville and Brennan Carey each had two RBI, while Andrew Gormley had three putouts and three assists playing second base. Justin Boyd came on in relief to gain the victory.

For Century 21, Jim Bleier, John Murray and Danny Poggi all hit safely.

Yellow Cab — 4
Spillane & Epstein — 3
Joe Ceurvals pitched a two-hit complete-game gem to lead Yellow Cab to a come-from-behind 4-3 win. He fanned 14 and only allowed singles to Jimmy Mullaney and Matt Young. Training 2-1, Yellow Cab grabbed the lead in the bottom of the fifth inning by scoring three runs on consecutive singles by Mark Pepjonovich, Justin Boyd, Ceurvals, a walk to Mike Ainsley and singles by Mike Saville and Rob Mann. For Spillane & Epstein, Ryan Donovan pitched a great game, going the distance and striking out a dozen.

Century 21 — 16
CNA — 0
John Murray struck out 14 as he shut down CNA. He also had a good day at the plate with a double and a single. The offense was powered by home runs from Dan Poggi, David Cordeiro and Glenn Peterson. Also contributing were Gary Uvanite (2 hits, 2 runs), Brendan Foley (2-run double), Bobby Harrington (2 triples, 2 singles), John Benoit (hit, run, strong game at first) and Miah Foley who played solid behind the plate. Justin Farnham took two for the team when he was hit by two pitches.

For CNA, Harman Losi had a hit and played well at shortstop. Ricky Likas ripped a double and played a solid game at third. Shawn McBrien gave a valiant and gritty pitching performance.

Red Cross Golf Classic July 24 At South Shore Country Club

The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay South Area will hold its 15th annual Golf Classic Monday, July 24 at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham with a 1 p.m. shotgun start.

"This is a perfect way to make a significant contribution to a charitable cause, and have a great day of golf at the same time," said Jerry Dacey, chairman of the Golf Classic Committee.

Other committee members include: Robert Goyette, Kevin M. Burke, James L. Chicino, Glenn Ferguson, Mark Fisher, Michael Gionanni, Mae Harris, Daniel G. May, Kevin M. Meskill, Kathy Palmer, Peter Palmer, Daniel J. Flynn, John J. Pasciucco, John Spillane,

Kristen Williams, Lynne Houghton, Richard N. Hart, Mary Snethen, James McLean, Michelle Bowen, Mark Luppi and Helen Shea. Proceeds from the tournament will help Red Cross locally to continue its great work of:

- Helping victims of fires, storms and other disasters recover and rebuild their lives. This past year Red Cross volunteers responded to 24 disaster situations, providing emergency assistance to 75 families.

- Preparing parents, co-workers and teachers to respond to emergencies through training in First Aid and CPR. Volunteers teach hundreds of people at the Quincy Red Cross office.

- Protecting children through training in water safety, injury and disease prevention, and emergency response. This year volunteers went into South Shore elementary schools and taught over 7,000 students how to be safe when home alone and over 8,000 students water safety.

The entrance fee for the tournament is $125 and includes a box lunch, greens fee, cart, an old fashion barbecue, awards and prizes. Hole sponsors, raffle prizes and cash donations are also welcome.

Ally Sleiman Finishes Fifth In Olympic Wrestling Team Trials Eyes Comeback For 2004 Games

Ally Sleiman of Quincy finished in fifth place at the recent U.S. Olympic Wrestling Team Trials in Dallas, Texas.

Sleiman fell to Shon Lewis of Colorado Springs, Colo., 7-0, in the quarterfinals after defeating five-time national champion Charley Carbaugh of Colorado Springs, 6-3, in the first round.

In the consolation round, Sleiman picked up his second win of the tournament with a 9-4 victory over Brian Pickering of Pensacola, Fla.

ALLY SLEIMAN

"I'm a little disappointed to say the least," Sleiman said. "I trained really hard this year. I did better than I expected to. It puts me in great position for 2004. I'm going to take the year off and spend more time with my family. I'll make a comeback in 2004. I definitely think I can do it.

"Also, I would like to thank the City of Quincy for supporting me, especially my family and friends."

Although Sleiman will not be making the trip to Sydney, Australia, he will serve as an alternate on the U.S. Greco-Roman wrestling team after winning the North Regional Olympic Trials championship in the spring.

Young Voices Fill Quincy Youth Baseball's New Sound System

Quincy Youth Baseball's Junior Farm, Softball, Triple A and Junior leagues have a new sound system for their annual All-Star games, championship games and other events.

It is used to announce players, do play-by-play and provide other musical entertainment before the games and between innings.

"This is the way it should be," said Everett Goodrich, chairman of the Quincy Youth Baseball Board of Directors. "Getting the kids involved, singing and announcing the game, playing the music and seeing everyone dancing and having a good time is what this is all about."

The first event using the new system featured Melissa Spillane's unaccompanied rendition of "The Star Spangled Banner" before the Softball League All-Star Game. Spillane, 14, plays in the Softball League for Mansfield and Nolan, Accontants. She was also invited to sing the National Anthem at the Junior League All-Star Game.

The Triple A All-Star Game featured the vocal talents of 13-year-old Mark Richards. Richards is an International League player and is also an umpire in the Triple A League. He played in the 1999 Triple A All-Star Game.

Play-by-play for the game was provided by several coaches, but the most entertaining announcing of the evening came from 10-year-old Laura Leger, the league's only female player. Leger is a standout player for Flavin & Flavin Real Estate & Insurance and is coached by the league's only female coach, Dianna Cassidy.

In addition to the pre-recorded rock music, Local 2222 coach Joe Brill led the crowd in a sing-a-long version of "Take Me Out To The Ballgame" during the seventh-inning stretch. Brill's singing was in the true Harry Caray tradition.

The sponsors of the new system were: The Alumni Café & Dee Dee's, Norfolk County Sheriff Mike Bellotti, Bank of Canton, Consumer Home Mortgage Corporation of America, Attorney MaryEllen Cronin (candidate for Norfolk County Register of Deeds), John & Tina Iredale, City Councilor Patrick McDermott, The Quincy High School Baseball Hall of Fame, The Law Offices of Spillane & Epstein, P.C., Attorney Jim Timmins, and State Representative Steve Tobin.

Applications Available For 13th Annual Jim Kane 5 Mile Road Race

Applications are available at several Quincy locations for the 13th annual Jim Kane Sugarbowl 5 Miler Road Race, which will be held Thursday, July 20 at 6:30 p.m. at the Bayside Expo Center.

The locations are: The Dairy Freeze, Adams St.;

McGinn's Citgo, Newport Ave. and Furnace Brook Parkway; Barry's Deli, Wollaston; OSCO Drug, Hancock St., North Quincy; Quincy YMCA and week-nights at Veterans Memorial Stadium from Geoff Hennessey, L Street Running Club member and director of Quincy Track Program.

The race fee is $12 before July 8 and $15 thereafter. Interested runners may also register on-line at www.lstreet.org. All participants registered before July 8 will receive a commemorative Jim Kane Sugarbowl 5 Miler tank top running shirt.

The race, hosted by the L Street Running Club, is expected to draw 2,000 runners and walkers.

New this year, starting at 4:30 p.m., will be a runner's expo featuring running products and foods at the start/finish venue. All registered runners and walkers are eligible for the raffle. Prizes will include running shoes, apparel, tickets to sporting events and concerts, and gift certificates to a number of restaurants in the area.

The L Street Running Club, which has 600 members with over 60 from Quincy, raises funds for a number of charities from other endeavors outside of the race. In the past, it has donated funds to many charities and fundraising efforts in Quincy.

For more information or to receive a race application by mail, call (617) 770-0166 or (781) 331-5251.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Get Back On Track With Wellness Goals

Now's a good time to re-new such healthful goals as losing weight and increasing physical activity—even if you thought you'd "hit the wall." Yet, there's more to "shaping up" than just exercising a couple of times a month and eating the occasional salad; you've got to make fitness activities and good-for-you foods and beverages a part of your everyday routine.

No matter whether you're on track on sidetracked, little changes can still make a big difference. Here are some tips for choosing a sensible diet that can easily be worked into daily life:

• Pack a nutrition punch.

Fortified foods have come a long way since salt became the first U.S. commercial food to be fortified in 1924. In the quest to reach your nutrition goals, remember that breads, cereals, and beverages with added vitamins and minerals pack more nutrition punch. For example, Ocean Spray Cranberry Juice Cocktail Plus contains a higher percentage of cranberry juice than most other brands, delivering the urinary tract health benefits of the cranberry. The juice's calcium and vitamins E, A, and C also may help prevent chronic illnesses, such as osteoporosis, heart disease, and cancer.

• "Super size" it... Not.

Restaurant meals are increasingly "super sized," leaving patrons stuffed—and guilty with the distress of overeating. Splitting meals with a friend or saving half for later can still leave you happy and satisfied. Also, the slower you eat, the less chance you'll overeat. Put your fork down between bites and pace yourself.

• How would you like that cooked?

If you're eating out, pay attention to those key words: sauteed, fried, panseared, and batter-dipped. Calories and fat grams skyrocket in these types of foods. But you can enjoy the same foods by choosing alternative preparation: grilled or baked fish instead of batter-dipped; baked potato instead of French fries; steamed rice instead of fried.

• Lighten up. If you find yourself routinely eating the same old things, lighten up, and choose some new flavorful foods and beverages. According to a recent Calorie Control Council survey, 72 percent of respondents agree that a wide variety of low-calorie and sugar-free foods would allow them to eat more healthfully with little loss of taste or quality. Choose skim or 1 percent milk instead of whole milk, or try Ocean Spray Lightstyle low-calorie juice drinks, which offer fewer calories and all the nutrition and taste benefits of fruit juice.

• "5 A Day" is the way.

The average American diet does not meet the recommended guidelines for fruits and vegetables (five to nine servings per day). Fruit juice can be a tasty way to fill the gap. Juice counts as one full serving of fruit and provides 130 percent of the recommended dietary allowance for vitamin C.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"

"I hear what I want to hear". How would you know? This statement is commonly used by people who have not yet come to terms with their hearing loss! It is painful to hear it, because I know that they are years away from trying to correct their loss. Most people are unaware how an uncorrected hearing loss can affect their lives. The results of a recent survey of over 4000 hearing impaired people and their significant others have been published. Some of the highlights are as follows:

- People with untreated hearing loss register significantly higher levels of depression, anger and frustration, anxiety, and other negative emotions than do people with comparable hearing loss who use hearing aids.
- Nearly half of the hearing aid wearers surveyed reported improvement in their overall quality of life attributable to their use of hearing aids. More than 60% of the family members or close friends reported that hearing aids had improved the lives of users.

You cannot afford to ignore a hearing loss. Live your life to its fullest and be healthy! Now you go and spread the news! Steve

Chris Peter Memorial Blood Drive July 18

The 16th annual Chris Peter Memorial Blood Drive will be held Tuesday, July 18 from 2 to 8 p.m. in St. Thomas Aquinas Hall, Darrow St., Houghs Neck.

The American Red Cross Blood Drive is sponsored by the Peter family. It is held in memory of Chris Peter, who was killed by a drunk driver on Sept. 14, 1984. He was 22 years old.

"We prefer this way of remembering because most of the family donate blood, with Chris donating many times before he died," said his parents, Charlies and Trudy Peter.

Although the reason for the blood drive is Chris's death, the blood drive is an uplifting place to be. Many donors return yearly. We have homemade goodies to tempt the donors and a craft table where small children can be entertained while their parents donate," the Peters added.

In the past 15 years, the Chris Peter Blood Drive has collected more than 1500 pints of blood, averaging 105 [er year at a time when blood donations drop to the lowest levels of the year.

Walk-ins are welcome.

For more information or to make an appointment, call 617-471-9586.

SCOTT DEWARE

is a good example:

A man was walking down a road enjoying the scenery and did not see an approaching car. The driver blew his horn but the man kept on walking, unaware of the oncoming car. The driver used his brakes and lightly tapped the man down. The scared driver immediately stopped and when he saw the man was unhurt, he immediately condemned the man harshly. In a moment's time, however, the driver was ashamed of his hostile words. The driver discovered the pedestrian was deaf and obviously could not hear the horn...

Yes, biting words can often be spoken before we realize the true circumstances. Is it not best to exercise caution before reaching a conclusion - which could be wrong?...

Francis G. Daley, 86,

Retired Army Major

A funeral Mass for Francis G. Daley, 86, of Quincy, a retired Army major, will be celebrated tomorrow (Friday) at 9 a.m. at St. Ann's Church, Wollaston.

He died July 6 at the Brockton Veterans Administration Medical Center.

Mr. Daley served in the Army for 28 years, retiring in 1965. During World War II, Daley was in charge of all small boats in New York Harbor and when the tug boat operators went on strike, he and his smaller boats docked the Queen Mary. Incidentally, at sailing time, Daley successfully backed up the Queen Mary out into the stream without any help and took off for England.

Also, while stationed in Okinawa, a tanker, which had been driven ashore by a typhoon, was about to be abandoned when Daley volunteered to get it off if he could obtain the use of a bulldozer. The Navy thought he was crazy, but loaned him one.

Your Social SecuritySocial Security:
A Plan For All Seasons

By LAURIE ZASTROW

Do you have a seasonal job?

Landscaping, farming, construction work or a part-time job at the local ice cream shop may be seasonal jobs. Even though a job may be temporary or seasonal, it's important that you and your employer pay Social Security taxes. Social Security isn't seasonal, and it isn't just retirement -- it's protection that extends through all seasons.

As a young worker with a seasonal job, you may not be thinking about what will happen if you can't work because you are severely disabled due to a sports injury, vehicle accident or illness or if you die at an early age. Unfortunately, tragedy knows no age. It is possible for a young person who has worked and paid Social Security taxes for as few as 1^{1/2} years to be eligible for disability benefits and for his/her family to be eligible for survivors benefits.

And, Social Security coverage has another important feature. Unlike other benefits, it is portable. It moves with you from job to job throughout your career. Even if you don't use it now, your earnings become part of your lifetime earnings record. It's your total earnings, not the amount of taxes you paid or the number of credits you have, that determine your benefit amount.

What do you have to do to be insured under Social Security? You and your employer share the responsibility for reporting your earnings. If you earn over $780 a year, you and your employer are required to pay Social Security taxes. Your employer deducts Social Security taxes automatically from your earnings, matches the amount of your deduction and reports the total to Social Security.

You may think that paying Social Security taxes is something you can't afford because your employment is seasonal or your income is limited. The truth is, you can't afford not to pay your Social Security taxes. If you don't pay Social Security taxes, you won't qualify for benefits for yourself or your family when you stop working because of age or disability or death.

For more information, visit our website at www.ssa.gov, or call us toll free at 1-800-772-1213 to speak to a representative between the hours of 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. on business days.

(Laurie Zastrow is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

The project consists of demolition of existing boiler systems (3) at Snug Harbor Elementary Schools and (2) at the Squantum Elementary School; furnishing two new boiler systems at each school; removal of all demolished component parts and debris; installation of two new boiler units and appurtenances at each site, including all piping and breeching connections; removal of all asbestos from boilers, piping, etc. asbestos exit testing, and all else incidental to provide fully operational systems in all respects for the heating season commencing on October 15, 2000.

Bids will be received until 11:00 AM local time on July 21, 2000 in the offices of the Commissioner of Public Works, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169, at which time and place all bids will be publicly opened and read aloud.

Mailed Bids should be sent to the Department of Public Works, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169 and received before the date and time specified above, for receipt of general bids.

All work shall be performed in accordance with the 780 CMR Massachusetts State Building Code, as last revised, and all other industry standards and regulations, unless specified or directed otherwise.

Refundable deposit of $25.00 (certified check or money order) is required for each set of Contract Documents. Bidders requesting Contract Documents by mail shall pay an additional non-refundable amount of $10.00 per set to cover shipping and handling costs. All checks shall be made payable to the City of Quincy.

The Contract Documents may be obtained during the business hours from 9:00 AM to 3:30 PM at the Offices of the Commissioner of Public Works, Contracts/Bidding Division, 55 Sea Street, Quincy, MA 02169 on or after July 6, 2000.

General bids shall be accompanied by a bid security in the amount of five percent (5%) of the total value of the bid in the form described in the Instructions to Bidders. The Successful Bidder shall be required to furnish a one hundred percent (100%) Construction Performance Bond and a one hundred percent (100%) Payment and Materials Bond from a surety company acceptable to the City. The bidding and award of this contract shall be in full compliance with Massachusetts General Law, Chapter 149, as last revised.

No bidder may withdraw the bid within 60 calendar days after the actual date of the opening of the bids.

All prospective bidders must be certified by the Division of Asset Management (DCAM) [formerly the Division of Capital Planning & Operations (DCPO)] in the Plumbing category. The bid will only be valid when accompanied by a Certificate of Eligibility issued by the DCPO, showing that the Bidder has been approved to bid on projects of the size and nature of that advertised, and an update statement summarizing the Bidder's record for the period between the latest certification and the date the Bidder submits a Bid for this Project.

All Federal/State and City of Quincy regulations in relation to Minimum Wage Rates, Minority Work Force, Equal Employment Opportunity and Employment of Quincy Residents, and Apprenticeship Training must be complied with.

Failure to comply with these requirements may render the bid non-responsive, and thus ineligible for further consideration. No waiver for any portion of these provisions will be granted. The City reserves the right to waive any informality in or to reject any or all bids if deemed in the best interest of the City. The City does not condone submission of unbalanced bids. Such bids may be summarily rejected.

Neighbors, Groups Agree On Need To Fill Granite Rail

the Quincy Conservation Commission Wednesday, July 19.

Those in attendance included members of the Friends of The Blue Hills, members of the Quincy Quarries Advisory Committee, representatives of the Appalachian Mountain Club, and neighborhood residents.

For the most part, debate centered not on filling the quarry but on the specifics: where to replicate lost wetlands; where to place hand-capped and general parking; how to best accommodate the large group of climbers who make use of the rock ledges; and what, if any, long-term plans the MDC has for the use and upkeep of the park.

"We're trying to preserve the historic integrity of the area," said David Hodgdon of both the QOAC and the FOTBH. "These folks (the MDC and the city) need to get their act together and come up with a plan jointly," a reference to the fact that the now filled Swingles Quarry, owned by the city and with parking of its own, is not included in the MDC Master Plan for Big Granite Rail. "Where do you go to a park and find a parking lot in the middle of it?"

QOAC member Larry Sodano addressed perceptions that his group, since it filed an appeal two years ago to stop MDC draining of the quarry, was against draining it now, which Sodano said was false. "The climbers, in a nutshell, are all for it (the filling)," Sodano said, explaining that the original appeal was the only way his group could play any role in the decision-making process at the time. "We are pragmatic. We are not going to oppose the filling of the park, but we do see this as an opportunity for input, a chance for a win/win situation."

The current MDC plan calls for draining of the remaining 40 feet of water in Big Granite Rail by mid-summer and filling the quarry in with 825,000 tons of Central Artery Project (Big Dig) fill. The MDC would receive $1 of the $16 per ton tipping fee, which would create an $825,000 "expendable trust" specifically earmarked for the future upkeep of the park. Gray emphasized that this money, by law, could be used for no other purpose and that it could be enhanced by public and private contributions.

The plan also calls for replication of wetlands lost by the fill-in and the destruction of the unstable stone wall perched above one quarry which is comprised of unusable granite blocks from quarrying days.

Brian Donahue, senior program manager for the adjacent Quarry Hills Associates 27-hole golf course, has been given more scope and is now also a consultant for the Big Granite Rail Quarry filling project.

Donahue said the fill was a necessity for two primary reasons: an unstable wall connecting the now-filled

Swingles Quarry and the unfilled Big Granite Rail Quarry, which could cause a rockslide and wall collapse; and the fact that, with the discovery of, in places, 30 feet of timber, cars, and debris, the quarry is now technically a solid waste landfill and, by law, must be filled and capped. "This will solve at least one environmental problem and many safety problems," Donahue said.

Pat Flynn of the MDC Reservations Division agreed that, much to his disappointment, the site was indeed a landfill and that filling it was the only first step. "We can't guarantee you a thing here tonight," Flynn said, referring to future fiscal commitments. "But filling the quarry is the catalyst. There's nothing there now but a very dangerous pit."

Flynn also added that he'd "much rather 2,000 tourists than two teenage punks diving off to escape the police."

Many in the audience took issue with the calling of the quarry a "dump" or "landfill" and blamed years of mismanagement for making it that way. "There's no way replicated wetlands can replace the crystal clear water of those quarries," argued Thomas Palmer, a representative from the FOTBH. "There seems to be an open season on water in the reservations."

But Palmer also made clear his wish to end the tragedies so common to the quarries. "This is an opportunity to end the horror story of so many needless deaths, which is the primary benefit (of the filling)," Palmer acknowledged. "But there are also downsides. We're 'Disney-fying' the whole area. Is that really what we want from our reservations?"

One part of the plan which especially pleased climbers was that the fill will only go up to the historic water line of 170 feet and that many of the ledges and climbing routes will be left intact.

Some residents suggested the filling in of all the quarries except the Bunker Hill Quarries, arguing that they were the only ones of true historic value. "That (Bunker Hill Quarries) is a beautiful site, and it's worth looking into," Gray said.

Gray was optimistic about the July 19 hearing of the Quincy Conservation Commission. "We'll work on it (the proposal) from now until the 19th as much as we can and hopefully come up with some alternatives."

The meeting took an awkward turn early on when friends and family members brought up the case of Karen Hammond, 21, of South Boston, who disappeared in 1994 and is thought, by some, to possibly be in the quarry.

Gray responded to pointed questions by saying that the Norfolk County DA's Office, after an extensive search, no longer considered the quarry a crime scene and was in support of the MDC's plans. "I would say that question would have to be referred to the governor's office," Gray added.

The MDC needs approval from the Quincy Conservation Commission, the Massachusetts Environmental Protection Agency, and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and says time is of the essence because Big Dig fill will only be available until September 1.

Written comments on the plan can be sent to the QCC, MEPA by July 14, or the engineers at: Gregory Penta at the New England District Office, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 696 Virginia Rd., Concord 01742.

CHECKED YOUR BRAKE FLUID LATELY?

It is a simple matter of popping the hood and checking the master cylinder to inspect the condition of a vehicle's brake fluid. If the normally clear fluid is dark, it should be drained and replaced. In fact, it is a good idea to flush the braking system every 2 to 3 years (sooner, if the owner's manual so indicates) as a preventive measure. Because brake fluid attracts moisture, any water that gets into the system will eventually rust and damage brake parts from the inside. Flushing the system of contaminated brake fluid on a regular basis is a good way to avoid an expensive rebuild of the system with a simple and relatively inexpensive flush of the brake fluid.

LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO should be your full service auto care center for most every system in your car. If you need us to look at any system in your car or truck, including your brake system, our ASE Certified service technicians have the skills to handle it. We also use the ALLData CD-Rom based system for the very latest in maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. You'll find us located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Hours: Mon-Fri 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: When topping off brake fluid in the reservoir, make sure the replacement fluid is compatible with the original brake fluid. DOT-3 brake fluid does not mix with DOT-5 silicone fluid, for instance.

Pinnacle Crashes Into Classroom Pupils Just Left Lightning Hits Bethany Church, Causes Over $100,000 Damage

A lightning bolt hit Bethany Congregational Church, Spear and Coddington Sts., Quincy Center, during Thursday afternoon's thunderstorm, causing more than $100,000 in damage, officials said.

A 600-pound chunk of a solid concrete pinnacle on the steeple was sent crashing down inside the church into the classrooms of the Montessori School for Early Learning, leaving a four foot by four foot hole in the roof above.

Fortunately, the students had left a short time earlier, said Fire Chief Thomas Gorman.

The pinnacle destroyed the classroom and caused damage one floor below to the Quincy Teen Mothers program where empty cribs lay pushed against the wall.

Again, fortunately, there were no mothers or children there at the time.

Rev. William Harding, pastor, said, "It's just an absolute blessing that no one was hurt. God was truly with us."

There was extensive water damage caused by rain cascading through numerous holes left in the church's battered roof, another victim of the shattered pinnacle.

There was at least three inches of water in the basement.

"It's not just one place; it's everywhere," Harding said after surveying the damage. "This is going to cost a fortune to repair."

"The whole side of the building just lit up," said one frazzled parishioner who had witnessed the lightning bolt. "I thought a bomb had gone off, and people were screaming."

Later, when inspecting the hole left by the 600-pound chunk, the same parishioner chuckled softly and said, "It's like someone threw a VW Bug through our roof. Thank God the gargoyles were protecting us."

Although Harding estimated there were at least 15 people in the church at the time of the lightning bolt, there were no injuries reported.

The church, Harding said, has spent roughly $800,000 the past five years re-pointing its tower and repairing its roof.

The Bethany Steeple, one of the highest points in Quincy Center, is 120 feet tall.

Grass Clippings Pick-Up Remains A Hot Issue

As the summer heats up, the ongoing debate over the disposal of grass clippings and yard waste becomes more and more an issue in the city.

Or so say city councillors whose constituents have been calling and complaining that the DPW's one pick-up per month, though better than nothing, simply isn't enough to do the job.

"This will probably go down as the issue of the summer," declared Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott, who hailed the city's DPW as a state model for

'No Need To Rush'

McCauley Puts Brakes On Bonds

By CRAIG SALTERS

City Councillor Frank McCauley put the brakes on all but one bond issue at Monday night's City Council meeting, arguing that only a $300,000 bond addressing concerns at the Marshall School merited immediate consideration.

That particular issue will be discussed Sept. 5 at a 7 p.m. meeting of the Finance Committee, of which McCauley is chairman, complete with an update by Councillor Daniel Raymond on progress solving traffic and congestion problems at the elementary school on Moody St.

"There's no need to rush through this," McCauley said of the bond issues, explaining that he was not opposed to any item per se but that his objections simply gave him "more time to sit down with (Auditor) Michael McFarland and understand these issues better."

McCauley did add, however, that "the prioritization has got to start somewhere."

McCauley's parliamentary objections, which automatically tabled the remaining four bond issues totaling $1.7 million until the council's next meeting Sept. 5, came as no surprise to Mayor Sheets or to City Auditor Michael McFarland, who both agreed that the Marshall School situation was the only truly time-sensitive concern.

"The Marshall School is the only item which presents a time-frame problem," Sheets said of the congestion issues there. "We want to solve that problem before the start of the school year."

McFarland, who at Monday night's meeting presented a 10-year bond plan for the city factoring in existing commitments with possible bond obligations, said a Sept. 5 date allowed more than enough time to discuss the bond issues and

10-Year Bonding Plan Submitted To City Council

City Auditor Michael McFarland submitted an updated 10-year bonding plan to the City Council Monday night which calls for a 10-year proposed debt schedule totaling $104,100,000.

The plan factors in existing debt obligations and $88 million in unbonded but committed obligations for a new Quincy High School ($54 million), new Central Middle School ($24 million), and a renovated Sterling Middle School ($10 million), which are slated for opening in the falls of 2004, 2006, and 2007, respectively.

Those three school projects, McFarland emphasized, will eventually receive 63 percent reimbursements from the state. In fact, McFarland noted, the state is already reimbursing the city roughly $930,000 for construction work at the Marshall, Bernazzani, Parker, and Beechwood Knoll Schools, with an additional $336,000 reimbursement expected next year for construction at Point Webster Elementary School.

Outside the city's major obligations, an additional $17.1 million in anticipated

A WREATH from the White House was placed on the tomb of John Quincy Adams in a ceremony last week at First Parish Church, also known as "Church of the Presidents." The wreath laying ceremony marked the 233rd birthday anniversary of John Quincy Adams, sixth President of the United States. Newton Resolve Keeps Tabs On Tattoo Legislation

Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton sponsored a resolve at Monday night's council meeting requesting Mayor James Sheets to form a committee to inform and educate Quincy residents about a bill pending before the State Legislature which would legalize tattooing in the state.

Newton said the resolution, which passed unanimously and was referred to both the mayor and City Solicitor Stephen McGrath, is an attempt to make residents aware of the issue, pro or con, and give the city some control over zoning and public health issues.

Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott voiced his support of the resolve, adding that the matter was also before the State Supreme Judicial Court and a decision on the issue could come as early as this fall.

recycling but joined a chorus of his colleagues in requesting a solution to this, literally, growing problem.

The councillors voiced their displeasure on the issue as part of an 8-0 positive vote on a joint resolve by Councillors Joseph Newton and Stephen Durkin requesting the Public Works Committee to work with the DPW to come up with a better policy on grass clippings.

Newton himself brought in close to 600 signatures from residents asking for assistance on the issue and said there were still more signatures to come.

The resolve was sent to said committee and will be discussed in early August with the hopes of solving the problem for next year.

Meanwhile, councillors say, residents are up in arms about BFI's decision this spring to stop picking up yardwaste for disposal, a policy mandated by the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) for almost 10 years but only recently enforced.

"This is not a proper way to encourage people to recycle," Councillor Daniel Raymond said of the DPW's request that residents haul their clippings down to its site off Sea St.

"If everyone in this city recycled their grass clippings, we would have, not a nightmare of Elm St., but a nightmare on Sea St."

Raymond, who first brought up the potential problems of DPW policy at a June council meeting, agreed with fellow councillors Newton and McDermott that once a month was "inadequate" and was both a neighborhood blight problem and a health issue.

Speaking practically,

Raymond urged Lester Gerry, the DPW's director of Building and Construction management, who spoke on the issue, to at least consider better signage for the DPW so that residents would be able to locate it more easily.

Gerry, who said it costs the city $23,000 for each additional week BFI collects yardwaste, said that some alternatives, such as Newton's suggestion of summer help led by an experienced DPW driver, were not feasible (in that instance, because of the cost of a truck) but that other options, such as letting all vendors, including BFI, bid for a contract, were being explored.

Gerry also said that those residents unable to make the trip to Sea St. could call the DPW offices and their clippings would be picked up by DPW crews.

DRIVING AMBITIONS

An estimated one-third of all new vehicles offers a four-wheel-drive option. The all-wheel-drive (AWD) offered on some sedans, wagons, minivans and SUVs distributes power to all four wheels according to driving conditions.

Unlike 4WD, AWD lacks a low range that permits real off-roading. The permanent 4WD on some SUVs has a center differential with automatic (un)locking for added traction and a low range for off-roading. Selectable full-time 4WD, offered on some SUVs and pickups, allows selection of 2WD or full-time 4WD and includes a locking differential and a low range. Part-time 4WD, offered on most pickups and many SUVs, allows selection of 2WD or 4WD and can engage in 4WD while moving and have a low range for off-road.

LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO invites your inquiries about most anything connected with the care of your car. Quincy After School Child Care Receives $1,000 For Ward 2 Use Councillor Daniel Raymond said he has donated $1,000 of Ward 2 mitigation funds to Quincy After School Child Care, with funds specifically earmarked for qualifying Ward 2 families.

"This is a great service," Raymond said of the program, which provides quality after-school day care for roughly 300 students per week at eight school sites across the city. "We want to continue to support services to help single mothers or young parents work and care for their families."

With the exception of the Ward 2 designation, Raymond said, the donation will do the same as all donations to the QASCC scholarship fund: subsidize the ever-increasing cost of day care to provide options and opportunities to the families who need it most.

"The idea is that parents can work without worry," said Doug Veeder, executive director of the program, who added that the program's day care costs are based on a sliding scale based on a family's ability to pay.

The existing budget, Veeder said, provides for a $50 per week average subsidy for families, but Veeder said the program now wants to reach out to members of the Quincy community to provide increased offsets of day care costs.

Veeder said all contributors will receive a thank-you letter suitable for framing and have their name placed on a contributors' "Wall of Fame" at the QASCC's newly renovated offices.

Jo-Ann Bragg, vice chairwoman of the School Committee and business manager for Quincy After School Child Care, said the fact that the programs are housed within the school system streamlines the entire process and eliminates transportation worries for parents. "In some respects, it's almost like an extension of the school day," Bragg said.

Bragg added that the program will soon add a ninth child care site at the Wollaston Elementary School.

Mitigation funds are funds paid by developers and other companies to compensate an area for such problems as increased traffic, truck volume, noise, or other neighborhood disruptions.

WARD 2 COUNCILLOR Daniel Raymond (left) recently presented $1,000 in mitigation funds to Quincy After School Child Care to offset tuition costs for deserving parents of the Ward 2 community. New Law Raises Bingo Prize Limit To $3,000

A law designed to increase the viability of local Bingo games was passed recently by the Legislature.

The law, said State Rep. Stephen Tobin and State Treasurer Shannon O'Brien, chairwoman of the Lottery Commission, makes three major changes, the most notable of which is increasing the prizes that can be offered, with a maximum progressive payout of $3,000.

"I am delighted to have supported this important legislation so that our local Bingo games and the causes they support have this important fundraising tool," said Tobin. "Increasing prizes and reducing unnecessary restrictions should help this area's charitable institutions not only raise money, but restore Bingo as a traditional community event."

The new law includes three major initiatives: first, it increases prizes to include progressive games with payouts of up to $3,000, an increase from the current $500 maximum; second, it allows for a larger pool of people eligible to be volunteer workers at Bingo events; and third, it allows broader discretion in the use of charitable gaming tickets.

"This new law represents a sound compromise between the concerns of Bingo advocates, industry experts, and the Legislature and should provide a necessary lifeline to a struggling institution," said O'Brien. "Bingo is part of the fabric of many of the communities in this state, and I appreciate the Legislature's support in providing the Lottery with the tools necessary to return it to viability."

Bingo has experienced steady declines since 1992, when $243 million in revenue was generated by 144,623 plays per week at 763 licensed organizations. In 1999, those figures dropped to 87,000 plays at 531 organizations, generating only $156.5 million.

The law is the first significant change to Bingo laws in the Commonwealth in over 20 years.

A Short Ballot (Really Short!)

This year's primary election ballot may be the shortest one ever.

Just one contest -- with just three candidates.

That's all folks.

No state senate or state representative contests. Or anything else.

The Norfolk County Register of Deeds race to succeed Barry Hannon who is stepping down after 30 years, will be the only political show in town Sept. 19.

The three candidates on the ballot—all Democrats: City council President Paul Harold, Mary Ellen crats running for re-election without opposition.

No primary action for the County Clerk of Courts post Nicolas Barbadoro is leaving after 19 years.

But Democrat Walter Trimly of Milton, Barbadoro's assistant, and Daniel Dewey of Sonoma Rd., Squantum, chairman of the Quincy Republican City Committee will square off in November.

No primary contest for the 10th Congressional seat. Quincy Democrat incumbent William Delahunt and his Republican challenger, Erick Bleiken of South Yarmouth, formerly of Hingham, will go at it in November.

So, with only one contest and three candidates Sept. 19, does the city get to save a few election bucks?

"No," says City Clerk Joseph Shea. "We still have to have the same number of poll workers, and the same number of police to watch and bring in the ballot boxes."

And, he notes, there still has to be as many ballots printed as there are registered voters in case that miracle election day arrives when every single registered voter in town actually votes.

Quincy has 51,656 registered voters as of the latest count and could pick up a few more before the Aug. 30 deadline for registering for the Sept. 19 primary.

So there will be least 51,656 ballots ready that day. And what is the price tag on this one-contest, three name election going to be?

"About the same as any primary election open to voters city-wide," says Shea. "About $50,000."

And what kind of a voter turnout can be expected for this one?

"I would like to see 20 percent," says Shea. "But at this point I'm not even going to try to predict what it will actually be."

Some observers think it could dip close to the single digit area.

It apparently will be up to the three candidates themselves to generate voter interest in the next few weeks or the turnout could be the lightest ever.

And the results the quickest ever.

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS has a new private secretary.

Joan Pritchard succeeds Lisa Barry who is moving to San Francisco.

Lisa had replaced Kerry Knapp who now is assistant to the mayor, succeeding Helen Murphy who recently decided to seek new career opportunities.

Joan comes well prepared.

She was with the Quincy Housing Authority eight years as administrative secretary and affirmative action officer under past Executive Director John (Jake) Comer and present Executive Director Jack Mather.

And how does she like the new job and new scenery?

"Love it," she beams.

SENATOR Michael Morrissey has a "Land Cruise" fundraiser coming up Thursday, July 27, 6 to 8 p.m. at the Water Works, Marina Bay. Featuring a summertime cookout and entertainment by the "Fat City Band." Donation $20 per person.

COLLINS

Cronin, vice chairman of the Quincy Zoning Board of Appeals, and County Commissioner Peter Collins of Milton.

The winner will face Bruce Olsen of Stoughton, the only Republican seeking the job and thus gets a free primary ride to November.

Missing from the ballot are such names as state Senator Michael Morrissey and state Reps. Bruce Ayers, Ron Mariano and Steve Tobin.

They have no opposition, Democrat or Republican, which means they are assured of keeping their Beacon Hill seats unless a write-in or sticker candidate turns up with a pocketful or two of miracles.

Medals Of Honor

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
On C-Span after the opening of the D-Day Museum in New Orleans, I watched President Clinton at 10:45 p.m. present Medals of Honor to various veterans of their relatives.

Prior to the presentation to each recipient, a man to the rear of the President began reading the accomplishments of each veteran of the famous 442nd Regimental Combat Team. Some of the accomplishments sounded very similar and there were no records to substantiate the claims. All records prior to 1973 at the Record Center were destroyed by fire in St. Louis.

No mention was made of any decorations they were previously awarded until Senator Daniel Inouye, then a captain, approached the President. At that time, the man in the rear stated that Capt. Inouye received a Purple Heart, a Silver Star and a Distinguished Service Cross — he deserved it because he lost an arm.

I helped train the men of the 100th Battalion in Camp Shelby, MS, and they were good soldiers, but they never fought in France. They fought in Italy, especially at Monte Cassino where they suffered heavy casualties. For any medal to be awarded, a General Order must be issued.

I remember Saburo Tanamachi when in the States. I also remember Dan Inouye.

Now take the case of James Cadigan of Hingham who was denied the Medal of Honor by Secretary of the Army Caldera after his Commanding Officer, Capt. Melvin Mason put him in for it. All Cadigan did was pick up a machine gun with extra ammunition and charged the two German machine gunners, killing them plus another 55 while 80 more surrendered to him. Caldera said "this was normal for a platoon leader to do." Is this justice? Cadigan was wounded at the time.

Property Owners Have Right To Pave Front Yards

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
In responding to the letter submitted recently by Mr. Greg Newton, I would first like to commend Mr. Newton on his pride and admiration of our fine city. I, indeed, share in this sentiment and am proud of the neat and trim appearance of my landscaping. Where we part company, however, is in our approach to the "yard-paving" issue.

To read the reports on the debate of this issue is to be both amused and horrified.

In analyzing this or any issue of public policy, it is important to argue at the fundamental level. This is to say that we must be diligent in our resistance to the natural tendencies to argue the "emotional" case. Arguments of emotion, of practicality, of what "looks good," or of what "feels good," or, of what costs less, are not necessarily arguments that advocate for our best interests. They are certainly the easier arguments to make, however.

At the core of this debate are the rights of private property owners to install a paving material on what is the front area of their property. Furthermore, Councillors McDermott and Raymond are asking if these property tax paying citizens of Quincy should be permitted to allow to rest on this surface their privately owned and registered automobile.

The notion that a government is permitted to enact legislation mandating that one may not place one's automobile on a certain portion of their property, particularly if that portion is surfaced with pavement, is truly a frightening prospect. Wouldn't this sort of socialistic government activity more readily drive people away from our city, Mr. Newton? I suggest that you, along with Councillors McDermott and Raymond, shift your concern towards advocating for personal freedom and liberty first and community aesthetics, second.

Quincy's Yesterdays Construction On Hancock Parking Area

By PAUL HAROLD

The first phase of construction began on the John Hancock parking area this week with the $32,000 rechanneling and covering of the Town Brook.

The Duane wrecking company was removing the last three buildings on the site as the city council approved the taking of the last properties.

Public Works Commissioner Charles Herbert expected that the lot could be paved before the cold weather set in. He asked for the cooperation of motorists not to park in the area during the construction phase.

GROSSMAN STRIKE NEAR END

It was expected that the month-long strike against Grossman's and 29 other lumber dealers in the northeast, would end this week. Major areas of disagreement were resolved with only three minor issues still in contention.

The major agreements involved a wage increase of nine cents an hour and the payment of time and a half on Saturdays and holidays.

Federal mediator John Sullivan of Quincy had called for a meeting of company and union officials to wrap up the last outstanding issues.

NO FRAUD IN REMICK'S STOCK SALE

Norfolk Probate Judge James Reynolds ruled there was no fraud in the sale of Remick's company stock between Edith Reynolds and her brother Frank Remick.

The Remicks' company was part of the estate of Alfred Remick, with both Edith Reynolds and Frank Remick as beneficiaries. Following the purchase of her share of the company of her brother, Mrs. Reynolds claimed fraud and misrepresentation. The court, however, ruled that there was full disclosure concerning the value and operations of the company and that the stock was purchased at fair value.

Paul Reardon was the attorney for his neighbor, Frank Remick.

Stuffed Artichokes With Clams

Do you ever run out of ideas on what to prepare when you're having a hungry group over for dinner? After my smart shopper husband found some artichokes on sale last week, I prepared them a bit different, with clams.

I have to confess, the clams were already on the shelf and I wanted to create a different stuffing. You can eliminate clams, as other ingredients can be added, including mushrooms.

Stuffed Artichokes With Clams

- 6 artichokes
- 1 can minced clams
- 6 slices of bread (soaked in water)
- 1/2 cup seasoned bread crumbs
- 3 tablespoons tomato sauce
- smidgen of garlic powder
- 1/4 cup grated Romano or Parmesan cheese
- salt and pepper to taste
- stems of artichokes (cut up after boiling) (optional)
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- some extra tomato sauce for bottom of the pan
- 1 cup water for bottom of the pan.

Place the artichokes in a large pan cover with water and boil until they are a darker green (about 10 minutes).

While they are boiling, soak and squeeze the bread Place in a bowl and add all the ingredients except the oil. Blend until mixture is the consistency of mashed potatoes.

Cool the artichokes, clip the sharp edges off the leaves with a scissors, and after removing the stems, they should sit well in a pan.

Open the top of each artichoke and place the stuffing. I usually place the stuffing in each layer of leaves and tighten. In a roasting pan, put the water and extra sauce on the bottom.

Arrange the artichokes side by side and on top of each, sprinkle a bit of the olive oil. Cover and bake in a 350 degree oven for about 45 minutes (or until leaves are tender).

You can also cook them on top of the stove well covered for about the same time. When served, they can either be cut in halves or enjoyed as a whole. It may sound like a lot of work, but it's worth it if you like artichokes as we do.

Storyteller Guy Peartree At Adams Shore Library July 25

The 14th season of the Summer Storytellers Series continues on Tuesday, July 25, at 7 p.m. at the Adams

Shore Branch Library, 519 Sea St., with storyteller Guy Peartree.

Peartree's return to Quincy will feature a program of stories from his Cherokee and African-American roots including such favorites as "Wiley and the Hairy Man."

At the same time a Pajama Time Storyhour with Dottie Moynihan will be offered for younger siblings accompanied by an adult and families with children under the age of five. Fish and other ocean creatures will be the theme. The entire group will participate in creating a mural of the Rainbow Fish.

Other performers in the Summer Storytellers Series include: Lauren Carson, Aug. 1; Jennifer Smith, Aug. 8; and storyteller and musician Scott Kepnes, Aug. 15. Pajama Time with Dottie Moynihan will continue on these evenings with stories from favorite authors such as Marc Brown and Eric Carle.

The programs are sponsored by an LSTA grant from the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners and a Quincy Arts Lottery grant from the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Swing/Jazz Vocalist In Concert At Library

Krisanthi Pappas, a swing/jazz vocalist accompanied by a jazz combo, will perform Thursday, July 27, from 12:30 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. on the front lawn of the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Square.

Her performance will feature popular swing and jazz standards, some from her favorites George and Ira Gershwin and Ella Fitzgerald. Adults and children are welcome.

A full-time entertainer, Pappas has performed throughout the United States and in the Caribbean. Locally she's a favorite at two of Boston's top jazz clubs, Scullers Jazz Club and the Regattabar. Her latest CD "Krisanthi Pappas -- A Centennial Tribute to George and Ira Gershwin" features Herb Pomeroy on trumpet and John Payne on saxophone, clarinet, and flute. Her own rhythm section joins these well known musicians.

The Library's concert series continues on Aug. 3 with guitarist Michael Nix, followed Aug. 10 by Inca Son playing music of the Andes. Concertgoers are welcome to bring lawn chairs, blankets, and picnics. In case of rain the concerts will be held at the Adams Shore Branch Library, 519 Sea St., Quincy. Both sites are accessible.

Concerts are free and are funded in part by the Quincy Cultural Council, a local agency supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Civil War Re-enactment At Fort Independence July 23

The Adams National Historic Park, Castle Island Association and Metropolitan District Commission will host a Civil War re-enactment with costumed interpreters and historical re-enactors Sunday, July 23 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Fort Independence on Castle Island, South Boston.

The public is invited to participate in the re-enactment which will focus on what life was like for soldier and civilian before and during the American Civil War. Participants may also meet members of the 1st Massachusetts Battalion, made up of units from the 1st Massachusetts Cavalry, the 22nd Massachusetts Infantry, and the 54th Massachusetts Glory Brigade, as well as Confederate forces, at their camps.

Festivities for the day will include military skirmishes, Civil War era games, period music, and an address by President Abraham Lincoln.

The program is free of charge. For more information, call the Adams National Historical Park Visitor Center at (617) 770-1175.

'Jazz Easy' At Hancock Park

The public is invited to "Jazz Easy," a five-piece band performing on the grounds of Hancock Park Rehabilitation and Nursing Center, 164 Parkway, Quincy, Thursday, July 20 from 6:15 to 7:15 p.m. Light refreshments will be served and community members are asked to bring lawn chairs. In the event of rain, listen to WJDA radio 1300 AM for cancellation.

Build 100-Foot Fence In Connecticut 21 NQHS Freshmen Volunteer For Habitat

Joel Rivera and his brother Christopher have a new dog thanks to 21 North Quincy High School freshmen who recently participated as Habitat for Humanity volunteers.

The North Quincy High students built a 100-foot long fence for the Rivera family of Bridgeport, CT, as part of a two-day Habitat for Humanity work session.

The fence allows a new puppy to run safely in the Rivera family's back yard.

The students, who volunteered on Bridgeport's East Side, were members of Ron Erikson and Kipp Caldwell's Advanced Geometry Classes. The students are: Sine Callanan, Christine Cheong, Clive Chung, David Dao, Elizabeth Favorito, Lori Ferris, Nicole Johnson, John Ngo, Joe Ngo, Julia Nguyen, Norman Yuen, Frances Chow, Romina Espinola, Richard Lee, Gregg Minezzi, Kaite Mo, Kurt Nason, Nina Nguyen, Caitlyn Slowe, Nancy Yankun, and Michael Yu.

The diverse group of students, Erikson said, worked well together and impressed the people in Bridgeport.

"We are using North Quincy High School as our model program," said Jeffrey Carter, construction supervisor for the large Habitat for Humanity Program of Greater Bridgeport. "Each year Ron Erikson and Kipp Caldwell bring a wonderful, spirited group of hard workers. Their school and their community should be very proud of them."

"We are very proud of our students," said Caldwell. "They did a wonderful job, building that 100-foot long fence, doing some brick work and painting."

Erikson said he hoped that volunteering would become a part of his students' educational experience and carry on into their adult lives. "These students are in Advanced Level classes and, if they continue to work hard, they will be successful adults with excellent careers," Erikson said. "Kipp and I want the students to see how fortunate they are in comparison to others. We hope that this volunteer experience will encourage them to make volunteering a regular part of their lives."

Erikson said the students raised over $2,000 to cover expenses such as food and transportation and still make a large donation to the Habitat cause. On behalf of his students Erikson thanked all who contributed and gave special thanks to Sean Moran of VERC Car Rentals of Quincy for the vans used by the group.

The North Quincy students, Erikson said, are proud of a job well done.

And Bridgeport's Joel and Christopher Rivera are now the proud owners of a new puppy.

Outback Steakhouse Opening Raises $8,450 For Father Bill's Place

The opening celebration at the Outback Steakhouse, 227 Parking Way, last week netted a badly needed $8,450 for Father Bill's Place, which is bursting at the seams with homeless men.

"It's really good for a one night, three hour fundraiser," said John Yazwinski, the executive director. "We are grateful to the Outback Steakhouse for their cooperation."

Fr. William McCarthy, after whom the shelter is named, expressed his gratitude to the Outback Steakhouse and Manager Ralph Vitale.

"They really over extended themselves to help us, he said. They showed a true and neighborly and charitable spirit for which we are most grateful."

Yazwinski said the two locations of the homeless shelter, the old Registry building at 38 Broad St. and the former St. John's School on Phipps Street, are averaging 110 people a night.

"We have only 95 beds so the others have to sleep on emergency cots in the dining room and in the hallways," he said.

Yazwinski said about 40 per cent of the homeless at Father Bill's Place are working poor who have low-paying jobs and are unable to find a permanent place to live.

Since Father Bill's Place accepts only individuals, many of the men with fami-

The opening of the Outback Steakhouse's first South Shore restaurant was held July 10, featuring a special array of complimentary food and drink with an Australian flavor.

A $15 donation accepted at the door went to benefit Father Bill's Place. More than 600 attended the benefit opening.

Fr. Bill's Place is sponsored by the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition.

Nature Tour Of Squantum Point Park Saturday

The Quincy Park Department's "Environmental Treasures of Quincy" program will conduct a nature tour of Squantum Point Park Saturday at 4 p.m.

Interested parties are asked to meet in the MDC parking lot directly adjacent to the park.

Squantum Point Park is an MDC-owned park located at the mouth of the Neponset River. The park features interesting natural features such as tidal flats, a salt marsh, beaches, and various species of plants and animals. It is the site of the old Dennison Air Field and some interesting features remain from the historical use of the property.

The MDC is planning to add walking paths and preserve Squantum Point Park as passive open space once work is completed by Massachusetts Electric and New England Power on the site. The MDC is working with the landscape architectural firm of Carol R. Johnson Associate in developing a design plan for this park.

This nature tour will be led by naturalist Tom Palmer. Palmer is a member of the Board of Directors for the Neponset River Watershed Association. All those people who arrive by an "environmentally friendly" mode of transportation, such as public transportation, bike or carpool, will be given a prize.

For more information on the Environmental Treasures of Quincy program, call the Quincy Park Department at 376-1254.

Historical Society Plans Provincetown Boat Trip debt has also been assumed, including: $6 million for the purchase of open space; $4 million for additional school renovation; $2 million for general building improvements; $1.8 million for the five-year Water Phase V project; $1.5 million for departmental equipment; and $800,000 for road work.

Concerning the anticipated debt, Mayor James Sheets singled out the $6 million expected to go towards the acquisition of open space in the city under Project Prosper, his aggressive open space initiative.

Sheets said that $2 million of those funds were earmarked for the clean-up of the 22 acres of property received in the city's High-point agreement, with the remaining $4 million going to Project Prosper. "This proposition (for open space acquisition) is one-of-kind," the mayor said. "It's never been done before in Quincy."

What's more, said Sheets, funds from the recently passed Hotel/Motel tax will pay the debt service on the purchase of open space after 2004, the first full year of its implementation.

McFarland pointed out that, after the local room occupancy tax and the various reimbursements are factored into the equation, the yearly net payments on the proposed debt service meet the mayor's goal of being less than five percent of the total estimated budget, the only exception being the 2001 payment, which is 5.15 percent of the total budget.

The plan was referred to the Finance Committee for study.

Estimated net yearly payments and percentages of budget are as follows:

2001: $9,416,052.68, 5.15 percent.
2002: $8,577,092.08, 4.48 percent.
2003: $7,976,843.77, 3.99 percent.
2004: $6,302,131.97, 3.02 percent.
2005: $8,519,314.44, 3.90 percent.
2006: $8,122,857.81, 3.56 percent.
2007: $8,789,891.92, 3.69 percent.
2008: $7,938,947.96, 3.19 percent.
2009: $8,645,477.48, 3.32 percent.
2010: $8,231,074.79, 3.03 percent.

Prayer Service For Eritrea, Ethiopia Held At St. Catherine's

Over 100 people attended a recent fundraiser and prayer service for peace in Eritrea and Ethiopia at St. Catherine's Greek Orthodox Church, 157 Beale St., Wollaston.

Rev. Andreas Markopoulos of St. Catherine's hosted the service and was joined by several other clergymen from the area.

Guest speaker was Mebrahtu Tewolde, chairperson of the Eritrean Peace Campaign, who discussed the ongoing war between the two countries and the plight of thousands left homeless by the war.

The two African nations have been fighting a bitter border war since 1998 and some death toll figures are as high as 100,000 with close to half a million refugees.

For more information, contact the non-profit Eritrean Development Foundation (EDF) at 1111 14th St., NW, Suite 1000, Washington, DC 20005, telephone (202) 408-6995.

'Opportunity Of A Lifetime' Says Edward McGuinness Drawing Superman A Super Job For Quincy Illustrator

By CRAIG SALTEKS

It's a bird, it's a plane, it's... Edward McGuinness? Admittedly, it doesn't have the same ring to it, but that's just fine with McGuinness, a Quincy resident responsible for drawing the DC Comics character known as Superman.

Yes, that Superman.

"It's just the grace of God," said McGuinness of his landing the most coveted job in comic book illustration in September of 1999. "I've always loved Superman but, in many ways, never thought the job was attainable. It's just been an amazing experience."

That experience started when New York based DC Comics, the General Motors of the comic book industry, launched a campaign to modernize its forelocked superhero for the next century and next millennium.

McGuinness had already built a small but successful reputation for himself in the industry. Starting with Vamparella, a comic he says he "wouldn't work on now" because the message conflicts with his personal beliefs, he moved on to illustrate Marvel's Wolverine '96, The Dead Pool series, The Fighting American, Cable, and The Hulk. At the time of the Superman offer, McGuinness was drawing Mr. Majestic for Wildstorm Comics.

"Mr. Majestic was an archetype of Superman," said McGuinness. "I never thought I'd get to draw Superman so I was drawing him vicariously through Mr. Majestic, doing things with him I'd do with Superman."

McGuinness, who says his style is heavily influenced by the Manga/Anime style so popular in Japan, was a perfect fit for the revamped Superman. "It was the right time," said McGuinness. "They were looking for a new approach and it all just came together."

But it almost didn't.

McGuinness, who has no formal art training but has been drawing for as long as he can remember, had already committed to six issues of Mr. Majestic when the call came from DC Comics.

"I was in a bind," he said. "This was an opportunity of a lifetime but I'd already made a commitment."

After much soul searching and with the help of his wife Michelle, McGuinness finally called DC Comics Editor Edward Berganza and turned down the offer.

McGuinness was as shocked as anyone, he said, when Berganza called him back to say DC Comics was willing to wait. "I couldn't believe it," he said.

The Superman comics, McGuinness said, are divided into four separate series: Superman, which McGuinness illustrates; The Man of Steel; The Adventures of Superman; and Action Comics. There are also several offshoots including Supergirl and Superboy.

"The process is a lot more in-depth than most people think," McGuinness said. "It's very specialized."

According to McGuinness, Superman begins with writer Jeph Lebo, who collaborated with McGuinness on Wolverine '96 and The Fighting American and recommended McGuinness for the Superman comics.

Lebo sends his storylines to New York where Berganza edits them and sends them to McGuinness. McGuinness then pencils in his drawings and sends them back to Berganza four or five pages at a time. Those drawings are then inked by Cam Smith, who lives in England, and again sent to Berganza in New York.

The process speeds up from there as the pages are scanned and sent to Tanya and Richard Horie, husband and wife colorists in California who colorize the images by computer. After that, the pages are sent back to New York for a final edit and printing.

The process, McGuinness said, is fairly time consuming, so much so that what he's drawing today won't hit the stands until December.

McGuinness says he's happy with the process, however, and the freedom he's given to draw Superman as he sees fit, borrowing much, he said, from not only Japanese comics but the Superman animated television series and the classic Superman comics of the 1930's and 1940's. That freedom, however, only goes so far.

"The rule is: Don't mess with the 'S'," McGuinness said with a laugh, noting DC Comics is very sensitive about Superman's famous chest shield.

On one occasion, McGuinness said, he drew a Superman with muscles flexed, creating a crease in the yellow shield, and was told to redraw it. "It's one of the world's most recognized icons," McGuinness said. "It's right up there with Mickey Mouse."

McGuinness said his plan for the future is just to do the best job he can for the next two years and then see what happens, adding that many of his illustrator heroes moved on after a two year period. "I'm comfortable with the two year plan," he said. "I can make a nice dent in the character, build a fan base. It's a very humbling experience to get your dream project. It's like, 'I have my prize, now what?'"

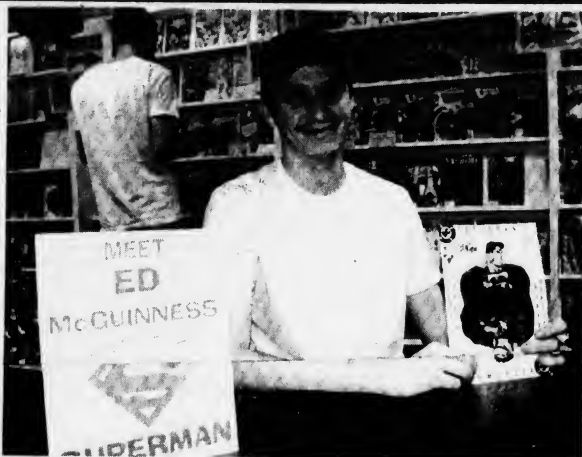

McGuinness said he didn't have one favorite comic of his own right now because he pretty much reads everything, although he does follow the careers and styles of other illustrators closely. "I look at more than I read," McGuinness said, adding that Quincy Center's New England Comics was a frequent stop because it was one of the best comics stores in the area.

McGuinness, who graduated from Stoughton High School, lives in Quincy with his wife Michelle and their two children.

Asked to give some advice to future artists and illustrators, McGuinness came right to the point:

"Keep doing what you're doing but keep it pure. Because there are going to be ups and downs, but when it becomes just a job, it's just not worth it."

The man of steel couldn't have said it better himself.

Beechwood Harbor Cruise Aug. 2

The Harbor Cruise planned by Beechwood on the Bay for Wednesday, Aug. 2 at 7 p.m. will benefit Quincy's "Older Elders," according to Don Uvanitte, president of the Beechwood board of directors.

"Quincy has a growing senior population as we all know," says Uvanitte. "Mayor Sheets and the city Planning Board identify that 27 per cent of the city's population is over 60, with an increasing percentage years and older." (75

These "older elders" often have special needs. Many "older elders" have a combination of needs, according to Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood. Mobility, vision, gearing and limiting health problems can make it difficult to live at home independently.

For almost 20 years, she notes, Beechwood, working closely with the city, has provided special services for seniors "at risk." The Elder Home Repair, designed to perform minor home repairs, enables seniors to remain independent in their own homes as long as possible.

"Installation of grab bars, often makes a critical difference," said Beals. "Project SAFE (Smoke Alarms for Elders) is another service designed to ensure the health and safety of our frailest citizens."

Increasing numbers of "older elders" are remaining in their own homes longer with in-home assistance, said Beals.

Requests for services have doubled in recent years at the Community Center. Community fundraising is essential to the continued expansion of the Alzheimer's Association, the Elder Home Repair Program, and other citywide services for "older elders" with special needs.

Tickets for the three-hour or $50 for two and are available at Beechwood and other locations throughout the city.

Children's Sand Castle Contest Saturday At Wollaston Beach

Tony's Clam Shop will host its annual children's sand castle contest on Wollaston Beach Saturday, July 22, from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Registration for the annual event will take place across from Tony's Clam Shop at 10:30 a.m. the day of the event. There is no cost to participate. Children are encouraged to bring their own pails and shovels.

In past years, the annual sand castle contest has attracted scores of children from throughout the city and South Shore. Prizes will be awarded to winning creations, compliments of Rhyme & Reason, the Quincy toy store. All children who participate receive a coupon for free ice cream from Tony's Clam Shop.

"This is an exciting event for us and for local families," said Karen Djerf of Tony's Clam Shop located on Quincy Shore Drive across from the beach. "Each year, we look forward to the smiling faces and wonderful sand castles that the children create. It is always a fun, festive, family event."

The sand castle contest is sponsored by Tony's Clam Shop, Matilda's Boardwalk Cafe, Rhyme & Reason, MDC Wollaston Beach Operations and the Ward Five Community Association.

The sand castle contest is one in a series of recreational opportunities sponsored by local civic organizations, businesses and the MDC. Others include:

Aug. 5, 10 a.m., Wollaston Beach Walk (with updates on water quality improvement).

Aug. 22, 10 a.m., Third Annual Wollaston Beach Volley Ball Challenge.

Aug. 23, noon, MDC Back to the Beaches Concert and Family Day.

In recent years, local civic organizations and businesses have taken a leadership role in sponsoring recreational events at Wollaston Beach for children, adults and families. These organizations have established a Wollaston Beach Cleanup and Recreation Fund through which these events and beach-related educational material are produced.

Puppeteer Donna Marie Performs Saturday At Sidewalk Festival

Puppeteer Donna Marie will perform two shows Saturday at the 30th Annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival, the first from 11 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and the second from 12 p.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Marie, who has performed several times at the festival and has also performed at the city's Christmas tree lighting, is a fan favorite amongst Quincy children, especially ages 3 to 10, and is the executive director of QCBPA. "She really draws engage young children and the children into her performance," Manning says. "It's wonderful."

Marie uses a combination of singing, dancing, and audience participation to engage young children and bring them into her world of puppetry.

Alternating in between Marie's shows will be "Balloon Man" Ken Shur-bane.

PUPPETEER DONNA MARIE returns Saturday to the Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival, using singing, dancing, and audience interaction to entertain the city's youngsters. "She's always been a fan favorite," says QCBPA Executive Director Maralin Manning.

Three Days Of Good Buys And Good Fun It's Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival Time

The Sidewalk Festival turns 30.

Yes, the 30th annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival -- a summer tradition of good buys, music, and entertainment -- begins today (Thursday), for a three-day run through Saturday.

The event, sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, will be held on Hancock St., which will be closed off to vehicular traffic from Granite St. up to Hancock Ct.

Shoppers will be able to stroll down the middle of Hancock St. dotted with 85 canopied booths and turned into a pedestrian mall, leisurely looking over merchandise in front of stores and at vendor and crafters' booths.

"30 years is a milestone, a real achievement," said QCBPA Executive Director Maralin Manning. "This year we're in the wake of the Tall Ships, but we don't need 'perfect 10' weather to make our event fun and entertaining. We have great variety in terms of events and shopping and we intend to make this our best Sidewalk Festival ever."

Entertainment and other activities are scheduled for 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. today (Thursday) and Friday and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

If you like music, downtown is the place to be these three days with a variety ranging from country western to reggae to jazz.

Featured performers are: The Darlings, from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Thursday night, sponsored by The Flatley Company. This national award-winning country western band makes a return appearance after last year's successful performance.

Also on Thursday's bill will be: The Vibe Jazz Quartet with Matthias Lupri, Noon to 2 p.m., sponsored by Eastern Bank; and The George Mel Trio, 2:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m., sponsored by Atlantic Property Management.

Jah Spirit, from 6 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Friday night, sponsored by Sherman Realty and Congress Ventures Group. This exciting, acoustic group entertains audiences everywhere with exuberant, authentic reggae music that is sure to please listeners of all ages.

Friday's bill also features: Quincy's own Juli Ford, Noon to 2 p.m., sponsored by State Street Bank; and Marianne Solivan's Jazz Trio, 2:30 to 4:30 p.m., sponsored by Citizens Bank.

Saturday the entertainment focuses on the children. Alternating from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. there will be live entertainment by Donna Marie, Puppeteer, and Ken Shurbane, The Balloon Man. These special children's activities are sponsored by SAR Engineering and Harbor Express.

Also performing Saturday will be The Stephanie Stone Ensemble, sponsored by Burgin, Platter, & Hurley Insurance.

Throughout the festival short children's entertainment, activities, and karate demonstrations are planned, as well as a police dog demonstration by the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

Along with the crafter and vendor booths, several sampling teams will be on hand to introduce their newest taste treats. But to keep people from overdoing it, the SuperFitness team will also be on hand to test physical strength and body fat status.

Ample free parking on Saturday, Manning added, makes this day and place the perfect choice to spend time with the whole family.

"It's going to be a great event," said Manning.

SHOPPERS LEISURELY STROLL down Hancock St. during last year's Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival sponsored by the Quincy Center Business Festival sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association. Hancock St. will again be closed off to vehicular traffic, turning it into a three-day pedestrian mall today (Thursday), Friday and Saturday.

The Festival Committee

A committee of Quincy Center Business and Professional Association members and staff planned this 30th annual Sidewalk Festival.

Joanne Falco, owner of Professional Cuts, Etc., chaired the committee which included:

Jeff Bertman, Rogers Jewelry; Stephen Blumberg, Stephen Leigh Jewelers; Caryn Smith, Caryn's Corner; Henry Bosworth, The Quincy Sun; Bill Morrill, Creative Fairs; Deanna

Gazarian, Phase II; Burt Towne, Burgin, Platner, Hurley Insurance; QCBPA

Executive Director Maralin Manning; and Marie Watts, QCBPA office secretary.

Hancock St. Closed For Sidewalk Festival

Hancock St. from Granite St. up to Hancock Ct. will be closed to vehicular traffic for the three-day Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival.

Hancock Ct. itself will be open.

That section of Hancock St. was scheduled to be closed from midnight Wednesday (last night) through 8 p.m. Saturday.

The area will be designated a "no parking tow zone" during the three days.

However, during the three-day period, time will be allowed for vendors and crafters to enter the blocked-off area to set up booths and other equipment and to dismantle them.

The Sidewalk Festival, the 30th sponsored by the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, opens today (Thursday) and will continue Friday and Saturday.

Entertainment and other activities will be from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. today and Friday and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday.

QUINCY SINGER and songwriter Juli Ford will appear in concert on center stage Friday from noon to 2 p.m., making her first Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival appearance. She has a new CD, "The Quiet House."

Children's Author Wainright At Abigail's Crossing Today

Noted children's author Richard Wainright will be available to sign purchases and talk about his books today (Thursday) from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Abigail's Crossing Gifts and Collectibles, 1350 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

There will also be a special story-time reading of Wainright's books by Elaine Gibbons, a fifth grade teacher at the Merrymount Elementary School.

Wainright's newly released book is entitled Messengers.

Wainright's appearance is just one of the ways Abigail's Crossing is marking the three-day Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival. From today (Thursday) until Saturday there will be face painting and balloons available for children with funds raised through these events donated to the Renovation Fund for The United First Parish Church.

Abigail's Crossing will also specially price several gift items, including a selection of Boyd's Bears.

Store hours during Sidewalk Festival Days are today (Thursday) from 9:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Friday and Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

THE DARLINGS, a national award winning country western group, take the stage tonight (Thursday) at the 30th Annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival. It's a return engagement for the group, which is known for live performances with "heart and high-stepping rhythm."

VIBRAPHONIST MATTHIAS LUPRI leads The Vibe Jazz Quartet today (Thursday) at Noon during the Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival on Hancock St. Lupri, a Berklee College graduate who studied with legendary vibraphonist Gary Burton, started on the drums at age 12 and has been performing professionally since his teens.

Test Your High Blood Pressure I.Q.

Did you know that one in five Americans has high blood pressure and one-third of those affected don't even realize they have it?

High blood pressure, or hypertension, is a complicated, hereditary condition, dubbed the "silent killer" because of its lack of symptoms. That's the bad news.

The good news is that you can learn more about high blood pressure by taking this simple true and false quiz.

• High blood pressure is not a very serious disease.

False: High blood pressure directly increases the risk of coronary artery disease, which leads to heart attack and stroke, especially when combined with other risk factors. According to the American Heart Association, hypertension killed 41,634 Americans in 1996 and contributed to the deaths of about 202,000 Americans.

• You should get your blood pressure check every three years.

False: The American Heart Association recommends a blood pressure screening from a physician or other qualified health professional, at least once every two years, and more often if you are diagnosed with high blood pressure and are taking medication.

• Men are at greater risk for developing high blood pressure.

True: Scientists have identified a number of risk factors for hypertension, one of which is male gender. However, high blood pressure risk isn't directly related to a person's sex, but involves a number of other risk factors including: heredity, obesity, sodium sensitivity, age, heavy alcohol consumption, and inactive life-style.

False: Hypertension generally does not elicit symptoms. In fact, 31.6 percent of people with high blood pressure are unaware they have it. That's why it is so important for patients to stay on their high blood pressure medication even if they think they feel better. When treatment is stopped, blood pressure may increase again.

• All blood pressure medications work in the same way.

False: Since no two people are alike, a variety of antihypertensive medications have been developed to treat each patient's needs. Some medications work to reduce excess fluids and salt; others work to lower heart rate and the heart's output of blood. One well-studied class of drugs, known as ACE inhibitors, reduces blood pressure by blocking the production of an artery-constricting enzyme, which results in a reduction in blood pressure. Aceon® (perindopril erbumine) Tablets is an ACE inhibitor that provides protection with once-daily dosing.

• It is important to have 24-hour control of high blood pressure.

True: Everyone experiences normal increases and decreases in blood pressure throughout the day. For example, waking from sleep each morning causes a sudden rise in blood pressure. For patients with high blood pressure, this could be a concern if their medication doesn't provide full 24-hour coverage. Aceon® Tablets provide this continuous coverage.

If you think you may be at risk for high blood pressure, seek a health care provider who can diagnose your condition and discuss treatment options as well as lifestyle changes that can control hypertension.

Based on pivotal clinical studies, Aceon® Tablets has been shown to be effective and well-tolerated. When used in pregnancy, during the second and third trimesters, ACE inhibitors can cause injury or even death to the developing fetus. When pregnancy is detected, Aceon® Tablets should be discontinued as soon as possible.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"

"What is digital?"
Try and compare counting on your fingers to using a calculator. Or how about a horse and buggy to a modern automobile. With Digital hearing aids you are using computer power to help sort, sift and process sounds at a speed of over 40 million calculations per second! Each aid is programmed to your hearing needs, while you are wearing it. Volume is adjusted automatically, according to your environment! Soft sounds are louder, loud sounds don't bother you and hearing conversation in the presence of noise is better than ever before! Sound is more natural and has a CD sound quality. When you hear soft sounds better, you can understand speech better because you can hear the very quiet sounds like "p, b, t, k, sh, th and more. There is nothing better than Mother Nature's normal, natural hearing. The next best thing is a digital hearing aid. Sure, they are more expensive; quality always is. Analog hearing aids are still available, but they have always fallen short and many have ended up in the drawer. Find out if you're a candidate with a free hearing test! REAL ESTATE

South Shore Association Of Realtors Holds Annual Awards Reception

The South Shore Association of Realtors® recently held its annual award ceremonies at Amelia's, Marina Bay, Quincy.

Baker announced this year's recipient of the Realtor® of the Year 2000 award is Joseph P. Clancy, owner of Century 21 Tullish & Clancy Real Estate, Inc. A commemorative plaque was presented by Patricia Sullivan, the 1999 award recipient.

Clancy was recognized for outstanding service and contribution to the real estate profession as well as to the South Shore Association of Realtors®. A Board member since 1973 and a Life Member since 1998, he is a past Director of the Board, former Grievance Committee member, and currently serves on the Budget and Finance and Professional Standards Committees, and Multiple Listing Service. Under Clancy's enthusiastic leadership the Century 21 Tullish & Clancy Real Estate Company has thrived for 27 years as a successful business in the communities of Quincy and Weymouth, and has achieved Centurion status in the Century 21 system for the past three years.

Clancy's community associations include membership in Weymouth Rotary, sponsoring youth soccer and basketball teams of Columbus and Golf League, and the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. Over 125 people joined in the celebration including Clancy's wife Geraldine, their sons and daughters and spouses, several other family members, many friends, office associates, and SSAR board staff. He was feted as a dedicated family man, past coach of his son's Little League teams, generously and patiently sharing his experience and guidance to everyone in his life.

Clancy has been nominated for the Massachusetts Realtor® of the Year Award to be presented in September at the Massachusetts Association of Realtors® Convention in North Falmouth.

DIANNE KANE-MCGONIGLE of Quincy was recently thanked by the Jimmy Fund for being one of the 1,386 "Pacesetters" — those who raised $500 or more to benefit the Jimmy Fund in the 1999 Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk. More than $2.8 million was raised for last year's event.

Diane Kane-McGonigle Jimmy Fund Walk 'Pacesetter'

Dianne Kane-McGonigle of Quincy was among the 1,386 people recently recognized by the Jimmy Fund at the annual Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk "Pacesetter" reception.

Walkers in the annual fund-raiser for the Jimmy Fund who raise $500 or more are designated Pacesetters. In last year's event, Pacesetters accounted for 20 percent of the participants, yet they raised 77 percent of the $2.8 million given to the Jimmy Fund.

Presented by Sovereign Bank, this year's walk, 26.2 miles from Hopkinton to Boston, will be held Sunday, Sept. 24. The event, accommodating 7,500 walkers, also offers 13.1- and 3-mile options.

All walkers must raise a minimum of $100 in pledges, which goes toward cancer research and care at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. In addition to being recognized as a Pacesetter for raising $500 or more, designations of bronze ($1,500 to $2,499), silver ($2,500 to $3,499), gold ($3,500-$4,999) and platinum ($5,000 and up) are acknowledged.

For more information about the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk, call 1-800-632-3562.

Granite Etch First EFL Win, 29-0

By CHRIS POISSON

Backed by an impregnable defense, the Quincy Granite notched their first win in the Eastern Football League by pitching a 29-0 shutout over the Hyannis Hurricanes Saturday at the Cape.

The city hasn't seen a better defense since the Cold War era, when the Quincy-born USS Salem was the Flagship of the U.S. Navy's Sixth Fleet.

After a 20-8 loss to the Boston Cowboys in the season opener, Quincy (1-1) refurbished its game as the defense limited the first-year team to one first down (that isn't a typo). That's like holding Jordan to under 10 points.

"There were a lot of three-and-outs," said David Harris, the teams co-founder and offensive lineman.

"The whole defense was spectacular," said coach Ken McPhee as he watched his Big D record five sacks, force two fumbles and score a safety.

The Granite will need that same defense Saturday when they battle rival (yes rival) Mass Havoc at 7 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium. Last season, the Havoc beat the Granite twice, including a win in the NEFL Division Championship game.

"This is a big week," Harris said. "The Havoc game is going to be the biggest game of the season. It's for all of us. We're going to try to upset them and not let them get the hat trick."

With a full week of practice, quarterback Mike Thomas, filling in for Liam Higgins (head injury) and J.R. Rendle (broken collar bone), and the offense clicked to the tune of 20-first half points.

Tail back Bernard Lynch scored Quincy's first touchdown when he ran one in from six yards out. The Granite went up 14-0 on Thomas's 14-yard keeper, his second touchdown run of the season.

Thomas then connected with tail back Jackson Vetiack for a touchdown on a 28-yard screen pass, his first TD pass of the season. The PAT was no good.

"It was a big improvement offensively," McPhee said. "We had much better offensive series. I thought the offensive line improved tremendously. But we still have a lot of work to do. You can never be satisfied."

In the second half, Brian Vaughn returned the opening kick off 82 yards for a touchdown, giving Quincy a 27-0 lead after the PAT. Quincy took out its starters and played its newcomers the rest of the game.

Defensive end Steve Jones came up with a safety on the last play of the game to account for the final score.

Vic DiGravio Jr. Memorial Golf Tournament Aug. 7

The first Vic DiGravio Jr. Memorial Golf Tournament will be held Monday, Aug. 7 at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

The tournament is being held in the memory of Vic DiGravio who died of cancer last year.

It will be a scramble format with a 1 p.m. shotgun start. Dinner will be served after the tournament at approximately 6:15 p.m. Entry fee is $100 per person, which includes greens fees, cart, golf shirt and dinner. For those attending just the dinner, the donation is $30 per person.

Registration deadline is Monday, July 31.

All proceeds will fund the Vic DiGravio Jr. Memorial Scholarship at Bridgton Academy in North Bridgton, Maine. The scholarship provides financial aid to students from Quincy and Weymouth who attend Bridgton. DiGravio graduated from Bridgton Academy in 1959.

DiGravio grew up in Weymouth and attended

Weymouth High School where he was an outstanding athlete. After marrying, he lived in Quincy where he owned and operated the Spotlight Tavern for over 20 years.

Entry fees and/or donations can be sent to the Vic DiGravio Jr. Memorial Golf Tournament, 89 Puritan Drive, Quincy 02169.

For more information about the tournament, call Vic DiGravio III at (617) 328-8170, or Sean Downing at (617) 472-5746.

Shea's Bertoni Memorial Golf Tournament Sept. 11

The Bill Shea's 12th annual Bertoni Memorial Golf Tournament will be held Monday, Sept. 11 at the Halifax Country Club to benefit the Quincy Animal Shelter.

The tournament will tee-off at 8 a.m. The event will also feature various golfing contests and raffles, such as a longest drive, closest to the pin and hole-in-one for a chance to win a new Buick. There will be an awards luncheon following the tournament.

Proceeds will be used to feed, pay medical bills and rehab the shelter for the animals. The tournament will be run with the help of Siro's Restaurant, Quincy Animal Shelter, Bill Shea of Shea's Coriam, Jeff Sweeney of Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals and Sue Deegan. Those interested in playing in the tournament, or would like more information, are asked to call Bill Shea at (617) 326-1266 or Sue Deegan at (617) 376-2001.

Golf Tourney Raises $15,000 For Homeless Families

Over $15,000 was raised for the homeless families of Quincy at the Mulligan Golf Tourney held recently at the Pembroke Country Club.

Over 100 golfers participated, and over 125 people attended the evening meal and took part in the silent auction and raffle.

The tournament came about when the Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services and the Mayor's Commission on the Family began working together to create a "second step" program that would provide safe and affordable homes for homeless families.

During their association, they agreed that the community needed opportunities to work on correcting this problem. That's when Atty. Jay Davis of Graeber and Davis, a QNHS board member, stepped forward and offered to run a golf tournament fundraiser.

A committee — Leo Sheehan, Bob Foy, David Kilnapp, Elizabeth Harrington, Dick Peterson, all of QNHS, and Linda Stice of the Mayor's Commission on the Family — was formed and it decided to call the tournament the Mulligan Golf Tourney.

In golf, a Mulligan is an opportunity to take an undesirable shot over. The chance to start over is what homeless families need and what the two agencies try to provide.

Stice spoke of the Mayor's Commission on the Family's work with homeless families, pointing out that some Quincy school children were living in cars before entering this program.

Robert Corley of QNHS was the chief organizer of the event. He announced next year's event will be held June 15.

Comeback Not In Forecast As Morrisette Bows Out

By CHRIS POISSON

The Morrisette American Legion baseball team disappeared as heavy fog blanketed Quincy Sunday night — literally and figuratively.

With the best-of-three Zone 6 playoff series against No. 4 seed Westwood knotted at one game apiece, Morrisette's sure-handed defense vanished like a sand castle swept away by a wave, committing seven errors in a season-ending 9-4 loss at Adams Field.

"[The weather] was bad," said manager Ray Cattaneo. "We lost two or three balls up in the fog. It was like that for both sides, but we didn't get them up in the air like they did. When I think back, I think we should've canceled it around the fourth inning. The conditions just didn't make it a good game."

With a 4-1 lead in the seventh inning, Westwood opened the game up with five runs (four unearned) off pitcher Matt McCann (4-3, 2 saves) for a commanding 9-1 lead. Morrisette, the second seed, pushed three runs across the plate in the bottom half, but a comeback was not in the forecast.

After rallying from a 4-0 deficit to take the first game of the series, 5-4, Friday at Adams Field, Morrisette seemed to be in position to win the first-round matchup. But the pitching collapsed in a 16-7 meltdown in Game 2, followed by the defense in Game 3.

"It was a good year," Cattaneo said. "We had our moments. But I would like to go longer in the playoffs and keep playing in July. It's tough to end like this after winning the first game and coming back like that. They probably got the confidence to beat us after Saturday's game when we lost 16-7."

Although the postseason leaves a bitter taste, Cattaneo can find some positives from the season. Morrisette, which finished the season at 15-8, recovered from a mid-season swoon by winning six of its final seven regular season games. Brian O'Hanley, the 15-year-old rookie, led the team in hitting. And Keith Doherty emerged as one of the league's premier pitchers.

"I'm not surprised with Keith," Cattaneo said. "He works at it. He plays a lot of ball. That's his sport. O'Hanley was quite a surprise. He led the team in hitting as a 15 year old. I can see Doherty in the next two years dominating this league. And I can see O'Hanley doing the same."

In Game 2, Morrisette fell behind 7-0 after one inning but chipped away to even the score. T.J. Bell scored the first run in the second inning when Joe Duffy was hit by a pitch with the bases load. In the third, Bell stroked a two-run double to make it 7-3. In the fifth, Doherty ripped an RBI double, Bell crushed a two-run home run and Adam Goodrich added an RBI single.

In the bottom of the fifth, Westwood pocketed an eight ball, scoring eight runs as it sent 12 men to the plate. Game over.

In the opening game,

Doherty (5-1) went the distance, allowing three runs on five hits while punching out 10.

Down 4-0, Morrisette scored a run in the third and fourth to cut the lead to 4-2. In the fifth, it scored three runs, all with two outs, to take the lead. Rob Celata had a two-run double and Doherty an RBI double.

In the final game of the regular season, Morrisette pulled out a 7-6 win over Milton in eight innings as Celata knocked in Pat Bregoli with one out for the game-winning run.

Celata (5-1) picked up the win in relief with 1 1/3 innings of two-hit ball. Joe Flynn started the game and tossed three scoreless innings, while Bell gave up two runs in his 3 2/3 innings of work.

Doherty went 3 for 4 with two RBI and O'Hanley went 3 for 5 with an RBI to power the offense. Bregoli, Celata, Chris Doherty and John Gavin all knocked in runs.

Shoplifting -- Employee Training

Your employees are your first line of defense against shoplifting. Instruct employees to be suspicious of the following:

- Customers who hang around and handle items, making no attempt to buy anything, or customers who do not appear to be interested in items about which they have inquired.
- Customers who keep one hand constantly in an outer coat pocket.
- Customers who seem to be watching store personnel very closely.
- The potential shoplifter may keep maneuvering to get in a position or location free of customers -- or will stop whatever he/she is doing when a customer or clerk is near.
- When a shoplifter is acting in a suspicious manner, you or your employee should approach and ask, "May I help you?" This is one of the best deterrents to a potential shoplifter.

• Watch the hands -- the hands to the stealing. One hand may be innocently above the counter while the other is busily engaged in sliding merchandise into a concealed box.

Jaehnig Club Captures Third AL Championship

The Jaehnig Club (17-5) recently captured its third consecutive American League championship — its sixth out of the last seven seasons — by closing out the year with five straight wins. Jaehnig Chiropactic — 8 Lions Club — 2

Mo Al-Khatib smashed a long home run and had five RBI, and he also picked up the win on the mound. Tom Pasquantonio, Mike O'Mahoney and Jeff Davis had clutch hits.

For Lions Club, Drew Loud had two hits while Stephan Kane and Joe Berlo each had one.

Jaehnig Chiropactic — 9 Colonial Federal — 1

Christopher Garvey pitched an excellent game, scattering two hits over five innings. He also added a two-run single. Jonathan Allen went 3 for 3 with two doubles and Rob Dolbec and Tom Pasquantonio had two hits each.

For Colonial Federal, Raymond Marchard cracked two hits and Mike Jay was impressive offensively and defensively.

Jaehnig Chiropactic — 11 Police — 4

Robbie Dolbec (2 doubles, triple), Mo Al-Khatib (2 doubles, single) and Matt Jaehnig (2 hits) led an offensive explosion. Kevin Donovan improved his pitching record to 7-1 on the season. Chris Maguire had a single and played well at third. Jim Garrigan smashed a triple and Nick Al-Khatib belted a two-run double. Jeff Davis had a hit in his third straight game.

For Police, Kevin Bossart and Corey Wynne had two hits each. Glenn Misho was a vacuum cleaner at third base. Jaehnig Chiropactic — 7 Burgin Platner — 6

Jaehnig Club jumped out to a 7-0 lead, but had to fend off a hungry Burgin Platner squad, which rallied for six runs in the last inning. Matt Jaehnig picked up the save as he struck out two batters in the last inning with the tying run at the plate. Steve Matos was sharp in his pitching debut and he had a single. Jon Allen had two hits and three RBI.

For Burgin Platner, Mike Powers, Kevin Adams and Jim Fitzpatrick had nice hits. Jaehnig Chiropactic — 5 Burke Club — 2

Mo Al-Khatib tossed a one-hitter and Kevin Donovan smacked two triples to pace the victory. Jon Allen tripled, Mike O'Mahoney had two hits and Steve Matos hit safely.

For Burke Club, Joe Griffin had the lone hit. Lammie Papalambros played an outstanding defensive game at shortstop.

Babe Ruth Tourney Starts Here Friday

Starting tomorrow (Friday) and running through July 29, Quincy will host a double-elimination 14-year-old Babe Ruth State Tournament at Adams Field.

Teams from Quincy, Lynn, Reading, Medford, Parkway West Roxbury, Norwood, Taunton and Plymouth will be competing in the tournament.

Donations are $3 daily, or $8 for a tournament pass.

Games will start (tomorrow) Friday at 4 p.m. with opening ceremonies at 7 p.m. followed by a game at 7:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday games will begin at 1 p.m., 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday games at 5:30 p.m.

and 8 p.m. Wednesday will be an off-day or a makeup date. Next Thursday and Friday, games will be at 8 p.m. And if necessary, there will be a game at noon next Saturday.

Quincy's opening game will be Saturday at 8 p.m.

The Quincy roster includes: Bill Cosgrove, Dan

Babe Ruth All-Stars In State Tournament

The Quincy 13-year-old Babe Ruth All-Stars begin state tournament play today (Thursday) against Lawrence at 5:45 p.m. at Kelly Field in Milton.

Despite falling to Parkway, 4-3, in the District 4 Championship, Quincy earned a spot in the eight-team tourney by finishing with a 3-2 overall record.

In the final, Quincy grabbed a 2-0 first-inning lead over Parkway on RBI singles by Steve Priscella and Justin Thorley. Dave Jaehnig baffled Parkway, allowing only two hits in four scoreless innings before tiring in the fifth.

Dave Pellegrin's bases loaded double in the fifth cleared the bases for Parkway. Quincy staged a mini rally in the seventh, cutting the lead to 4-3 on Dean Sandomato's RBI single. Quincy, however, left the bases loaded to end the game.

Quincy opened the District tournament with a 6-3 win over a strong Braintree team, riding the arm of Sandomato, who pitched a complete game.

Down 1-0 in the first, lead-off hitter Kevin Richardson ripped a triple and scored on a wild pitch. Quincy broke open the game, stringing five hits together for four runs in the fourth. Nick Malvesti had an RBI single while Chris Marinelli's single plated two runs.

Malvesti's RBI single in the sixth closed out the scoring for Quincy. Malvesti had two hits as did Jaehnig and Sandomato.

John Folino threw a masterful game in Quincy's 8-1 win over Duxbury. Quincy again used a big inning, scoring five runs in the fifth with Priscella, Malvesti and Matt Tobin (2 RBI) delivering base hits.

Thorley had a good day with two hits and a flawless seventh inning in relief. Richardson shined behind the plate, throwing out two runners attempting to steal.

Quincy dropped a well-played, extra-inning game to Parkway, 3-2. Sandomato turned in another strong performance, limiting Parkway to two hits in seven innings. Quincy held a 1-0 lead through five innings. Sandomato drove in Richardson (single, stolen base) in the first.

Parkway took the lead in the sixth by scoring two runs without a hit. Quincy answered in its half when Richardson doubled, stole third and scored on an error. Sandomato stole second and was thrown out at home on Folino's single. Parkway scored the winning run on a single, a walk and a sacrifice fly.

Quincy advanced to the finals by knocking off Braintree, 6-5, as Folino spun a three-hitter in six innings of work. Quincy used another big inning to take a 5-0 lead.

Malvesti (3 hits) laced a double to left and scored on Folino's RBI single. Walks to Marinelli and Jaehnig and a single by Tobin scored two runs while Thorley's single accounted for two more runs.

Braintree closed within 6-5 before Jaehnig got the final two outs.

RELIGION

Bethany Congregational

The Rev. William Harding, pastor, will conduct both worship services on Sunday at Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center.

The first service will be at 8:30 a.m. in the Bethany Chapel on Spear St. The second service at 10 a.m. will be in the Bethany sanctuary. His sermon topic is "Different As Night and Day."

Social Security: 65 Years Young And Still Going Strong

By LAURIE ZASTROW

Social Security is 65 years "young" this month, and, like a majority of the seniors it serves, is still a robust, dynamic force.

The recent elimination of the earnings test for people over full retirement age will likely encourage more of our seniors to continue to work. With a shrinking workforce in the United States, employers will be overjoyed to hire this experienced population.

Although some second (and even third!) careers may pay less than the first, seniors will now be able to count on Social Security to supplement their earnings with no penalty for earning over a certain amount. And, in fact, their additional earnings may increase their future benefits if they are higher than some years' prior earnings.

Over the course of their lifetimes, people change, mature and gain experience. And now, more than ever before, they can look forward to continuing to live longer and more productive lives.

Social Security has likewise grown during the past 65 years and today looks forward to continuing to provide a base of income security for our older Americans in the years to come.

To find out more about how you can work and still collect retirement benefits, visit our website at www.ssa.gov. While you're there, subscribe to our new electronic newsletter, e-news.

SOCIAL SECURITY SOLVENT UNTIL 2037

The Social Security Board of Trustees' annual report reveals that the long-range financial picture of Social Security's programs has improved since last year. Specifically, the Board announced that Social Security's trust fund assets will not be depleted until 2037.

SOCIAL SECURITY EARNINGS

TEST ELIMINATED

The "Senior Citizens' Freedom to Work Act of 2000," signed by President Clinton on April 7, eliminates the Social Security retirement earnings test for people who attain full retirement age (currently age 65). This law is effective Jan. 1, 2000.

(Laurie Zastrow is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) This might not be the right time to move a relationship to another level. Keep it light for now, and wait for a more favorable period to ask for a commitment.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your determination pays off as your ideas find a receptive audience. Be flexible about making changes. You have a lot of people pulling for your success.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A health scare turns out to be more dietary than dire. It might be an allergy or a temporary upset, but have it checked out. Vacation plans might have to be changed.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A disagreement between you and a co-worker could come to a serious confrontation. Before things get out of hand, ask an impartial third party to mediate.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your sense of style gets you noticed by the right people at work. However, you need to back up your style with substance in order to get that promotion you're seeking.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A so-called friend turns out to be the source of the problems in your relationship. Make your explanations to your partner and then hope for the best. Cut all ties with your once-trusted pal.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) An attempt to re-establish an old friendship runs into difficulty when your old pal insists on living in the past while you prefer to move on.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Planetary movements affect your energy level. Consider making a temporary switch from energy-intensive activities to something less demanding.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Family matters take precedence in the early part of the week. Later, you get good news about a once-rocky relationship that has now stabilized.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your vacation plans could run up against someone else's plans for your time. Before you say no, it might pay to listen to all the facts.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A family dispute forces you to examine where your loyalties should lie. Best advice: Instead of taking sides, work to bring the parties together.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A career change you once considered and then dismissed has unexpectedly opened up again. You might now feel you're more prepared to make this move.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You can be alone if you have to be, but you much prefer being with people — and fortunately, people love being with you.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Tamara Erdley Named Public Relations Coordinator

Tamara Erdley has been named public relations coordinator at South Shore Mental Health (SSMH), a community resource providing mental health and substance abuse services throughout the South Shore, Southeastern Massachusetts and Cape Cod.

As public relations coordinator, Erdley will be responsible for all internal and external publications, media placement and communications, and event planning. In addition, she will coordinate the development and maintenance of all marketing materials and represent the organization at community events, health fairs, and trade shows.

TAMARA ERDLEY

Prior to her position at SSMH, Erdley was public relations specialist at Quincy Medical Center. She received her bachelor of arts degree in communications from Plattsburgh State University in New York and completed her internship in training in public relations at The Buffalo General Hospital.

Red Cross Golf Classic At South Shore Country Club

The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay South Area will hold its 15th annual Golf Classic Monday, July 24 at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham with a 1 p.m. shotgun start. "This is a perfect way to make a significant contribution to a charitable cause, and have a great day of golf at the same time," said Jerry Dacey, chairman of the Golf Classic Committee.

J. Flynn, John J. Pasciucco, John Spillane, Kristen Williams, Lynne Houghton, Richard N. Hart, Mary Snethen, James McLean, Michelle Bowen, Mark Luppi and Helen Shea.

Proceeds from the tournament will help Red Cross locally to continue its great work of:

• Helping victims of fires, storms and other disasters recover and rebuild their lives. This past year Red Cross volunteers responded to 24 disaster situations, providing emergency assistance to 75 families.

• Preparing parents, co-workers and teachers to respond to emergencies through training in First Aid and CPR. Volunteers teach hundreds of people at the Quincy Red Cross office.

• Protecting children through training in water safety, injury and disease prevention, and emergency response. This year volunteers went into South Shore elementary schools and taught over 7,000 students how to be safe when home alone and over 8,000 students water safety.

The entrance fee for the tournament is $125 and includes a box lunch, greens fee, cart, an old fashion barbecue, awards and prizes. Hole sponsors, raffle prizes and cash donations are also welcome.

For more information, call Jerry Dacey at Colonial Federal Savings Bank at (617) 471-0750, or Jackie Gardner at the Red Cross at (617) 770-2600.

St. John's Golf Outing July 24

St. John's annual Golf Outing will be held Monday, July 24 at Presidents' Golf Course.

The cost to sponsor a hole is $100, and a sign will be placed at the hole indicating your support.

For more information, call Declan Breslin at (617) 786-1641, or Mike Gilcoine at (617) 773-5862 or (781) 748-1149, pager.

The four bond issues tabled were: $600,000 for cost of various department equipment, including $100,000 for DPW needs and a controversial $500,000 designated for fire equipment apparatus; $200,000 for acquiring land for public parks or playgrounds or public domain; $500,000 for construction of public ways or the extension and widening thereof, including land damages; and $400,000 for construction, remodeling, and repairs to Crane Public Library.

The $600,000 bond issue caused concerns Monday night when William Ariento, president of the Quincy Firefighters Union Local 792, was allowed to address the council before McCauley's objection and expressed concern that the $500,000 available to the QFD would not be enough to purchase a ladder truck for Ward 4, which he, as well as Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, has stated is a top priority at numerous council meetings.

Ariento said $500,000 was "not sufficient for the purchase of a ladder truck" and urged that the matter be sent to committee for resolution by all parties involved.

Council President Paul Harold supported Ariento's claim that a ladder truck for West Quincy was necessary and advocated that, in this one instance, the DPW's needs be "squeezed out" to acquire the ladder truck, which he estimated to cost between $600,000 to $700,000. "The ladder truck is a top priority, and it becomes more so as those buildings at Crown Colony become higher and higher," Harold said.

Harold noted that several officials, from the mayor to ward councillors to councillors-at-large, had gone on record in favor of a West Quincy ladder truck and that anything else "would be inconsistent with public pronouncements."

Reached for comment Tuesday, Sheets said he had been quite clear on that particular issue at various meetings and did not understand the confusion. "It (the ladder truck) is certainly a top priority, but we did not designate a specific piece of equipment because we first have to have the fire study done."

Sheets explained that $100,000 of the bond would go to the Maintenance Division of the DPW to purchase trucks to transport tools and manpower for repair jobs from one public building to another, with money left over going towards new pick-up trucks for the department.

The $500,000, said Sheets, would go for fire equipment apparatus based on the recommendation of the fire study so that the funds are wisely spent. "According to (the DPW's) Lester Gerry, it will cost $1 million to reconfigure the West Quincy fire station to house that truck, far more money than to actually purchase the truck itself," Sheets said. "Do we really want to spend $1 million at one fire station? What about the others?"

Sheets said that he would let the experts of the fire study have their say and that, if the ladder truck is still the first priority, additional funds would be appropriated for its purchase.

There is of yet no set timetable for the fire study.

FACE-TO-FACE with a gargoyle -- This gargoyle, one of four that adorn the steeple of Bethany Congregational Church in Quincy Center, is structurally unsound and will be removed Structurally Unsound From Lightning Strike Bethany Church 2000-Pound Gargoyle Must Be Removed

By CRAIG SALTERS

Question: how do you remove a 2,000 pound gargoyle wedged two-feet deep into the corner of a church steeple from a height of 120 feet?

Answer: as carefully and as cautiously as possible.

This is the task facing Robert Pasqualucci of Louis Pasqualucci & Son, Inc., who will oversee the removal of a damaged gargoyle today (Thursday) from the steeple of Bethany Congregational Church, Spear and Coddington Sts., after a bolt of lightning struck the church steeple last week.

Thankfully, no one was injured, but the lightning sent a 600-pound piece of a concrete pinnacle crashing down inside the church and almost caused one of the church's four famous gargoyles to crack off, which could have added considerably to the danger.

Overall damage is now estimated at over $500,000.

"The gargoyle is not structurally sound," explained Pasqualucci, who noted that the entire area below the 2,000 pound fixture has been barricaded off for safety reasons. "If it were to come off, it would go through the roof, through the second floor, through the first floor, and land in the basement."

And even though Louis Pasqualucci & Son, Quincy-based union contractors, have over 60 years masonry experience and are considered specialists in the field of church construction and restoration, Pasqualucci admits the job will be slow going, with full restoration not expected until spring of 2001.

"This will be a very delicate job," said Pasqualucci. "The gargoyle itself is built at least two feet deep inside

Task Force Votes Unanimously For Site Quincy Ave. Choice For New QHS

By CRAIG SALTERS

The School Building Needs Task Force voted unanimously Tuesday morning not to consider any other site but Quincy Avenue for the new Quincy High School.

Task Force Chairperson and DPW Commissioner David Colton and the rest of the task force also approved motions to demolish the Center for Technical Education (CTE), close off Woodward Ave. to create a "green belt" for the future Central Middle School (current QHS), continue plans to fill marshland up to Central Artery for new ball-fields, and to resolve land and parking issues at the Quincy Ave. high school site.

The demolition of the CTE, said Mayor James Sheets, requires approval of the School Committee whereas any decision to close off Woodward Avenue would require a positive vote by the City Council.

"Basically, the plan approved by the state (for a $55 million new high school and a $25 million renovated Central Middle School) is the plan which we will go by," said Sheets, who added that the proposed openings of the new QHS in 2004 and Central in 2006 "are still good."

Sheets also said he was confident the city would now be eligible for 90 percent state reimbursement for the two schools, as opposed to the expected 63 percent, thanks to a bill passed by the Legislature removing racial equity considerations from the reimbursement decision and grandfathering

O'Brien Brings Good News: Extra $1.2M

State Treasurer Shannon O'Brien stopped by Mayor James Sheets' office Tuesday to deliver $14,000 worth of good news.

Along the way, O'Brien promised an additional $1.2 million in good news would arrive by mid-August.

The first amount, that of $14,332.68, refers to the Office of the Treasurer's return of abandoned property to the city of Quincy.

The $1.2 million figure is the amount of additional lottery funds Quincy will receive this year over and above last year's allocation.

Altogether, O'Brien said, the city will receive $10,384,514 in lottery funds sometime in August after the Legislature passes its supplemental budget.

"This is a good news day for the city of Quincy," O'Brien told Sheets.

Sheets said that there were no definite plans for the additional lottery funds but that he expected at least $1 million would go into the city's Stabilization Fund, a cash reserve for which the mayor has set a goal of 5 percent of the city's annual budget, or roughly $8 million.

Sheets expressed his thanks to O'Brien but added that he was particularly impressed by the $14,000 in return of abandoned property because it sent a strong

Ideal Weather A Big Factor

Sidewalk Festival One Of The Most Successful

By TOM HENSHAW

Veteran participants and comparative newcomers alike agreed that last week's 30th annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival, held in near perfect weather, was one of the most successful of all.

"Excellent . . . a record year," said Jeff Bertman, whose Roger's Jewelry store has been taking part in the festival for all 30 years of its existence. "Last year was good and this year was better."

Bertman had called last year's three-day extravaganza "the best ever."

"It was wonderful," enthused Paula Stoltz, proprietor of Urban Anna, a two-year participant. "It was much better than last year."

"We had a tent last year but this year we set up just outside the door and we were very successful."

"The weather was a sig-

nificant factor in the success of the event," said Marilyn Manning, who is the executive director of the sponsoring Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

"Three bright, sunny days in a row, it is the best 'weather luck' in several years. When it is a near record 100 degrees, as it has been in the last few years, a hot city street is not so inviting."

"It is certainly a big challenge to fill a city street nearly a half mile long in mid-July with people for a full 28 hours. Nothing is ever perfect but we continue to work to make it that way."

Tents and canopied booths held center stage on Hancock Street from Granite to School Streets as shoppers strolled the half mile, examining and purchasing the bargains offered by the merchants.

Hancock Street was closed to vehicular traffic from Granite Street to Hancock Court, turning the city's main business thoroughfare into a pedestrian mall for the day.

Even outside the festival's central area, sidewalk commerce was thriving under the happy skies.

"It went very well," said Joanne Dondero, whose Abigail's Crossing is located about a hundred yards north of the center of action.

"We weren't under a tent this year but it didn't seem to make any difference. We sold in and out of the store."

MDC Says: Wollaston Beach Tests Results Reported As Soon As Possible

By CRAIG SALTERS

Already this summer, Wollaston Beach has posted its many "red flag" unhealthy swimming days -- one -- as it did for all of last summer.

True enough, say MDC officials, but the water at Wollaston Beach is still the cleanest it's been in recent memory.

What's more, MDC officials take issue with a part of a recent Boston Globe article on Wollaston's water quality which says residents feel misled by the MDC concerning red flag postings.

The article said Quincy residents were upset that lag warnings, red for unhealthy and blue for healthy, were actually based on readings done the day before.

Those at the MDC argue that the article did not fully explain the required 24-hour incubation period for the water tests, which make it impossible to post beach results for anything but yesterday's conditions.

"The MDC process of water testing and reporting, contrary to what the Boston Globe may have been suggesting, is actually considered an excellent program," said Patrick Flynn, South Regional Supervisor for the MDC. "We are as interested in the public health as anyone could be and are very sensitive to post test results, whether good or bad, as quickly as possible. There is no delay."

MDC Environmental Engineer Paul DiPietro explained that Wollaston Beach is one of five MDC beaches which get tested daily, with results posted in-house and to various media as quickly as possible. The MDC, DiPietro said, samples the water Thursday and MDC interns test the remaining days in conjunction with the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA). "For those five beaches, we collect every day," DiPietro said.

The problem, DiPietro says, is that the two indicator organisms tested for -- fecal coliform and enterococcus -- require a 24-hour lab incubation period.

Add to that the lag time to and from the labs, said DiPietro, and there's a 30 hour minimum between testing and test results.

And is that the best the MDC can do?

Yes, DiPietro said, and that's the best anyone can do given cost factors and today's testing technology. "From a bacteria testing standpoint, anything less is impossible," DiPietro said.

Matthew Liebman, New England Region Beach Coordinator for the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) said DiPietro was correct with regards to the 24-hour incubation period and added the enterococcus test -- which the EPA feels to be a better indicator of unhealthy swimming conditions -- required a 48 hour incubation period as late as 1997 until new EPA methods were successfully field-tested by the MDC. "The MDC has really been taking the lead (on testing)," Liebman said. "They have one of the best programs available."

Liebman, who said better tests were being developed but were at least 3-5 years away, estimated the average cost of a water sampling at $20.

Liebman also said the Boston Globe article incorrectly listed the water test unit of measurement as parts per million, noting the correct unit of measurement is number of (bacteria) colonies per 100 milliliters of water, or roughly a pint.

According to the EPA, said Liebman, the "acceptable level of risk" for beaches is 1 to 100, meaning that there should only be a 1 percent risk of illness to the general population, emphasizing that some communities might favor more protection but that it would be unwise to have anything less.

Liebman said one of the most reliable ways to measure water quality was to view data over an extended period of time and make sure the average bacteria colony count is not over 35. However, Liebman added, a person should not swim in water which has had a recent reading of over 104, regardless of bacteria count average.

THIS IS NO LONGER a familiar summer daily scene at Wollaston Beach because of water quality. (Quincy Sun photo)

Again, Liebman stressed that, even at those high levels, the risk of illness was minimal.

Quincy Health Commissioner M. Jane Gallahue reminded residents of a very simple rule of thumb: do not swim at Wollaston Beach within 48 hours of a rain storm, explaining that it takes that long for the tides to naturally flush out the system from any sewer pipe contamination.

Gallahue also urged residents to clean up after their pets and not dump motor oils or paints into city catch basins, as it is dumped directly into the bay.

DPW Commissioner David Colton said the cause of the problem was clearly the city's aging sewer system but that the city has already spent $6 million to combat the problem: $5 million to repair drainage sub areas 7 (Sachem St.) and 8 (Rice Rd.) along with $1 million to rehabilitate the North Quincy Interceptor, the area's major sewer line.

Repairs to drainage sub area 6 (Channing St.) are scheduled for 2001 and, after that, improvements will be made to sub area 4 (Milton Rd.)

The other sub areas, Colton said, are much smaller and do not pose a significant concern.

Colton cautioned that any major new program, such as removal of the eight outfall pipes or sewage treatment, would cost in the tens of millions of dollars and might not yield the best results.

To make his point, Colton noted that bacteria counts at the repaired Rice Rd. section were, on average, just 22 while averages at other repaired sites were not much higher than the safety threshold of 200, whereas unrepaired sites gave readings of between 4,000 and 11,000.

"It's the sewer pipes which are causing the problem," Colton said. "The question is: is it worth spending tens of millions of dollars for a 10 percent improvement?"

The city currently repairs sewer systems through its Sewer Rehabilitation Fund, which is derived from a tax on development.

The MDC's "beaches water quality hotline" is (617) 727-5264.

SECURE A SUMMER DEAL

There are many ways to catch a summer break when planning a vacation, especially if you are flexible. Even the hottest vacation spots receive last minute cancellations, so those who take a chance are often rewarded with a choice room. Winter resorts often remain open for business throughout the summer. Instead of skiing, sledding and ice skating at a mountain resort, enjoy hiking, swimming and golf during the summer months. Also consider travel destinations that most people choose in the winter, like the Caribbean or Hawaii. The weather remains balmy and calm, but prices drop considerably. Newly renovated resorts often offer special introductory packages, so high occupancy stay abreast of the plans of your favorite spots to take advantage of deals.

Consider us your ticket to last minute summer deals or thoroughly contemplated winter travels here at PRIME TRAVEL, where we are especially knowledgeable in helping you choose an unforgettable destination, as well as navigating today's complicated airline fares. Former Fire Chief Favors Rezoning At Quincy Ave., Water St.

Former Quincy Fire Department Chief Edward Barry spoke in favor of rezoning Mass Electric property near the intersection of Water St. and Quincy Ave. at a recent public hearing on the issue.

The hearing, which was recessed until Sept. 5, concerns the rezoning from Business B to Residence B of land located "on the northeasterly side of Summer St. from numbers 32 to 70 and the northwesterly side of Water St. from numbers 3 to 27 and the southerly side of Quincy Ave. from numbers 47 to 65."

Barry, who has lived 73 years on Summer St., said he remembered the now vacant parcel from its days as a site for Quincy Electric, then Quincy Electric Light and Power Company, then Mass Electric until the company moved operations to Rte. 18 in Weymouth.

"It's lain fallow for at least 18 or 19 years," Barry said of the parcel. "It would make an ideal playground and it would be a real plus for the city."

Several other residents spoke in favor of the proposed re-zoning but Michael Della Barba, representing Mass Electric, opposed the move and argued that the city was guilty of "spot-zoning," or singling out Mass Electric's property for a zoning change.

Councillor Daniel Raymond, who proposed the zoning change, said the move was not a case of spot-zoning and cited the predominantly residential nature of the Water St. area.

Raymond also said the city's Planning Board had voted unanimously in favor of the change.

A Senior's Fond Memories

Ed Spargo, Quincy's "Ambassador of Good Health," saw most of the 20th century.

Now a still enthusiastic 92 (he practices what he preaches about good health) he wonders what the new century will bring. And plans to hang around to see.

But he and others his age -- and some younger and some older -- certainly got to see a lot of things come about in the 20th century.

Ed once asked in this column: Just who is a Senior Citizen and what is one?

And proceeded to answer the question with a bumper crop of interesting tidbits.

"We (Senior Citizens) were here," he said, "before television, penicillin, polio and flu shots, antibiotics and frisbees were dreamed of.

And before, he recalled:

Frozen foods, nylon, dacron, Xerox, Kinsey, fluorescent lights, directional signals, radials, automatic shift, tubeless tires, condos, Social Security, ball point pens, stretch limousines, Scotch tape, VCRs, TV dinners, the Expressway, the mid-Cape highway, computers.

"We were before pantyhose and hula hoops," he noted. "Before Hawaii and Alaska became states. Before men wore long hair and earrings and women wore tuxedos.

"We got married first and then lived together.

"When we were young and innocent, money was tight but neighbors weren't. In fact they shared and shared alike. Locked doors in our homes were unheard of and unnecessary.

"We were before yogurt, plastic, the 40-hour work week and the minimum wage. In our day, closets were for clothes, not for coming out of. Bunnies were small rabbits and not scantily-clad girls or Volkswagens.

"We were before Grandma Moses, cup-sizing bras. Girls wore Peter Pan collars and thought cleavage was something butchers did.

Seniors, he also noted, were before Batman, Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer, Snopop, vitamin pills, DDT, disposable diapers and pizza.

"The exploration of Space was unheard of. So were air-conditioned cars, cake mixes and those magic 'money machines' at the bank."

Senior citizens, he added, were also before: micro-waves, credit cards, FM radio, tape recorders, electric typewriters, word processors, electronic music, disco-dancing, rock music.

"When we were growing up we thought fast food was something you ate only on a diet or during Lent. And AIDS was unheard of, thank the Lord.

"The phrase 'making out' in our day referred to how you performed on an exam and not ... And 'scoring' meant innocently keeping score at a baseball game."

Cigarette smoking was fashionable, he recalled, but "grass was for mowing, pot was something you cooked in and Coke was a refreshing drink."

"You could get a Chevy coupe for $500 in early depression days. And gas to run it went for 12 cents a gallon.

"We were before night baseball, artificial turf, the designated hitter. And teams traveled by train."

Spargo, an ardent baseball fan, fondly remembered the Boston Braves who though financially strapped themselves, let kids into the games for 10 cents Saturday afternoons as members of the "Knot Hole Gang."

And adults could sit in the bleachers at both Braves Field and Fenway Park for a quarter.

"There were no jet planes, helicopters, interstate highways or vending machines. But a nickel bought you a ride on a street car, or a phone call, a good-sized Hershey or any other candy bar. And, enough stamps to mail a letter and five post cards.

And for a "thin dime," he recalled, you could spend Saturday afternoon at a local movie theatre seeing another chapter of a continuing serial, cartoons, previews of coming attractions and two movies known as a double feature.

"Yes, sir-ee," he said proudly, "we are today's senior citizens, a hardy bunch when you think of how radically our little corner of the world has changed. And of the major adjustments we have had to make."

An interesting century, the 20th.

Progress, of course, is supposed to march on. And if it does, the 21st century should top the 20th for change.

But for sentimental reasons, Ed will take the 20th and all its fond memories.

Cooperation Pays Off On New Abigail Adams Wayside

Besides being a fitting tribute to the Adams Family, the new interpretative wayside exhibit at the base of the Abigail Adams statue in Quincy Center is a good example of the benefits of a public/private partnership.

That's because, said Adams National Historic Park (Adams NHP) Superintendent Marianne Peak, the Adams NHP received a grant for the wayside from the National Park Service Cost Share Program, a grant made possible by the combined efforts of the Adams NHP and the Quincy Partnership.

The principal purpose of the NPS Challenge Cost Share Program, said Peak, is to work with such groups as the Quincy Partnership in order to support a public project for educational, interpretative, resource protection, and stewardship purposes.

The Quincy Partnership — an all-volunteer non-profit organization comprised of roughly 15 members from the city's business, government, and civic communities — sponsored many events to raise funds for the bronze statue depicting Abigail Adams and 10-year old son John Quincy Adams.

And it was that private fundraising, Peak said, which qualified the Adams National Historic Park for the grant award and made the application successful.

The Adams NHP had substantial involvement with the Quincy Partnership during the statue project, which was created by artist Lloyd Lillie of Newton, MA. The new wayside identifies the figures and features a quotation from the letters of Abigail Adams to John Quincy when he was 10 years of age.

The quotation reads: "Improve your understanding for acquiring useful knowledge and virtue, such as will render you an ornament to society, and Honour to your Country, and a Blessing to Your Parents ... Your ever affectionate mother, A.A."

The wayside will be viewed by the general public and some 80,000 park visitors and is a destination along the Quincy Historic Trail.

Special wayside dedication ceremonies were held June 30.

The first lie detector was developed by John Larsen in 1921.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS POSTCARD showing the Norfolk Downs railroad depot is dated October, 1928. Note the auto stopped at the gate at the grade crossing. At this time more than 150 trains a day passed through this grade crossing which was closed shortly after this picture was taken. There once was a plan to build a major east-west roadway here, which would have connected Holbrook and Billings Roads to Wollaston Boulevard. Other than the railroad tracks, only the buildings on the left remain in this scene today. The Pneumatic Scale factory on the right is now the site of a Super Stop & Shop and a Citizens Bank branch is on the depot site.

Congratulations And Well Done, Tony

July 3, 2000

Mr. Anthony Siciliano
Deputy Director of Emergency Management
55 Sea St.
Quincy
Congratulations on your latest award in being named Emergency Manager of the Year by the Northeast States Emergency Consortium. It is most satisfying when such an honor is bestowed by one's peers. They are the people who know what your varied assignments involve and your readiness to accept the most difficult of tasks is most exemplary.

Your assistance in coming to the aid of Quincy senior citizens on many occasions over the years has been most valued.

During the crisis to save Quincy Hospital from closing its doors you were very much in the front lines in providing the type of back-up that you and your colleagues are qualified to render.

der.

On the last Sunday of November the annual Quincy Christmas Parade would not be able to kick off as successfully as it does without your forces and assistance at the ready. You and your colleagues are an integral part of all major parades held in the City of Quincy.

Over the years you have acquired valuable experience in handling emergency situations particularly in times of floods, fires, storms, disasters, and accidents.

You and your colleagues should be justly proud of the many accomplishments of Quincy's Emergency Management services. You have demonstrated dedication and know-how in all types of situations.

I wish you continued success in providing these needed services to the entire city of Quincy and, in particular, to the senior citizens, the fastest growing population of any city of comparable size in the United States.

Unhappy About GOP Delegate Vote

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On April 29, I attended the Republican Delegate Caucus for the 10th Congressional District held in Plymouth.

Along with more than 100 other people, I voted for three delegates whose views I share to represent me at the Republican National Convention in Philadelphia (July 31 to Aug. 3). Their nearest competitors received about 25 votes.

I was unhappy to learn several weeks later that someone in the State Republican Party had arbitrarily canceled the vote and named other people as delegates.

Urges The Public To Conserve Drinking Water

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On behalf of water utilities throughout Massachusetts, I urge the public to conserve our vital but limited drinking water supplies and to obey any local voluntary or mandatory water restrictions this summer.

Heavy spring and early summer rainfalls have replenished water supplies in some communities. However, total precipitation throughout the year, not just during one season, affects water supplies.

New England relies primarily on winter snowfalls to recharge groundwater sources (aquifers). Unlike rain, which often washes into rivers, then into oceans, snow slowly melts, seeps into the ground, and replenishes aquifer systems.

Given the lack of snowfall during the past three winters and long-range forecasts from the National Weather Service for above-normal temperatures this summer, many Massachusetts communities could face critical water shortages during the next few months.

As a result, voluntary or mandatory restrictions on outdoor water use may be necessary to make sure that sufficient water supplies are available to service homes and businesses; to maintain adequate water pressure, and to fight fires.

For more information contact the local water department, the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection at (800) 426-4791, or the New England Water Works Association at (508) 893-7979.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Quincy Called Expendable As A-Bomb Target

By PAUL HAROLD

Members of the city council were somewhat startled when a federal civil defense spokesman advised them that the city was expendable as an atomic bomb target.

Dr. Walter Cronin, Cambridge's civil defense director, said that the federal government would do nothing to aid the 83,000 residents of Quincy if it was hit with an atomic bomb because it would be too busy assisting defense installations. "The citizens of Quincy and other east coast communities would have to take care of themselves," he said. The only federal assistance would be for the Fore River shipyard and the Edison power plant in Weymouth.

He further advised the council that Quincy was more vulnerable as a target from a submarine launched rocket. "A submarine could surface off the coast of Provincetown and do a beautiful job on Quincy. It means tremendous devastation here. They wouldn't need an atomic bomb," he said.

$10,000 FOR WATER STUDY

City Manager William Deegan successfully lobbied the city council for an appropriation of $10,000 for a study of the city's water system. It was the first such study in 24 years.

Deegan pointed out the immediacy of the problem, with some areas of the city without any water for hours a day, while other suffered from low pressure. He said the MDC's new Blue Hills reservoir would provide some relief, but only if the city's carrying capacity was increased.

HOT-RODDERS WARNED

Captain Joseph Flaherty, head of the Quincy Police traffic bureau, issued a warning to hot-rodders in the city: any misbehavior would result in the loss of license and registration.

Six operators with suped-up vehicles already had their licenses suspended.

QUINCY-ISMS

Health Commissioner Dr. Richard Ash called on the city to halt four summer nuisances: lack of water, dumps too close to residential neighborhoods, pollution in Quincy Bay and cesspools. . . Gunnar Myrbeck, president of the Jaycees, presented the proceeds from gum machines to Police Chief Joseph Hughes for the Police Boys' Club. . . Councillor Frank Orcutt said he had an alibi for the time when a confidential memo was stolen from the city manager's desk. He was at Orchard Beach in Squantum. . . The Probus Club held its annual clambake at the Braintree Rod and Gun Club. Archie Cohen was chairman. . . There was a private funeral for Earl Pratt, president of the Neighborhood Club. . . Donald Edmonston, president of Local 5 at the Quincy shipyard, said the general membership meeting was cancelled because of the lack of a quorum. . . Gail Ann Bosworth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bosworth of Small St., celebrated her third birthday. . . Edward Hanrahan of the Quincy Liquor Dealers said that Governor Paul Dever was invited to their annual clambake. . . Old Colony was the low bidder at $29,677 for the paving of the five new streets in the Snug Harbor section of Germantown. . . There were 19 candidates for state representative (for three seats) in the First Norfolk District. Republican Alfred Keith was the only incumbent. Other Republicans were Clifton Baker, George Yarrington, Robert Zottoll, Carter Lee, Joseph McDonough, Thomas Martin, Nicola Barbadoro, Joseph Goode, Thomas Burke, Edward Goode and Daniel Mullane. . . At the Mohigan Market watermelon was four cents a pound. . . At Quincy City Hospital as daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Francis O'Hare of Channing St. A daughter was also born to Mr. and Mrs. Victor Mariano of Lancaster St. . . Carl Awed and Irene Aristide were married at St. John's Church. . . One hundred trees in South and West Quincy were infected with the Dutch Elm disease. . . An additional $19,000 was appropriated for the auditorium at the Squantum School. An estimated 150 residents of Rock Island crowded the city council chamber to protest the charges for sewer improvements in their area. Councillor David Crowley said they were being charged betterment costs higher than for the same work in other parts of the city. . . Seat Scout Malcolm Brummitt was given the God and Country Award.

Children's Theatre In 'Camp Chippewa Capers'

Diane Purdy's Children's Theatre Workshop presents "Camp Chippewa Capers" Friday, July 28, at 7 p.m. at the Woodward School

Theatre, 1102 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The play, written by Purdy, revolves around the camp councillors of "Camp Chippewa" trying to put on their end-of-the-summer extravaganza amidst a host of difficulties. The play will be performed by children in Purdy's summer theatre camp, in keeping with the theater's motto of "drama by doing."

Advanced ticket sales are $5, tickets for senior citizens and children under six are $6, and general door sales are $7.

For more information or for reservations, call (617) 472-9233.

Guitarist Michael Nix At Crane Concert Series Aug. 3

Guitarist Michael Nix brings his lively program Lutes and Limberjacks to the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Square, Thursday, Aug. 3, from 12:30 p.m. until 1:30 p.m.

Lutes and Limberjacks is an interactive program using guitars, lutes, and banjos. It explores the sounds, history, uses, and construction of these instruments through song, instrumentals, and audience participation. The range of musical styles is intended for listeners of all ages.

Nix has performed varied programs of classical guitar and lute music throughout the United States and Asia. He has appeared on television and public radio. Lutes and Limberjacks is a featured piece of the Connecticut Classical Guitar Society's Andres Segovia outreach program "The Guitar About Town."

Nix, whose compositions have earned him awards and commissions, performs not only as a soloist but also as an ensemble member.

The library's concert series concludes Aug. 10 when the ensemble INCA SON plays music of the Andes.

Concertgoers are welcome to bring lawn chairs, blankets, and picnics. In case of rain, concerts will be held at the Adams Shore Branch Library, 519 Sea St. Both sites are accessible and concerts are free.

The series is funded in part by the Quincy Cultural Council, a local agency supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

McCole Watercolors Exhibit At Renaissance Coffee Shop

A collection of original watercolor paintings by local artist Dan McCole will be on exhibit at Renaissance Coffee Shop, 45 Billings Rd., North Quincy, through Aug. 15, announces Renaissance owner Kevin McGurl.

The paintings range from portraits, boat scenes, landscapes and still life, and span many years and areas. Local sites are represented, including Maring Bay, Squantum, South Boston, Neponset River and Duxbury. Other scenes are from Provincetown, Truro, Duxbury, South Boston, Ireland, Vermont, Paris and Giverny, France and Key West, Fla.

The South Boston paintings are of subjects no longer in operation such as: the City Point Aquarium, the Head House, the raft at Kelly's Landing, the Strand movie theater and an old Boston elevated street car.

McCole is a graduate of Vesper George School of Art. He has been in the newspaper business for most of his life, and is currently a production news editor at the Boston Herald. A collection of his works are on permanent exhibition at the Crump Art Gallery in South Boston.

The exhibit also shows prints of available originals and recently sold paintings.

McGurl has supported local arts and artists since the shop's opening last year. He comes from a family of artists. A huge 20-foot wide mural by his father Jim McGurl, depicting an old scene of coffee roasting ovens, covers one side of the shop's wall. The opposite wall is dedicated to art exhibitions.

Clam Chowder

It was a cool weekend at the cape when we visited our daughter Nancy, son-in-law Jed and family. We never took off our sweaters.

After ordering clam chowder at a restaurant and complaining that "we just can't get a good cup of chowder these days," I decided to make my own the next day.

It's a tried and true recipe (and so easy) which always works. I hope you will agree.

Clam Chowder

2-3 pounds steamers
a container of minced fresh clams
2 pints half & half (or cream)
3 medium potatoes (diced)
3 medium onions (cut in small pieces)
1/2 stick butter
salt and pepper to taste
Cook the clams until open, and chuck.

Save and strain the liquid, that's the secret of the chowder.

In a large pot, melt the butter, sauté the onions until clear. Add some of the clam juice and cook a bit more. Add the diced potatoes and more of the juice. Cook until the potatoes are tender. (not mushy). We cut the clams in pieces, but they can also be chopped in a blender.

Add the clams, the extra minced, the rest of the juice and cook covered slowly until it comes to a boil. Add the cream or half and half slowly until it just about comes to a boil. Turn heat off and keep covered until ready to serve.

This recipe is loaded with clams, something almost always missing when eaten out. It can also be kept refrigerated for about three days. (also be frozen)

P.S. Even our little granddaughters, Hannah and Sophia and their cousin Lauren liked it!

Eagle Scout Honors For Troop 3's Vincent Bissanti

Vincent Bissanti, a Weymouth resident and member of Scout Troop 3 in Quincy, was recently presented his Eagle Scout badge by Mayor James Sheets at the Torre Dei Passeri Social Club, Washington St.

Bissanti, age 18, earned his badge by constructing a three-story fire escape for a soon-to-open homeless shelter and furniture bank in Weymouth run by Friends of the Homeless of the South Shore.

A Boston College High School graduate who will attend Penn State, Bissanti recruited his teammates from the BC High football and rugby teams to complete the project, which was finished in November. Joseph Bissanti, Vincent's father and Troop 3 Scoutmaster, said he was proud of his son's commitment, noting the fire escape was the result of three years of work and planning while Vincent still dedicated himself to academics and athletics. "It was quite a difficult and involved task," Bissanti said.

Along with Sheets, a representative from Governor Paul Cellucci's Office was also on hand for the ceremonies honoring Bissanti.

Broadmeadows Students Win Stock Market Game

Six students from Broadmeadows Middle School in Quincy have taken first place in The Boston Globe's fall Stock Market Game, a simulation of Wall Street trading conducted nationally by the Securities Industry Association and administered locally by The Boston Globe.

The students, seventh graders Melissa Lewis, Robert McKeever, Kevin Richardson, Alysia DiMuzio, Lorrie Oakes, and Kerri McAteer, won the competition by possessing the most equity in their portfolios at the end of the 10-week trading period.

To play the Stock Market Game, students start out with a hypothetical $100,000 and invest it in common stocks listed in the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE), the American Stock Exchange (ASE) and the Nasdaq, and follow their progress daily by reading The Boston Globe.

The successful Broadmeadows Middle School team's hypothetical assets increased by over 25 percent, totaling $125,378. For playing the market so equitably, each member of the Quincy team was awarded a $50 US Savings Bond.

Offered during the fall and spring semesters, the Stock Market Game is designed for classroom use to help students understand economic concepts, the stock market, and the costs and benefits involved in economic decision-making.

Susan McDonald Earns Honors At College Marketing Conference

Susan McDonald of Quincy, vice president of programming for the Bridgewater State College Chapter of the American Marketing Association, was part of the delegation from BSC that brought home two major awards from the International Collegiate Conference of the AMA.

McDonald, a senior at BSC, is majoring in management science with a concentration in marketing.

The daughter of Jim McDonald and the late Ellie McDonald, she is a 1995 graduate of Archbishop Williams High School.

The BSC chapter of the AMA received the award for Outstanding Regional Chapter in the East. This award, which honors outstanding achievement during the calendar year, marks the highest achievement in the history of the BSC chapter. The delegation also received a first place award in the Exhibit Hall competition.

Students who attended the three-day conference in New Orleans took part in a variety of learning and leadership sessions on topics such as advertising, Internet marketing and marketing research.

City Council Approves Clubhouse For Quarry Hills

The City Council has voted unanimously to approve construction of a clubhouse at the Quarry Hills Recreation Complex in West Quincy.

Acting as the special P.U.D. permit granting authority July 17, the council approved the 42,500 square foot clubhouse/function hall, which also entails a driving range and a 414-space parking lot.

The permit does come subject to a list of 24 conditions enumerated by the Quincy Planning Board, which gave the clubhouse plan its affirmative recommendation July 12.

Conditions include, among others: plans for waste disposal, a water detention area, and an insect and rodent control plan; numerous submissions to the Quincy Fire Department regarding safety issues; and installation of traffic control signals at the intersection of Willard St. and Copeland St.

Attorney Dennis Harrington, representing Quarry Hills Associates, called the conditions "reasonable and necessary" and said his clients were not in opposition.

One resident, Denise Valenti of Forest Ave., spoke in opposition at the public hearing and voiced her concern that the project would not comply with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). "I want this to be on record, so that when there are non-compliance issues, no one can say they didn't know," Valenti said.

Valenti was assured by several representatives of Quarry Hills Associates that state law mandated ADA compliance and that the project was meeting its obligations.

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico emphasized that every project begun during his tenure was in compliance with ADA and remarked of the 27-hole golf course project in general that "we have seen every issue handled in the best possible way."

The golf course, built over landfill and recently transported fill from the Central Artery Project (Big Dig), is scheduled to open in the spring of 2002.

The piece of property on which the clubhouse, driving range, and parking lot will be built was zoned for P.U.D. use in June. The golf course itself has been zoned Open Space.

Beechwood Harbor Cruise To Help Repair Storm Damaged Playground

Funds raised by the Beechwood Community Life Centre Boston Harbor Cruise, Wednesday, Aug. 2 will go to helping repair the center's pre-school playground which was heavily damaged by lightning in a recent storm.

A lightning bolt struck the playground tower during the June 27 storm and it and torrential rains and heavy winds caused other heavy damage to the playground area.

Sharron Beals, executive director, said the playground has been out of commission for four weeks. Repairs are now underway and insurance will cover a good part of the repair costs. But, Beals said, there is a $1,000 deductible expense she hopes can be made up from revenue from the cruise.

Originally, Beals said, the cruise was planned to raise monies Project SAFE, to purchase and install smoke alarms for senior citizens.

Now, she said, repairing the pre-s school playground now has become the first priority.

"We are optimistic that the cruise will be a great success so we can repair the playground and fulfill the identified senior needs as well," said Beechwood Board President Don Uvanitte.

The three-hour harbor cruise aboard the James Doherty will leave Marina Bay at 7 p.m. Boarding will be at 6:30 p.m.

Complimentary food and music by a DJ will be provided. Cost is $35 per-person or $50 per couple. Tickets can be purchased at the Beechwood Center, 440 East Squantum St. Call 471-5712 for more information.

PROPERLY ALIGNED

If the wheels of your vehicle are not properly aligned, it can lead to uneven tire wear, steering difficulty and stress on the steering components. Most cars need wheel alignment every 30,000 to 60,000 miles. One of the aspects that technicians pay attention to when performing a wheel alignment is "toe." This term refers to the front edge of the wheel. "Toe in" means that the front edges of the two wheels are closer together than the back edges. "Toe out" refers to front edges that are farther apart than the back edges. "Caster," which is the tilt of the steering connection to the wheel, may also require adjustment. "Camber" is the inward and outward tilt of the wheel's top.

making sure your wheels are aligned can save you money. Don't hesitate to ask any questions about anything related to your car when you bring it into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for servicing. We have modern test equipment, the right parts and the best ASE Certified service technicians available in the area. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Two Bankruptcy Matters Before License Board

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Two matters involving bankruptcy proceedings came before the License Board at Tuesday's meeting.

A motion to withdraw the all alcoholic license by Kelly's Pub & Restaurant, 21-27 Billings Rd. was granted.

The hearing will be continued until Aug. 29.

According to Chairman Joseph Shea, the restaurant has filed for bankruptcy and the license transfer has to be re-advertised and re-structured for the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC).

In other business, the board placed on file the bankruptcy proceedings of Richard's Liquors on 302

Quincy Ave. pending the outcome of the future sale.

According to Atty. Tom Vangel, the owners of the company had filed Chapter 11 late last year, but were unable to re-organize.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman and Det. Lt. Robert M. Perchard reported that a break-in occurred recently at the liquor store. Both Gorman and Perchard said they had concerns about the future security of the building.

Gorman said the building was entered in through the rear of the store where cement blocks were actually broken in pieces to gain entrance. He said the building has since been secured and bolted with plywood.

Perchard said he was concerned about "kids trying to crawl down an elevator shaft" to gain access to the rest of the inventory still in the building.

Vangel promised he would speak to the owners regarding the removal of the inventory or to place it in storage.

The bankruptcy meeting caused Shea to utter, "July seems to be bankruptcy month in Quincy, lets welcome August."

Kris Pappas At Summerfest Aug. 2

The Quincy Summerfest continues its concert season with popular jazz vocalist Kris Pappas Wednesday, Aug. 2, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater.

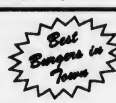

Pappas will be performing this afternoon

(Thursday) on the lawn of the Thomas Crane Library for those wishing a preview of her Aug. 2 performance.

The remaining schedule includes: Soul Kitchen, Aug. 9; Horns in the House, Aug. 16; Magic, Aug. 23; The Alumni Band, Aug. 30; and The United States Air Force Band, Sept. 6.

Sponsored by the non-profit Quincy South Shore Cultural Commission and the City of Quincy, Summerfest 2000 relies on private and public donations to finance the concerts.

Bethany Church 2000-Pound Gargoyle Must Be Removed

the corner of the steeple, and it's actually the massive weight of the tower that holds the gargoyle in place. It will take a lot of time and ingenuity to put this thing back together."

The first step, Pasqualucci said, will be for an on-site crane to place slings around the gargoyle, providing enough stability for workers on man-lifts to cut off the exposed portion of the gargoyle, leaving the inside backing alone.

After that, workers will hoist scaffolding and remove enough of the steeple corner to get at the two-foot deep gargoyle backing.

Both the interior and exterior pieces, Pasqualucci said, will be molded and recast as one complete piece, then restored to its place on the tower.

"It's too dangerous to begin with scaffolding," Pasqualucci added. "At 2000 pounds, it (the gargoyle) could easily rip any scaffolding down."

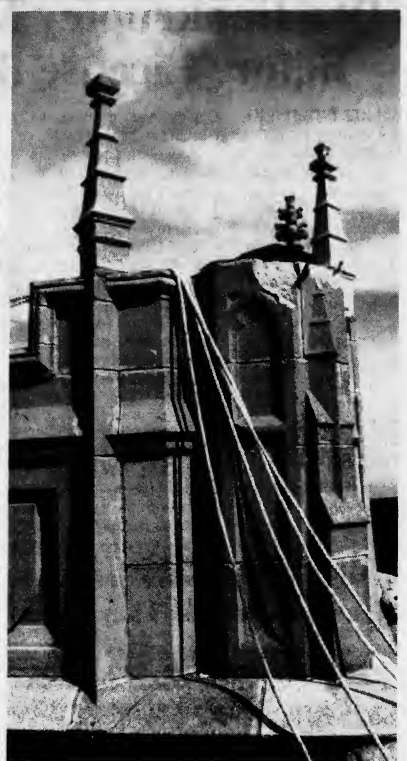

Similar molding and recasting, Pasqualucci said, were under way for the corner pinnacle and several smaller pinnacles which were destroyed last week.

And it's this molding and recasting, along with the decorative and ornamental nature of the entire restoration project, which will add considerable amounts of time to the project.

"By the time we're ready to put everything back in place, it will be winter and we'll have to stop," Pasqualucci said.

AND HERE'S a look at where the pinnacle destroyed by lightning once stood. Rope from the tower is loosely tied to a damaged gargoyle which will have to be removed and replaced.

ROBERT PASQUALUCCI (left) of Louis Pasqualucci & Son, Inc., general contractor, and Rick McCarthy, foreman, survey the damage to the Bethany Congregational Church steeple Monday in an aerial platform operated by Tom Azar of Marr Scaffolding Co. in South Boston. The inspection took place 120 feet up.

BECAUSE OF A crack, this 2000-pound gargoyle will be removed from the tower of Bethany Congregational Church this week. The crack is noticeable near the base of the gargoyle. Contractors say removing and replacing the gargoyle will be a delicate procedure.

O'Brien Delivers $14,000, Promises $1.2M Extra

message of proper management at the state level.

"It goes far beyond the dollar figure," said the mayor. "$14,000 is $14,000 that we can use and we'll put it to good use, but, more importantly, it shows the Treasurer's Office is doing the job that needs to be done."

The return of the funds owed Quincy illustrates a new priority for the Office of the Treasurer under O'Brien's leadership: the continuing effort to return tens of millions of dollars in abandoned property to its owners.

"The old philosophy was essentially to put it in the state coffers," O'Brien said, explaining that, although the practice made good economic sense for the state, it was an invisible tax placed not just on individuals but on workplaces and on cities like Quincy.

"It's your money and we're trying to make sure you get what's yours," O'Brien said, adding that over $60,000 had been returned to South Shore communities and over $350,000 had been returned across Massachusetts.

Much of the money owed Quincy was turned over to the Treasurer's Office during the 1990's, but some was turned over as early as 1980.

The $14,000 is actually the second parcel of abandoned property returned to the city this calendar year. Several months ago, records detailing $3,459.25 of abandoned property that the state was holding for Quincy Hospital and the police department were conveyed to local officials by O'Brien's office.

After the installation of a new computer system and the consolidation of the abandoned property database, the Treasurer's Office FOUND MONEY: State Treasurer Shannon O'Brien hands Mayor James Sheets an application for the $14,332 owed Quincy in abandoned property. O'Brien's office is making the return of abandoned property a top priority and has already returned nearly $350,000 statewide.

located the additional Quincy properties. After the latest property is returned, the Treasury will have conveyed a total of $17,791.92 in abandoned properties to the city.

Abandoned property can be anything from Certificates of Deposit and passbook savings accounts to stocks and uncashed dividends. Under Massachusetts Abandoned Property Law, assets that have been inactive for more than three years (with a few exceptions) are declared abandoned and turned over to the state Treasury.

Before she left, O'Brien left copies of this year's abandoned property list at City Hall. The list contains more than 20,000 names, including 1,114 names from the South Shore, with a total value of $50 million.

The 2000 and 1999 abandoned property lists are available on the Internet at www.state.ma.us/treasury. Individuals may also call O'Brien's Abandoned Property Division at (617) 367-0400, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., to access this year's list, make a claim, or search the more than two million records in the Treasury's abandoned property database.

FHA Programs Help First-Timers Buy Their 'Dream Home'

By CAROL BULMAN,
President

Conway Financial Services

In a recent report, an official of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development presented an impressive picture of the turnaround of the Federal Housing Administration's mortgage loan programs.

"FHA is one of the federal government's real success stories," said Assistant Secretary for Housing William Apgar. "Since 1934, FHA has helped nearly 30 million American families to become homeowners. We do this by insuring home mortgages, providing valuable credit enhancement that encourages private lenders to make home loans they otherwise would deem too risky."

The program has been largely successful, but about 10 years ago it was in financial decline.

"Despite a six-decade history of providing access to mortgage capital — in good times and in bad — by the early 1990s, the FHA was broke," Apgar said. "Yet, after radical restructuring under the leadership of Secretary Andrew Cuomo, the program is projected to contribute nearly $20 billion to the national budget surplus."

The FHA was created by the National Housing Act of 1934, which was designed to help the real estate market recover from the Great Depression. It did this by establishing a federally sponsored insurance fund to provide a safety net in case a loan went into default. This allowed customers with less than a 20 percent downpayment to purchase a home.

Since that time, the FHA has provided the framework for a true national mortgage market that led to the creation of the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) and the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Association (Freddie Mac). These two agencies form the secondary mortgage market by purchasing loans from lenders, freeing up cash for the banks to make more loans.

FHA's three-percent downpayment and flexible qualifying standards set it apart from most conventional loans, but its special edge is that it allows 100 percent of all monies in the transaction to come from a gift. Many first-time buyers today have difficulty raising the necessary money for a downpayment and closing costs. With the FHA, as long as the buyers qualify for the monthly payment, the required investment may come from a gift from a relative or a grant from a public agency.

FHA reports that so far this year, 82 percent of all loans insured by the agency were for first-time buyers. Some of that success can be attributed to the increase in the FHA's maximum loan limits that occurred earlier in the year.

Buyers in Massachusetts can now borrow up to $218,500 for a single-family home in Bristol, Plymouth, Suffolk, Norfolk, Essex, Middlesex and Worcester counties. The limits for multi-family homes are $246,000 for a two-family house, $299,000 for three-families, and $345,000 for four-unit properties.

During the past several years, the FHA program has acted more like a privately run firm in the way the agency has balanced budgets, cut waste and fine-tuned and added products.

The FHA program's success benefits all U.S. citizens not only because of the expanded housing opportunities, but also from the agency's financial contribution to our economy.

South Shore Association of Realtors MAR Charity 2000 Fundraiser Aug. 10

The South Shore Association of Realtors® Realtor Community Service Committee in conjunction with the Massachusetts Association of Realtors® will hold a Charity 2000 Night Thursday, Aug. 10 at the Furnace Brook Country Club, 74 Summit Ave., Quincy.

The South Shore Association of Realtors® has chosen the Brockton Coalition for the Homeless, Inc., MainSpring House as the recipient. Raffle tickets are on sale now through the South Shore Association of Realtors® at $100 each. Only 300 tickets will be sold.

A grand prize of $5,000 will be given in addition to other cash prizes. The winner does not have to be present at the drawing Aug. 10 to win.

The mission of the Brockton Coalition for the Homeless is to end homelessness through providing emergency shelter, education, job training, case management, housing search assistance and other support services.

By supporting South Shore Association's Charity 2000 Fundraiser, the Brockton Coalition for the Homeless will be assisted in its tireless efforts to accomplish their mission. For more information on the sale of raffle tickets, contact the South Shore Association of Realtors® Board Office at 781-849-6700.

Pet-Resistant Insect Screening

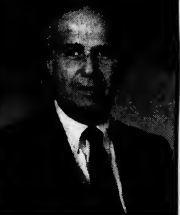

Screens are an excellent way to keep insect pests from invading outdoor living space, but even the best screens can't protect you when they have been ripped or shredded by pets.

A new generation of screen actually resists tears and punctures caused by pets jumping on screen doors and porches.

Phifer PetScreen® is seven times stronger than regular insect screening, making it ideal for people with dogs and cats and high-traffic areas. Made from strong vinyl-coated polyester, PetScreen is available in popular screening colors, black and grey.

witness someone having a heart attack or other near-fatal injury or sudden illness.

There may also be a good chance that the person will die without cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) — the lifesaving act of supplying oxygen to the brain and vital organs of a person whose heart has stopped pumping.

In this country last year, 325,000 people died who might otherwise have lived if someone nearby had been trained in CPR. A person's chance of surviving a severe heart attack without CPR is 1 in 20. With CPR, the chance of survival increases to 1 in

4. And CPR started by a bystander doubles the likelihood of survival for victims of cardiac arrest (when the heart actually stops beating).

CPR training is by no means an adults-only issue: Teenagers and young adults in particular should have CPR skills as they participate in outdoor activities, sports, and social and work activities. Young people, after all, are on the front lines in restaurants, stores, recreational activities and other public places.

In fact, 15 states mandate CPR training, first aid training, or both in their high school curricula. Massachusetts is not one of them. The Bay State does have a curriculum guideline that high school students be trained in first aid and CPR, but so far only four school districts — Algonquin, Quabbin, Sharon, Wachusett — include such training in their health classes.

"There's clearly a payoff in learning a lifesaving procedure such as CPR," says Worcester-area physician Thomas L. Rosenfield, M.D., who is leading a Massachusetts Medical Society initiative to establish CPR training in the state's high schools.

He says that every high school student should have an opportunity to be trained and certified in basic CPR.

"They are the future leaders of our communities," he says. "What better example of community involvement and concern for others can there be than helping someone in serious trouble by practicing something you can learn in about an hour?"

CPR is relatively easy to master, and many organizations in Massachusetts, such as the Red Cross and the American Heart Association offer lessons.

ming, camp water sports, and sprinklers can cause swimmer's ear.

According to Harvard Vanguard pediatrician Dr. James Cooley, swimmer's ear, which is different from a middle ear infection, is an inflammation of the outer ear canal irritated by water that stays in the ear too long.

Here are some tips to help you cope with the condition:

- For ear pain that lasts more than two or three days, your child should see a doctor.

- For swimmer's ear, the usual remedy is a prescription ear drop, though, in most cases, the infection will eventually go away on its own.

- A child with swimmer's ear shouldn't swim for 2-3

- When back in the water, make sure they dry their ears after each swim.

- If your child feels water in the ear, have them tilt their head and jump up and down to release the pressure.

- If you have any questions about ear pain, you should contact your physician.

Local 88 Tunnel Workers Dedicate New Union Hall

Tunnel Workers Local 88, a Local of the Laborers' International Union of North America, recently dedicated their newly renovated union hall on Washington St.

The project was completed entirely with the help of union members who worked for months refurbishing the old yogurt factory into a state-of-the-art meeting hall and office facility.

In keeping with Quincy's history as "The City of Presidents," Local 88 named their meeting hall "Presidents Hall" in honor of all past presidents of the International Union.

On hand for the dedication ceremonies were: Mayor James Sheets; City Council President Paul Harold; City Councilors Daniel Raymond and Tim Cahill; State Senator Michael Morrissey; and State Rep. Ronald Mariano.

Also participating in the ribbon cutting were a number of officials representing county government and the Massachusetts chapters of the AFL/CIO and Massachusetts Building Trades.

David Grafton represented the U.S. Department of Labor -- OSHA. District officers of the union were on hand to tour the hall and note the theme of Laborers' Training and Safety programs prominently displayed throughout the facility.

Armand Sabitoni, vice president and regional manager of the Laborers' International Union, spoke to the officers and members of the Local after the invocation given by Father Edward Boyle of the Massachusetts Labor Guild.

Scott Boidi, business manager of the Local, recognized the "time, effort, and toil contributed by every member of the Local throughout the years which helped to finally make this home a reality for the members."

Boidi cited the Local's ability to now run "more training programs, work on political action campaigns, and reach out to the greater community to spread the word about unions and collective action."

Daniel Dolan On Mock Trial Team

Daniel M. Dolan of Quincy, a senior at Boston College High School, has learned what it is like to be a trial lawyer.

Dolan is a member of the BC High Mock Trial team which tried cases before real judges in local courthouses.

This was BC High's second year in the Massachusetts Bar Association's Mock Trial competition.

The competition, now in its 15th year, attracted a record number of high schools and middle schools. An estimated 3,300 students and 350 volunteer attorneys and judges took part in the program of 250 mock trials held in courthouses across the state.

Hearing aid "Tips from Tobias"

"Do I need two hearing aids?"
"Need" is the tricky word here. We can all manage with some degree of difficulty with one ear, one eye, etc.

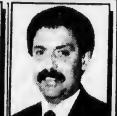

We should be asking "what is my potential and how can I achieve it." Your choice has a tremendous impact on your quality of life. Recent studies have been published by several researchers examining the phenomenon of "auditory deprivation" and "acclimatization". The first, deprivation is the brain's inability to process sounds and speech, because of a lack of input over several years time. For instance the person that waits 10 years to get a hearing aid, expects instant correction and puts it in the drawer after two days of trying it. The brain needs time to recover this function!
"Acclimatization" refers to the brain's ability to recover or improve the ability to process sounds, once proper amplification has been introduced. It takes time and practice to reap the benefits of hearing aids. Yes, both ears should be fitted if possible and if medically approved.

Now you go and spread the news! Steve

Fourth Quarter TDs Lift Granite Over Havoc

By CHRIS POISSON

Mike Thomas only needed to play a half to lead the Quincy Granite to a thrilling, come-from-behind 15-14 win over rival Massachusetts Havoc Saturday night at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"He is the story tonight," said offensive coordinator Greg Wilson, who was filling in for head coach Ken McPhee while he attended his nephew's wedding.

The story goes like this: Thomas needed only a half because that's all he had. He arrived at the stadium right before halftime because of car troubles.

"I had car problems and I was stranded," said Thomas, who joined the Granite two days before the season opener. "I'm still learning the guys and I only know Dave's [Harris, co-founder and offensive lineman] phone number and his number was at the house. I had to wait for the car to cool down."

Once his car cooled down and he finally arrived, Quincy's offense ignited. Thomas hooked up with wideout Bill MacDougall for a pair of fourth-quarter touchdown passes and hit Bo Garcia for the game-winner, a gutsy two-point conversion with 3:58 remaining in the game.

"They earned the right for that call," Wilson said. "They came back so hard in the second half they deserved a chance to win. That's why I made the call I did."

"It was a gutsy call," admitted Thomas. "But, hey,

JACKSON VETIAC (28) runs the ball up the middle where he is taken down by several Havoc defenders. (Joe Curran Photos)

he made the call, so the only thing we can do is go out there and execute."

This win, which pushed Quincy's record to 2-1, meant more than just a regular season notch in the left column. This was about revenge and respect. The Havoc (1-1) beat the Granite twice last season, including a 27-18 triumph in the NEFL division championship.

"This is our Yankees-Red Sox," Wilson said. "There's no question about it. This is a special feeling to beat them. Last year they knocked us out of the playoffs, so this was a long time coming. And that's why, again, I went for the two points. There's too much history here to go for the tie."

"I don't know anything about the rivalry," Thomas said. "I'm new to the area. I just want to play football. That's the only thing I plan to do. Who knows, we'll probably see these guys again some where in the playoffs."

Quincy travels to Charlestown Sunday to take on the Townies (2-0) and then, because of bye weeks, it will have a two-week break. On Aug. 19, it returns to action to host the Maine Pride.

"We have a decent football team and it's still early," Thomas said. "We have to keep working and take it one week at a time."

No one was more happier to see Thomas than Derrick

Epps. Epps, a receiver, filled in as the emergency QB in what was an anemic first-half performance that saw Quincy gain 18 yards in total offense and punt on all four possessions.

"We were basically trying not to turn the ball over," Wilson said.

While Epps & Co. didn't turn the ball over, the defense forced three turnovers, picking off Havoc quarterback Don Werner three times — two by John Skabeikis and one by Felipe Ogaldez.

The only points it yielded was when Werner capped off a 76-yard drive with a 1-yard plunge with 5:26 left in the half. The PAT was blocked.

DERRICK EPPS (25) has his eyes locked in on the end zone as he scrambles for seven yards. Epps, a receiver, filled in as the emergency quarterback in the first half as Mike Thomas arrived late due to car problems.

Quincy Police Riding For Charity Sunday

The Quincy Police Department will be participating in the Harley Owners Group (HOG) of Boston's ninth annual "HOG in The Road for Charity" motorcycle ride Sunday to benefit the Boston Ronald McDonald House.

More than 5,000 Harley Davidson riders and 60 police departments throughout the state are expected to take part in the fund-raiser — the largest police participation in the history of the event. Riders include members of 13 HOG chapters in Massachusetts as well as riders from across New England. Police from each participating community escort the riders on an 80-mile route from Westwood to Maynard.

The ride raises proceeds from a $15 donation per rider. Last year the ride raised more than $38,000 for the Boston Ronald McDonald House.

"We are extremely grateful to the Boston Chapter of the Harley Owners Group for their nine years of leadership and tireless efforts in support of this event, which has grown to become the largest annual fund-raiser for the House," said Andy Richards, co-director of the Boston Ronald McDonald House. "The participating HOG riders and police departments are enthusiastic fans of our work here, and we appreciate their unending commitment and support."

The Harley Davidson ride began in 1991 when the Ronald McDonald House provided shelter to an ill relative of a Boston Harley Davidson rider, and the Harley Owners decided to ride to raise funds for this charitable residence.

For more than 20 years the Boston Ronald McDonald House, located in Brookline, has opened its doors as a "home away from home" for families whose children are undergoing treatment for cancer at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute's Jimmy Fund Clinic and Boston Children's Hospital.

Golden Print Impressive

Despite losing to Quincy Local in the first round, Golden Print advanced to the finals by knocking out Quincy Local, 7-0, in a rematch in recent Babe Ruth league playoff action.

Golden Print will face the Quincy Elks later in the week for the city championship.

Steve Pizzi, who retired the first 13 batters, held Local to three hits while striking out 11 and walking only two.

Print scored three runs in the first inning on a triple by Pizzi and hits by Ryan Feldhoff (3 hits) and Justin Thorley (2 hits). Local had a chance to score in the first, but shortstop Paul McAteer and second baseman Matt McNeil turned an outstanding inning-ending double play.

In the second, Matt

Germain led off with a triple and Pizzi and Thorley followed with RBI singles for a 5-0 lead. Josh Hersey (2 hits) and Paul Copson scored the final two runs.

For local, David Jaehnig, Dom DeGardo and Corey Piazza had hits.

Golden Print — 7
Granite City — 5

Justin Thorley and Ryan Feldhoff each had three hits. Paul McAteer scattered 10 hits and had no walks in the complete-game win. Matt Germain, Mike McLaughlin and Josh Hersey each had a pair of hits. Steve Pizzi had an RBI single and eight assists at shortstop.

Print's defense did a great job of keeping hard-hitting Granite City in check by cutting down a runner at the plate in the first inning and then turning a double-play in the fifth.

For Granite City, Steve Williams (2 hits), John Norton (2 hits), James Zapata (triple) and Leo Ahern (double) powered the offense.

Golden Print — 11
Barry's Deli — 4

Steve Pizzi gave up two hits and fanned 15 to pick up the win. He also did some damage at the plate with a home run, triple, three runs scored and four RBI.

Matt Germain (2 hits, 4 runs), Mike McLaughlin (2 hits, 3 RBI), Justin Thorley (RBI single) and Paul Copson (RBI single) contributed to the offense.

For Barry's Deli, Dan Cosgrove struck out 10 and walked four in a solid performance. Dean Sandonato had a double and Nick Leger a single.

Yellow Cab Triple A Champs

Yellow Cab recently captured the Triple A championship with a 4-2 win over Spillane & Epstein.

Eleven-year-old John Hueth tossed a four-hit, complete-game masterpiece with a dozen punchouts. The southpaw stayed in control the whole game by getting ahead in the count on most of the batters.

After Spillane & Epstein (18-5) took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on a walk to Jimmy Mullaney and consecutive singles by Matt Young and Nick Gizzarelli, Hueth settled down and cruised over the next five innings.

Yellow Cab (20-2) answered with three runs in the third. Justin Boyd plated Ricky Bjork (single) with a triple and he scored on a single by Joe Ceurvals. Mike Ainsley knocked in Ceurvals with a double.

In the fifth, Yellow Cab scored an insurance run on singles by Boyd and Ceurvals and another double by Ainsley.

Spillane & Epstein made a gallant effort to even the game in the sixth when Brendan Marsters walked and came around to score, but Hueth got the next batter to ground out to end the game.

For Yellow Cab, Mike Saville, Andrew Gormley and Hueth added singles. Young turned in gutsy pitching performance for Spillane & Epstein by keeping his team close the entire game.

Both clubs provided some great defensive plays. Chris Baker, Taylor Breen and Marsters all made quality plays in the infield for Spillane & Epstein. For Yellow Cab, Brennan Carey played a strong game behind the plate, tagging out two runners trying to score. Mark Peponovich made two outstanding plays at second base.

Wisialko And Associates Wins 4th Pratt Softball Title

Wisialko and Associates recently pulled out an amazing come-from-behind win over Everlasting Engraving, 20-15, to win its fourth straight Mary Pratt Softball city championship at Paget Field.

Trailing 14-5 in the fifth inning, Wisialko scored 10 runs in the last three innings to tie the game at 15, and then scored five runs in the top of the eighth for the victory.

Mary Bloomer, who came on in relief in the fifth inning, picked up the win, allowing only one run in the final four innings. She received some great defensive plays from Kerri McAteer, Lisa Schifone, Marissa Powers and Beth Bloomer.

Michelle Pilalas (3 for 5) and Marilyn Power (2 for 4) hit back-to-back doubles in the fifth to ignite the rally. Stacey Andrew (3 for 5, double), Schifone (2 for 4) and Mary Bloomer (2 for 5) also contributed offensively.

For Everlasting Engraving, Michelle Boyd (double), Rebecca Sorensen, Ashley Nee and Stephanie Stone each went 2 for 5. Nee played an outstanding defensive game at shortstop.

Babe Ruth All-Stars Third In State

The Quincy 13-year-old Babe Ruth All-Stars finished third in recent state tournament play after bowing out to Norwood, 6-3, in a hard-fought game.

Norwood advanced to the championship game to take on Parkway.

Forced to play its second doubleheader in two days, totaling 33 innings, Quincy fell behind 2-0 to Norwood early. After a Nick Malvesti single and a John Folino double, Bobby Newcomb made it 2-1 with an RBI single.

But Norwood grabbed a 5-1 lead in the third. Quincy got a run back on Malvesti's sacrifice fly, and it closed to 5-3 when Dean Sandonato singled home Dave Jaehnig (walk, stolen base) from second base.

Quincy opened the tournament last Thursday with a 6-2 win over Lawrence. Sandonato turned in a strong pitching performance, giving up five hits in 5 2/3 innings with eight strikeouts. Jaehnig allowed no hits in relief.

Justin Thorley wielded the big stick with three hits and two RBI. Steve, Priscella (RBI) and Sandonato each had two hits, while Chris Marinelli and Folino knocked in runs.

Quincy fell to Norwood, 11-8, in the second game of the tourney. Trailing 9-1 in the bottom of the fifth, Quincy rallied for three runs with Kevin Richardson, Jaehnig and Thorley delivering in the clutch.

Quincy pulled within 9-8 in the sixth after scoring four runs with two outs. Malvesti (2 hits) stroked a two-run single and Jaehnig (3 hits) and Sandonato added RBI hits.

Quincy needed 10 innings to take care of Taunton, 6-1. Jaehnig took the rubber, pitching a masterful game by allowing only one run on six hits before giving way to Sandonato.

Trailing 1-0, Quincy tied it in the third when Sandonato knocked in Matt Tobin (walk) with a single. Folino came through with the defensive play of the game when he threw out a runner at home that would have been the winning run.

In the 10th inning, Quincy scored five runs for the win. Jaehnig, Sandonato and Folino knocked in the runs.

In its next game, Quincy went into extra innings again when it squeezed out an 8-7 win over Cambridge in the eighth. Richardson walked and stole second (his fourth of the game), and Jaehnig ripped a single to bring him in for the game-winner.

Thorley pitched a terrific game, fanning six and yielding just four hits in seven innings.

In the second half, things didn't start out so smoothly as Thomas's first pass went through MacDougall's hands for an interception. The Havoc capitalized when Werner hit running back Todd Mathis in the flat for a 9-yard TD pass with 10:00 left in the third. Werner and Mathis hooked up again on the two-point conversion for a 14-0 lead.

"We came out and had a little funk," Thomas said. "We were a little confused. The head coach wasn't here. But Greg Wilson did a great job keeping everything together."

Quincy had to punt on its ensuing possession, but Thomas, who would like to be a punter in the NFL one day, was able to pin the Havoc at the two-yard line. The Havoc couldn't move the ball and on fourth down they botched the punt attempt, giving Quincy great field position at the 26.

On third down, Thomas heaved a 27-yard strike to MacDougall to get Quincy on the board with 12:07 left. Paul Doherty's extra point cut the lead to 14-7.

After the Havoc went

three-and-out, Quincy took over at its 22 with just under eight minutes to play. On the sixth play of the drive, MacDougall beat his man one-on-one and Thomas fired a 28-yard bullet for the TD, setting up the game-winning two-pointer.

The Havoc had the ball with about 3:30 left to play, but Skabeikis picked off his third pass of the game to seal the win.

Granite Have Role Player In Mike Thomas

By CHRIS POISSON

Mike Thomas played more roles in the Quincy Granite's 15-14 win over the Mass Havoc than Will Ferrell on Saturday nights.

His cast of characters, in order of appearance, included Mike Thomas the Punter, Mike Thomas the Quarterback, Mike Thomas the Leader, and Mike Thomas the Savior. It was like he was auditioning to host Saturday Night Live.

His performance would've landed him the job. His intro was peerless because, well, there was no intro. Battling car problems, Thomas missed the opening introductions, the first quarter, and the second quarter before arriving at Veterans Memorial Stadium in time to start the second half.

"I apologized to the guys because something like that really messes up the chemistry on the field," Thomas said. "I take this serious. This is semi-pro but you still have to be on time and do everything."

"I thought it was still in the first quarter when I got here, but they had already played the half. I was like, 'man.' But the guys kept it together and we were only down by six."

And that's when Thomas punched in on the time clock and went to work. After his first pass attempt was picked off to set up the Havoc's second touchdown for a 14-0 lead, Thomas tried to engineer another drive on the ensuing possession, only to see it stall at the Havoc 42 thanks to a few penalties.

Facing a fourth-and-12 situation, Quincy opted to punt rather than go for it—a wise move. Thomas the Punter booted the ball high into the sky and watched it come spiraling down at the 2-yard line. He would like to one day punt in the NFL and if he keeps kicking like that he'll soon find himself in a pro camp.

The punt proved to be a turning point in the game when the Havoc was forced to punt from their 15 on their next series—and when they fumbled the snap, leaving Quincy in great position at the 26, Thomas the QB took over in the fourth quarter.

On third down, Thomas spotted a wide open Bill MacDougall for a 27-yard TD strike to pull within seven after Paul Doherty's extra point. About eight minutes later, he connected with MacDougall for a 28-yard TD on almost the same exact play.

"The offensive line did a tremendous job to give me time," Thomas said. "We just spread the guys out and Bill made two great catches. We have to spread some teams out instead of letting guys come up and press and try to play man. I feel if you come up and play man, you're daring us."

"We're trying to build the offense around some of the skills he has," said offensive coordinator Greg Wilson.

"It's coming together slowly. But if you look up and down our roster we're stacked with skilled players. The idea is that he is the right person to make plays and get the ball into their hands."

Following MacDougall's second touchdown, Wilson, who was filling in for head coach Ken McPhee while he attended his nephew's wedding, decided to try the two-point conversion and get the win.

Now, this is where Thomas the Leader steps in.

Two weeks ago, wide receiver Bo Garcia left the Boston Cowboys because he was not getting enough playing time behind standout receivers Chris Walker and Bunny Jefferson. In Quincy's 29-0 win over Hyannis, his debut with the Granite, Garcia dropped three balls, two that would've been touchdowns.

No one would've been surprised if Thomas didn't look in Garcia's direction with the game on the line—even if there was no one within 10 yards of him. For Thomas, it was the perfect opportunity to show support for a teammate.

"He came into the huddle," recalled offensive lineman David Harris, "and said to Bo Garcia, 'This play is going to you. This is your chance to redeem yourself for last week.'"

Garcia made the catch. Granite won. Quincy say hello to Thomas the Savior.

238 Youngsters Compete In Hershey Track & Field Meet

Recreation Director Barry Welch announces that 238 youngsters competed at the recent 23rd annual Hershey's National Track and Field Local Meet at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The boys and girls, ages 9-14, competed in the long jump, softball throw, 50-meter dash, 100-meter dash, 400-meter dash, 4x100 relay, 800-meter run and 1600-meter run in three separate age groups.

The Hershey's Program is the largest youth sports program of its kind in the United States. It was developed to offer a quality recreational activity, where children have fun and are introduced to physical fitness through basic track and field events.

The winners of the Quincy meet will be compared to boys and girls who competed in 70 other meets statewide. The top 16 in the events will be invited to the state championship.

The winners of the state meet will have their times and distances compared with other New England state champions and the top qualifiers will go to the National Championship in Hershey Park, Pa. All expenses for national qualifiers are paid by Hershey Park, and no fees are charged at any level.

The Quincy meet has sent participants to the state finals for all 23 years and to the national finals for 18 of 23 years.

Welch notes that "volunteers are the heart of the program" and he thanks the work of Quincy Track Club Director Geoff Hennessey for his outstanding commitment to this program, as well as the members of the Quincy Recreation Department staff who officiated at the meet.

She concentrated in government and graduated with a bachelors degree, cum laude.

OBITUARIES

Gertrude H. Frazer

A funeral service for Gertrude H. Frazer of Quincy, a retired music librarian for Milton public schools, was held yesterday (Wednesday) at the Boylston Congregational Church in Jamaica Plain.

She died July 21.

Miss Frazer was an organist for the Boylston Congregational Church.

She is survived by several cousins. She was the daughter of the late Samuel and Gertrude (Hamlin) Frazer, and the sister of the late John Frazer.

Burial was in Cedar Grove Cemetery, Dorchester.

Funeral arrangements were by Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 326 Copeland St.

Elda C. Rounseville, 93

Taught Piano And Banjo To Blind, Entertained At Nursing Homes

A funeral service for Elda C. (Buchanan) Rounseville, 93, of Quincy, who gave free piano and banjo lessons to blind South Shore residents, was held Tuesday at Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave.

She died July 20 at Queen Anne Nursing Facility in Hingham after a brief illness.

Mrs. Rounseville, known by many as "the Music Lady," shared her musical talent with service groups for the blind and nursing homes. She received a Lions Lifetime Achievement Award for her services in 1998.

She was a member of the Lions Club, the Order of Eastern Star and Houghs Neck Congregational Church, where she was a pianist and a teacher of Sunday School.

Born in Nova Scotia, she moved to the United States in 1928. She attended Bryant and Stratton Business College and worked as a bookkeeper for many years.

Wife of the late Roy Rounseville, a well-known

ELDA ROUNSEVILLE

Quincy florist, she is survived by two sons, John W. Rounseville and Uncle Sam Rounseville, both of Quincy; a daughter, Nancy Kropp of Seminole, Fla.; seven grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Burial was in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were by Lydon Funeral Home, 644 Hancock St.

Donations may be made to Houghs Neck Congregational Church Sunday School, 300 Manet Ave., Quincy 02169, or to Father Bill's Place, 38 Broad St., Quincy 02169.

Charles Rubino, 77

Restaurant Owner

A funeral Mass for Charles "Clarkie" Rubino, 77, of Quincy, former owner and operator of the former Villa Capri Restaurant in Dorchester, was celebrated July 22 at St. Ann's Church in Wollaston.

Mr. Rubino died July 19 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth.

Mr. Rubino was also the former owner and operator of Damone's Restaurant in Chelsea, as well as various fruit and produce businesses. He retired seven years ago.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget your brother's faults. Forget the slander you have heard, forget the temptations, forget the fault-finding, and give more thought to the cause that provoked it, and only remember the good points that make you fond of them. Forget all personal quarrels you may have heard by accident, of which, if repeated, would seem a thousand times worse than they really are. Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday: start with a clean sheet for today, and write upon it, for sweet memory's sake, only the things which are lovely and lovable.

There is an old Chinese proverb which states; "Think of your own faults the first part of the night when you are awake, and the faults of others the latter part of the night when you are asleep."

Something to think about? We think so!...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You face the possibility of raising your relationship to another level. However, your partner might demand that you make promises for which you're not sure you're ready.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) As changes continue, expect things to get a little more hectic at your workplace. An unexpected travel opportunity could open new career prospects.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Confront the person who caused your hurt feelings, and demand a full explanation. You'll not only recover your self-esteem, but you'll also gain the respect of others.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) That personal problem in the workplace is compounded by someone's biased interference. Stand your ground, and you'll soon find allies gathering around you.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You don't accept disapproval easily. But instead of hiding out in your den to lick your wounded pride, turn the criticism into a valuable lesson for future use.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That former friend you thought you'd cut out of your life is still affecting other relationships. Counter his or her lies with the truth. Your friends are ready to listen.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) What appears to be an unfair situation might simply be the result of a misunderstanding. If you feel something is out of balance, by all means, correct it.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

those school plans already approved by the state. "It's very close to being a reality," Sheets said of the 90 percent reimbursement, noting that it would be an added $20 million in savings for Quincy taxpayers. "We feel that both of those projects are eligible for 90 percent reimbursement."

The 90 percent reimbursement could still be vetoed by Governor Paul Cellucci, but Sheets has been told by State Rep. Ronald Mariano that there are enough votes in both the house and senate to override any possible veto.

Sheets called the reconsideration of the school plan, with alternative plans calling for a new Quincy High School on Coddington St. and a brand new Central Middle school, extremely helpful in clarifying what he said were some unresolved issues, such as what to do with the CTE. Said Sheets: "I think it's been an excellent process. We're spending a lot of taxpayer dollars and we need to be very certain that we are making the right decision. It's brought four or five issues to the forefront."

One of those issues -- the need for more space and parking at the Quincy Ave. high school site -- is particularly thorny, Sheets said, explaining that the new high school was originally designed for 1,000 students but now has been modified to accommodate 1,400, a move which has added at least 50,000 square feet to the footprint of the building and caused playing field and parking issues. "We need to get at least two more acres for that parcel and have to resolve the issue of a legalized baseball and softball field," the mayor said.

The extra space, Sheets said, might come from Faxon Park or nearby properties, but he said he was happy the plans we're moving ahead.

"Now, the only real question is: what do we do with (the old) Central?" Sheets said, adding that he was not in favor of selling the property.

The mayor, as well as Commissioner Colton, had set an Aug. 1 deadline for a decision on the two schools so as not to affect construction timetables.

The weather was perfect." "It was extremely successful," said Stephen Blumberg of Stephen Leigh Jewelers.

"For the first time, we brought out our entire selection of Chelsea Clocks, the same type of clocks that were on the tall ships and they were received very well.

"There were more upscale customers and they bought quality goods.

"We lucked out with the weather. It was perfect. And Maralin (Manning) and Marie (Watts, her assistant) did a wonderful job. All in all it was extremely successful."

John Mucko of Quinwell Travel didn't really take part in the business aspects of the festival but his booth raised money for the care of cocker spaniels, who are subject to blindness with age.

KATHY McLAUGHLIN of West Quincy and sons, Jason and Ryan, checked the bargains at the Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival while Jillian settled for a little nap.

(Marilyn Manning Photo)

"We raised a little over $1,000," he said. "The weather held up and people were very generous."

One of the highlights of the festival was a demonstration of gasoline-powered model cars put on by Hobbytown.

"We had the cars running on Cliveden Street alongside the store," said Rudy Tonetti, who operates the Hobbytown shop with his brother, Rick. "They go 50 or 60 miles an hour."

"We sold a lot and we got a hell of a lot of interest for the future. The kids were screaming, 'I want one for Christmas.' It was the hit of the sidewalk sale.

"Every year I do exceptionally well and this year proved to be what I expected," said Russell De-Meo of Quincy's Records and Tapes.

"What surprised me was that we did two and a half times a normal day's business inside the store."

Charlie Ryder of Ryder's Home Decor & More, who has "only been in the festival for 25 years," pronounced the 30th edition of the sidewalk fiesta "very well."

"I've seen better but this one was good," he said. "It's always good depending on how much merchandise I put out on the sidewalk. This year was exceptional, better than last year."

Likewise, James King of J & D Shoe Repair, which also sells men's clothing, acknowledged that this year's sidewalk festival was "not too bad. Better than last year."

It was King's second year as a participant.

Extra $20 Million Good News For Schools, Other Needs

The state's 90 percent reimbursement for both the construction of the new Quincy High School and the transformation of the current QHS into the new Central Middle School is good news for the Quincy taxpayer, said Mayor James Sheets.

And the expected $20 million in savings, the mayor said, will relieve some of the anticipated burden for property and business owners while at the same time allowing the city to address some of the new issues which have arisen in the two ambitious school building projects.

"This (the state's decision) reduces the property tax burden because it reduces the amount necessary to pay for bonding issues," the mayor explained, adding that he has instructed Auditor Michael McFarland to factor in the 90 percent reimbursement amounts and report back to him next week.

The State Legislature recently passed an amendment removing racial equity considerations from reimbursement decisions and allowing communities with school construction projects already approved by the state to become eligible for 90 percent reimbursement as opposed to the traditional 63 percent reimbursement.

Health Officials Advise:

'Don't Panic' But Take Precautions On West Nile Virus

By CRAIG SALTERS

Both state and local health officials are urging calm and preventive measures to combat the West Nile Virus (WNV), which was recently identified in infected crows in Jamaica Plain and Hopkinton.

There have been no positive tests for the virus in Quincy or Norfolk County — and no plans for targeted mosquito spraying as yet — although that could change suddenly if the virus is detected locally.

"The first thing I would tell people is not to panic," said John Smith, superintendent of the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project. "Certainly take precautions, and if you have any (stagnant) water on your property, get rid of it. But we've had calls asking to spray the entire county and that's just not necessary."

Stagnant water is a concern, Smith said, because the West Nile Virus is carried by a "container bucket" variety of mosquito which breeds specifically in that environment.

But Smith emphasized that West Nile Virus is mild when compared to the already-known Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE), which

West Nile Virus Precautions

There is no vaccine for the West Nile Virus but the Massachusetts Department of Health urges residents to take the following precautions:

- Avoid outdoor activities between dusk and dawn, if possible, since this is the time when mosquitoes are most active.
- If you must be outdoors when mosquitoes are active, wear a long-sleeved shirt and long pants.
- Use a mosquito repellent that contains DEET (the chemical N-N-diethyl-meta-toluamide) and follow the directions on the label. DEET can be toxic if overused. Never use DEET on infants. Avoid using repellents with DEET concentrations above 10-15 percent for children and with concentrations above 30-35 percent for adults. Cream, lotion, or stick formulas are best. Avoid products with high amounts of alcohol.
- Most mosquito repellents will remain effective for many hours, so it is not necessary to reapply the repellent. Once inside, wash off insect repellents thoroughly with soap and water.
- Take special care to cover up the arms and legs of children playing outdoors. When you bring a baby outdoors, cover the baby's carriage or playpen with mosquito netting.
- Fix any holes in your screens and make sure they are tightly attached to all your doors and windows.

Kolson Wants 'Record Straight' On Back Pay

Former City Council President Peter Kolson is upset with the State Legislature's decision last week to let die in committee a home rule petition which would have allowed Kolson more than three years in council back pay.

But what angers Kolson most, he said, is the state law which created the problem in the first place: 268A, section 20, which specifically mandates that employees of a housing authority choose between a housing authority salary and a municipal salary, in this case a councillor's salary.

Kolson, a superintendent with the Quincy Housing Authority, said the remaining back pay, which he estimated at less than $10,000, is not the real issue but part of his decade-long battle to correct what Kolson calls "a skewed law, poorly applied and prejudicial."

"The (Quincy) Housing Authority is funded via the state and the federal government," Kolson said. "I receive no retirement, no benefits from the city of Quincy, so the question of a 'double salary' doesn't even

Gargoyle Will Be Restored Bethany Needs $500,000 To Repair Damage From Lightning Bolt

By TOM HENSHAW

The 2,000-pound lightning-damaged gargoyle on the steeple of Bethany Congregational Church was successfully lowered 120 feet to the ground last week.

Now comes the less formidable but equally important job of cloning the decoration from a mixture of granite and cement and restoring it to its perch high above Quincy Center.

The gargoyle was cracked July 18 when lightning struck the steeple of the church at the corner of Spear and Coddington Streets, sending a 600-pound piece of the spire crashing through the roof.

No one was injured but first estimates of the overall damage to the church were placed at $500,000.

The gargoyle, which was embedded two-feet deep in the corner of the steeple, was successfully removed in a delicate operation by a crew from Louis Pasqualucci & Sons, Inc., the general contractor.

"It's down on the ground right now," said the Rev. William Harding, the pastor. "The next thing will be to make a cast for the new one."

The Rev. Harding said is not sure whether the gargoyle was insured.

"I'm hoping it was," he said. "But you know how insurance companies are. Either way, we will be holding fund raisers to pay for it or make up any difference."

In the meantime, Rev. Harding said, any donations to the church would be greatly appreciated and, given the church's non-profit status, would be tax-deductible.

It's likely to be next spring before the 73-year-old church structure is fully restored and operational.

"The school will be running by September," said the Rev. Harding. The piece of the steeple that crashed through the roof wound up in the school's classroom.

"The outside will take about six to eight months. That will take us into the spring," he said.

It is not yet decided whether the restored church will be protected by lightning rods.

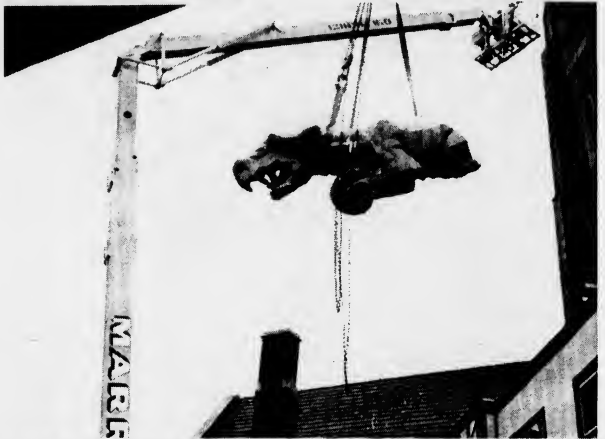

"I would like to see them," said the pastor. "But the committee will have to discuss that. I don't think lightning rods would have prevented what happened."

The damaged gargoyle was one of four that "protected" the church from their lofty perches on the four steeples.

"The first gargoyles were placed on the rain spouts of churches in Medieval times to ward off evil," explained the Rev. Harding.

CONTRACTORS from Louis Pasqualucci & Sons, Inc. successfully remove a 2000-pound gargoyle from the steeple of Bethany Congregational Church in Quincy Center. The gargoyle was damaged by a lightning strike July 18.

AFTER BEING REMOVED from the church steeple, the damaged gargoyle descends 120 feet to the ground with the help of a harness, chains and an aerial platform truck.

SAFELY ON THE GROUND, the gargoyle will be "cloned" from a mixture of granite and cement. Church officials hope to replace the gargoyle to its perch high above Quincy Center by next spring.

Faxon House To Be Razed For Hospital Parking

$100,000 Drive Starts To Find New Home For Detox Center

By CRAIG SALTERS

Fundraising efforts are underway to help Faxon House Recovery find a new home, but the detox center is still a far cry - roughly $96,000 -- from the $100,000 needed to finance moving expenses and the purchase of new equipment.

And the clock is running, as Quincy Medical Center has told Faxon House, now located in the former Gordon House student nurse quarters at 120 Whitwell St., to vacate the premises by Sept. 15 so that QMC can create additional parking space.

"We'd love to stay in Quincy," said Shawn Sheehan, executive director of Faxon House, who said the recovery program's hunt to find a new facility has focused on several Quincy locations and a few just over the line in towns such as Braintree.

Sheehan said Faxon House -- the only detox and recovery program between Boston and Plymouth -- made an initial letter writing appeal to civic and business leaders almost as soon as it got its eviction notice and has since received almost $4,000 in donations.

"We've been getting many donations from Quincy and the entire South Shore community," said Sheehan.

What's most impressive, he added, was the strong support the center has received from its own employees, both current and former, and from the recovering community which it has served over the years. "We received a donation recently with the message, 'I just want to thank you for 27 years of sobriety,'" Sheehan said. "That felt great."

Faxon House, also known as Faxon Recovery Quincy Detox, is an inpatient alcohol and substance abuse treatment center established in 1972 - the oldest such program in the state, said Sheehan. It provides treatment, counseling, and recovery services and refers patients to long-term treatment groups such as Alcoholics Anonymous.

Sheehan said the center's 28-year tradition of treatment has created an incredible network among the recovering community. For instance, AA meetings are held daily at Faxon House and many of those running the meetings are ex-clients of the facility. That means recovering alcoholics and addicts about to leave Faxon House are naturally brought into existing AA group meetings and other long-term treatment groups by the people most suited and most willing to support their sober and drug-free lifestyle.

A recent study by Harvard Medical School, Sheehan noted, showed that inpatient detox centers were more effective than their outpatient counterparts precisely because of the close bonding that occurs between patients and counselors and among the patients themselves.

Sheehan also emphasized that, throughout its 28 years, Faxon House has kept a good relationship with the community at large, recounting a story where a friend of his asked directions to Faxon House from a resident of Whitwell St. and that resident didn't know where it was.

High praise, said Sheehan.

THESE DOORS LEADING into the Faxon House Recovery Detoxification Center, 120 Whitwell St., will not only soon be closed but gone along with the entire building which will be razed for more parking at Quincy Medical Center. An estimated $100,000 is needed to find a new location for the center which has treated over 50,000 patients since it was established in 1972.

Sunday Opening Fees To Be Eliminated

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Businesses will no longer pay a $25 a year fee to open on Sundays. Older stores have been paying fees for many years while the newer stores have not.

The License Board Tuesday decided that the older ones will no longer have to pay.

According to Board Chairman Joseph Shea, the $1900 the city collected each year from these stores can be absorbed through other license fees.

Shea said the License Board issues 23 different licenses and this matter has just "fallen through the cracks." He noted with the use of computers, "they are catching up on everything."

Shea cited some of the newer stores that have never paid including Home Depot, Wal-Mart and most supermarkets.

Shea said the Blue Laws which had been on the books for many years, "do not exist anymore."

When asked if the businesses that have been paying all these years are going to be reimbursed, Shea answered, "we have no power to rebate money." He added, "we don't want to go backwards, but go forward."

She said it was his intention to "make things consistent and fair."

Board members suggested they notify the law offices for a decision and discuss it at the Aug. 29 meeting.

McCauley Book Due In September

Frank McCauley's long-awaited book, A Political History of Quincy, is at the publishers and should be available in September.

"I expect it to be off the press just after Labor Day," says McCauley who has spent two years researching and writing it.

The 350-page ($19.95) book covers 111 years—from 1889 when Quincy changed from a town to a city government to Mayor James Sheets's sixth term inauguration last Jan. 3.

There are biographical sketches, a listing of all the 456 people who have served in local elective office during the time frame, photos, historic facts, anecdotes, tidbits, etc.

But readers will probably jump quickly to "The Mayoral Hall of Fame" selected by McCauley and whose identities he is keeping a closely guarded secret until the book comes out.

That segment should get a lot of attention and maybe a few political arguments if someone's favorite mayor doesn't make it.

McCauley selected only six of Quincy's 28 mayors for the honor.

And won't budge on revealing who they are.

"You'll have to read the book to find out," he says.

But he doesn't mind telling you two who didn't make it: Sheets and McCauley himself.

"Jim Sheets is still in office," he explains. "He hasn't completed his administration so you really can't judge his overall performance as mayor. That will come after he leaves office."

McCauley, who served four terms as mayor, automatically disqualified himself from consideration being the author of the book and the one making the Hall of Fame selections.

"I don't think I was too bad a mayor, though," he muses. "I called the shots as I saw them."

During his eight years as mayor he built a reputation as a no-nonsense fiscally tight-fisted mayor. And now, as a city councillor and chairman of the Finance Committee, he is still trying to keep a lid on unnecessary spending.

McCauley says he based his Hall of Fame choices on what he learned about the early mayors while researching the book and on his personal observations of the later mayors.

Politics did not enter the picture, he says.

"The main criteria were the problems and issues the mayors faced during their administrations and how they handled them."

He listed the six Hall of Famers in alphabetical order. Not I to 6.

"I didn't try to rate them against one another," he says.

But he won't even hint as to who the six are. Which throws it open for speculation.

In fact we have speculated in earlier columns as to who might make the Hall of Fame. We thought of:

Charles Porter, Quincy's first mayor, charged with the responsibility of leading Quincy from a town form of government to that of a city.

Thomas Burgin, whose tenure was both eventful and challenging during part of the Great Depression, the devastating Hurricane of 1938 and the early days of World War II.

Amelio Della Chiesa who served 12 years as mayor (eight under Plan A, four under Plan E), a tight-spending fatherly figure who kept the city on a peaceful and even keel.

James McIntyre, seen by many as one of the brightest of all the mayors and the one who brought the city into modern times with development, his role in the coming of the MBTA, and his overall foresight.

Or, maybe John Miller, the only one of Quincy's mayors to die in office.

McCauley makes no secret of his admiration for Miller.

Miller took office in 1914 when the mayoral term was only one year and was soon diagnosed with cancer.

6 Countdown weeks to

THE MARIE CURRY WALK Sept. 17

'Early detection ... says it all.'

—Cindy Butler, Survivor

Under the city charter back then a special election would be called if a mayor for some reason vacated the office before the last 90 days of his term.

In Miller's case, if he died or had to leave office before Oct. 5, a special election would have to be called to elect his successor.

According to McCauley, Miller had a deathbed wish. "As he lay dying," says McCauley, "he wished he would live long enough to spare the city the cost of a special election."

Miller, who was only 60, lived to Oct. 6 -- beating the special election requirement by one day. City Council President Joseph Whiton, who would later become mayor himself, finished out the remaining days of Miller's term.

"Imagine," says McCauley, "lying there dying and thinking of just living long enough to save the city money."

Did Porter, Burgin, Della Chiesa, McIntyre or Miller make the Hall of Fame? You'll have to wait for the book to come out.

McCauley, however, doesn't mind letting you in on some of the tidbits in the book. Such as:

Of the city's 28 mayors, only five have been full-time. Walter Hannon was the first in 1972 followed by Joseph LaRaia, Arthur Tobin, McCauley and Sheets.

Of the 456 people who have served as mayors, city councillors and school committee members, only 20 have been women.

That, despite the fact that for some time now, Quincy has had more women voters than men. As of 1999 it was 56 percent women and 44 percent men.

The most common name in Quincy politics? Smith, the same as it is in the telephone directory.

"But that was mainly in the early days," says McCauley.

The book also contains a prologue of Quincy's settlement as Mount Wollaston, as the north precinct of Braintree and the town of Quincy.

McCauley, a Quincy political historian and Republican, was asked by Sheets, a Democrat, to write the book as part of the city's millennium celebration.

"I tried to be objective and I believe I was," says McCauley.

He wrote the book in long-hand. His wife, Sandra, then typed the chapters on a word processor, and helped in the editing.

"Without her I would never have finished it," says McCauley.

It's been a two-year labor of love for both of them. They did it for free. No fee.

One thousand hard cover copies are being printed as the first edition.

"I think the $19.95 price per copy is pretty reasonable," says McCauley who will receive none of it. All the revenue will go to the city.

"I hope Quincy residents will find the book interesting," McCauley says. "I found researching it interesting."

He adds: "There's nothing sensational in the book. I don't think I will be sued."

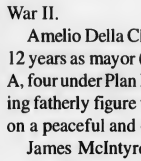

But does hope he will be read.

A signing event for the book tentatively is planned for sometime in September probably at the Quincy Historical Society.

The author hopes he will see you there.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS POSTCARD is a view of some of the summer cottages on Great Hill at the end of Hough's Neck as they appeared about 1912. Note the lack of trees, today from this spot, most of these houses cannot be seen because of trees and shrubs. Only a few of these cottages are still summer homes, most have been converted to year round use. The sewer tunnel to Nut Island heads east under the roadway leading in from the lower left.

More On Paving Front Lawns And Personal Liberty

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
Kudos to Greg Newton for saying out loud what many Quincy residents have been thinking for some time now.

There is nothing worse than seeing home owners either paving over lawns for their cars or just parking right on the grass. Quincy is getting tackier constantly. Turning lawns into parking lots for four, five, or six cars is having a negative impact on my neighborhood. Just because there are too many cars at one house doesn't mean you start pressing cement trucks into service.

As a basic conservative, I had to laugh as I read Mike Denaro's recent letter criticizing Newton's earlier letter.

Yes, property owners have property rights. Mr. Denaro says paving their front yards is a homeowner's right that should be free, apparently, of all government interference.

Mr. Denaro, government places many restrictions on all of us, all the time, doesn't it? One cannot turn a single-family home into a two-family without getting the okay from someone at City Hall. One cannot operate a boarding house without getting the appropriate permission from City Hall, right? One also cannot operate a commercial business in an area zoned for residential use.

This isn't about "personal freedom and liberty," it is about making sure our neighborhoods don't start looking like one giant junk yard.

Just because one may have the right to do something doesn't mean we're required to do so, does it? What about common sense?

The real issue isn't the existence of paved lawns. The real issue is why so many people are doing it.

Kudos To Massachusetts Probation Officers

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
The week of July 23-29 was designated National Probation, Parole, and Community Supervision Officers' Week. President Bill Clinton publicly endorsed this celebration and Governor Paul Cellucci issued a proclamation in recognition of Probation Officers' Week in Massachusetts.

As the Commissioner of Probation in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, I would like to join President Clinton and Governor Cellucci in applauding the 1,400 men and women probation officers who comprise the Massachusetts Probation Service for their commitment to the criminal justice system and the communities they serve. Probation is a court-ordered sanction placed on a person convicted of a crime. The offender is allowed to remain in the community under the strict supervision of a probation officer.

Probation officers have their finger on the pulse of the community. It is their primary duty to monitor offenders and to assist them in overcoming social problems such as drug addiction, alcoholism, mental health issues, and violence. More than 80 percent of probationers have substance abuse-related problems. Probation officers work hand in hand with community groups and social service agencies to provide offenders with the support they need. Probation officers also work closely with local police departments on warrant apprehension teams to get probation violators off the street.

Because they are out on the streets checking on probationers day and night, they are on the front-lines in the battle against crime. Probation officers in the Family and Probate Courts also work to keep families together and to ensure children live in safe homes.

The Massachusetts Probation Service boasts of a number of programs that help offenders turn their lives around and assist them in becoming citizens who contribute positively to the community. The Probation Service also works in collaboration with the Office of Community Corrections (OCC) under the leadership of OCC Executive Director Steven Price.

The 14 centers, located throughout the state, provide intensive substance abuse treatment, educational opportunities for offenders, and restorative justice through community service projects while providing public safety and utilizing electric monitoring. Programs such as the Fatherhood and Mother Programs teach offenders how to be better parents to their children.

Massachusetts Probation Service continues its reign as a national leader in addressing the issues of the victimized while effectively working to reduce criminal activity.

Quincy's Yesterdays 1,000 Fans Crowd Sears To See Ted Williams

By PAUL HAROLD

One thousand enthusiastic fans crowded into Sears Roebuck in downtown Quincy to see Red Sox great Ted Williams who was here to promote new line of Williams' sports equipment.

The crowd was made up mostly of women and Little Leaguers seeking autographs. Williams complied with all requests signing anything that ink would adhere to: programs, baseballs, baseball gloves and pictures.

Coordinating the event were store manager Jeremiah Donovan and Donald Farrow head of the sports department.

MCDONALD BOOSTS INCINERATOR AT STABLES
Ward 4 City Councillor George McDonald praised the planning board for their recommendation of the city stables, near the DPW complex, as the site for a city incinerator.

In speaking against the Quarry St. site, McDonald said that the people of West Quincy should be given some relief, having suffered so many years with dump problems.

McDonald said the Quarry St. site was too valuable from a tax revenue point of view. He predicted that in a few years time multi-story apartments building would be constructed, widening the tax base and taking $10 off the tax rate from the smaller homes.

COUNCILLORS' FREE PARKING QUESTIONED
George Yarrington of the Quincy Taxpayers Association (QTA) questioned the free parking by Councillor Carl Anderson, whom he claimed parked at a "hooded meter," thus avoiding the five cent an hour fee.

Yarrington said that for three months he and members of his association had observed Anderson's car parked at a "hooded meter" on Hancock St. near Rogers Jeweler, where the councillor worked.

In response, Anderson said he didn't even know what a "hooded meter" was and that the car in question was registered to his son. He brushed off Yarrington's attack as sour grapes since the QTA leader failed in his attempt for appointment to a regional transportation board.

QUINCY-ISMS

At its shortest meeting on record (two minutes 17 seconds) the city council elected Councillor David McIntosh both council president and acting mayor. The vote was needed since both Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa and Council President William Ellis were out of town on vacation. Councillor George Burke made the motion nominating McIntosh. . . Boats and water skiers were banned from Mound St. Beach at the request of Councillor Joseph LaRaia because they endangered bathers. . . A building permit was issued for a new Presbyterian church. The estimated cost was $345,000. . . Candidate for Ward 6 councillor, Richard Barry, called for a North Quincy branch library. . . Nicholas Musto, Quincy's last "grouter," died. At one time there were hundreds of "grouters" at the quarries, working on rejected stones. Those stones were used for curb stones and columns for driveways. . . Patrolman Donald Cunningham helped deliver a baby for a woman on Grafton St. . . Col. Walter Fuller, director of Civil Defense, was the main speaker at the Kiwanis Club. . . Edward Kasper was named chairman of the Houghs Neck Community Council's honors banquet. . . Anthony Losordo presented plans for the development of the Old Faxon estate. He estimated that 40 homes could be built there costing between $35,000-$40,000. . . Eight hundred members of the United Steelworkers Union met at NQHS auditorium to discuss the recent wage offer of the Boston Gear Works. A five-center an hour increase was offered with a nine-cent an hour for top grades. Across 12 grades, wages would increase from $1.71 1/2 an hour to $2.72 1/2 an hour. The union talks were headed by the union's international representative, Clifford Sommers of Wollaston. . . A 1953 Chevrolet, minus its registration plates, was found hanging over the edge of Swingle's Quarry. . . At Quincy City Hospital, a daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hogan of South St. . . Mr. and Mrs. Leo Caporale of Perley Place celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary.

INCA SON, a music and dance ensemble that performs music of ancient Peru and all of Latin America, concludes this year's Thomas Crane Public Library Concert Series with a performance on the library lawn Aug. 10.

Inca Son Performs At Crane Library Aug. 10

Inca Son performs the music of the Andes Thursday, August 10, from 12:30 p.m. until 1:30 p.m. on the lawn of the Thomas Crane Public Library, Quincy Square.

The group is a music and dance ensemble who dress in authentic and colorful Inca attire, inviting the audience to share the sights, sounds, and culture of ancient Peru and all of Latin America. The range of musical styles is intended for listeners of all ages.

Inca Son performs both traditional songs and original compositions on their instruments, many of which they make themselves. Each song has a special importance, meaning, or background in Andean folklore. The musicians share their culture in workshops and concerts including full-scale stage productions. The award-winning ensemble performs internationally at concerts and festivals and has several recordings.

The Library's 2000 concert series concludes with the Inca Son performance.

Concertgoers are welcome to bring lawn chairs, blankets, and picnics. In case of rain, the concert will be held at the Adams Shore Branch Library, 519 Sea St., Quincy. Both sites are accessible and concerts are free.

The concert series is funded in part by the Quincy Cultural Council, a local agency supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Playground Fundraiser At Yard Rock Blues Club

A cocktail reception at the Yard Rock Blues Club, 132 East Howard St., was scheduled for Wednesday from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. to raise funds to build a playground at the Snug Harbor School.

Lisa Hajjar, chairperson of the Fundraising Committee, said food, a cash bar, and music would be provided courtesy of the Yard Rock Blues Club. Donations of $25 can be paid the night of the event or mailed to:

Germantown Neighborhood Council/Kaboom Playground, c/o Lisa Hajjar, 15 Howe St., Quincy, MA, 02169.

The $35,000 community-built playground for the children of Germantown is thanks in part to a generous donation of CNA Insurance and Kaboom, a non-profit organization helping businesses and communities build playgrounds.

The community, organized through the parents of Snug Harbor Community School and the Germantown Neighborhood Center, must raise $15,000 to fulfill its part in the playground construction.

The Yard Rock reception is one of many fundraising efforts to raise the necessary funds. The committee's goal is to raise the funds by the barn raising event to be held Sept. 30.

For more information or to get involved, call (617) 770-9930.

HOT SPOT CABARET

Sounds Of Broadway On USS Salem Aug. 6

Hot Spot Cabaret, a six-member theatrical troupe, will present a Broadway revue aboard the USS Salem Sunday, Aug. 6, beginning at 2 p.m.

The troupe, which has appeared in Boston, on Cape Cod and at the Quincy Center Dinner Theatre, under the musical direction of Rob Bezubka, features popular songs, comedy, costumes and Broadway music from such shows as "Les Miserables," "Sweet Charity," "Hello Dolly," "Phantom of the Opera," and others.

Admission is $6 for adults and $4 for children and seniors. Admission price also includes a tour of the Salem, berthed off Route 3A, near the Fore River Bridge. For more information call (617) 479-7900.

'Skyline Cabaret' Dinner Theatre At Raffael's Starts Aug. 9

Dinner Theatre at the Skyline Room at Raffael's, 1 Enterprise Drive, continues in August with Skyline Cabaret: An Evening With Boston's Brightest Cabaret Stars.

Show dates are August 9, 10, 23, and 25, with dinner starting at 6:30 p.m. There is also a noon matinee for the August 23 date.

The show offers an evening reminiscent of bygone "supper clubs" and features performers Sarah DeLima, Carol O'Shaughnessy, Jan Peters, and Ida Zecco. The show has been singled out for its "campy element" and has received rave reviews from both The Boston Globe and The New York Times.

Tickets are $40 per person (includes tax and gratuity), $30 for the Wednesday matinee series.

Skyline Cabaret is one in a series of musical theatre revues running from June to December sponsored jointly by Raffael's and JM Productions of Quincy.

The goal, says John McDonald, executive producer of JM Productions, is to present quality local dinner theatre at reasonable prices. "People in Quincy and around the South Shore have a real appetite for more upscale entertainment options - without the hassle of having to go into Boston," McDonald said.

Other shows in the series include:

Forever Plaid: September 20, 21, 27, and 28; a nostalgic look at pop hits of the 1950's.

A Grand Night For Singing: October 4, 5, 11,

12, 25, and 26; a Rodgers and Hammerstein work featuring music from Oklahoma, The Sound of Music, South Pacific, and Carousel, among others.

The All Night Strut: November 1, 2, 15, 16, 29, and 30; a look at the depth and variety of popular American music from the 1930's and 1940's.

What Christmas Means To Me: dates to be announced.

For more information or to order tickets, call (617) 786-SHOW or call Raffael's at (617) 328-1600.

Storyteller Series Continues At Adams Shore Library

The Summer Storytellers Series continues Tuesday, Aug. 8 at 7 p.m. at the Adams Shore Branch Library, 519 Sea St., with a performance by Jennifer Smith.

Smith will present a program entitled "The Water Is Wide," featuring stories about various bodies of water and the creatures, real and fantastic, that inhabit them.

At the same time a Pajama Time Storyhour with Dottie Moynihan will be offered for younger siblings accompanied by an adult and families with children under the age of five. Tolstoy's fairy tale about the Enormous Turnip will be this week's featured story.

The six-week Summer Storytellers Series concludes with Storyteller/Musician Scott Kepnes Aug. 15. The final Pajama Time with Dottie Moynihan will feature stories by author Eric Carle.

The programs are sponsored by an LSTA grant from the Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners and a Quincy Arts Lottery grant from the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

Entry Forms Available For Quincy ArtsFest

The Quincy Art Association and the Quincy Park and Recreation Departments announce that Call for Entry forms are available for the 2000 Quincy ArtsFest.

The show of juried art, juried photography, children's art, and entertainment will be held in Merrymount Park Sept. 16 and 17. Interested participants can have a Call for Entries form mailed to them by calling the Quincy Park Department at (617) 376-1254 or the Quincy Art Association at (617) 770-2482.

The third annual Quincy ArtsFest will feature the South Shore and Greater Boston's finest artists and photographers. Along with the juried art and photography shows, there will be live entertainment all weekend long, a Quincy Art Association Member's show, a children's art show, a bargain art tent, a food tent and much more. This year's show is sponsored by the Quincy Art Association, the City of Quincy Park & Recreation Departments and the Best Western Adams Inn.

"The Quincy ArtsFest has established itself as one of the finest art and photography shows on the South Shore. We hope to continue to draw the best and brightest artists to participate in a great show conducted in a beautiful, autumn park setting," said Thomas P. Koch, Executive Director of the Park, Forestry, and Cemetery Departments.

Last year, more than 300 different artists and photographers displayed their work at the ArtsFest. Artists and photographers from Quincy, Braintree, Marshfield, Canton, Boston, Milton, Weymouth, Scituate, Carver, Randolph, Brockton and Cohasset participated in last year's event.

The Quincy ArtsFest offers a highly-competitive prize structure. The Best of Show winner will receive $500. Award winners in nine different categories will receive $100 for first place, $75 for second place, and $50 for third place. Prizes will also be awarded in special categories of Best Quincy Painting and Best Quincy Photograph.

Acceptance of entries will be held Friday, Aug. 25 and Saturday, Aug. 26 at the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex at One Merrymount Parkway (Rt. 3A) in Quincy. A non-refundable fee of $8 is required per entry for the Juried Art and Juried Photography shows. There is a maximum of three entries per person for the juried shows.

Categories for the Juried Art show include oil and acrylic, drawing and pastel, watercolor, printmaking, mixed media, and sculpture. Juried Photography categories include color, black & white, and digital.

Judges for the 2000 Quincy ArtsFest will be James McGurl, Professional Artist; Karen Pserferle, Gallery Manager for the Copley Art Society; Susan Ritchay, Executive Director for the Copley Art Society; John Black, Professional Photographer and owner of Presidential Camera; J. Michael Sullivan, Author and Photographer; and Sally Dean, Professional Artist.

The Quincy ArtsFest is open to the public with free admission Saturday, Sept.

16 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sunday, Sept. 17 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. On Friday evening, Sept. 15, participating artists and special guests will be invited to an elegant, gala show premiere featuring strolling violinists, harpists, wine, cheese and much more.

For more information call (617) 376-1254.

QMC, Manet Health Team Up Primary Care Health Services Geared To Asian-Americans At Quincy Medical Center

Quincy Medical Center and Manet Community Health Center have teamed up to offer comprehensive primary care health services to Chinese speaking Asian Americans at a new Manet satellite office located at Quincy Medical Center.

The new services will be provided by Howard Liu, M.D. and Lily Yuk-Yin Yung, M.D., two Manet internal medicine physicians who are multi-lingual, speaking English and Cantonese and/or Mandarin.

"Manet has been working for over 10 years to increase access to services for the Asian community in Quincy. Our North Quincy site was a first step," said Manet Community Health Center Executive Director Ellen Haffer. "By continuing to work closely with Quincy Medical Center, we now have the resources to ensure that Asian-American residents of Quincy and surrounding communities receive local health care services in their language and that better suit their cultural experiences."

"The ability to communicate directly with your doctor is something most of us take for granted -- but for Asian-Americans living in this region, this has never been a given," said Quincy Medical Center President and CEO Christine Schuster.

"What can be more fundamental than the need to understand and be understood by your primary care doctor? I am delighted to be collaborating with Manet to make this basic service available to the growing Asian-American community on the South Shore," Schuster said.

The most recent census figures for Quincy indicate an Asian-American population of 18 percent of the city's total population, a fast growing community based on figures of 15 years ago which indicated an Asian population of less than one percent.

"As a group, we have long been searching for ways to improve medical care to the Asian community," said Amanda Le, director of QMC Asian Services. "In many ways, this collaborative effort began with ideas generated by the Hospital's Asian Task Force, which years ago proposed the creation of a clinic for Asian-American primary services.

DR. LILY YUK-YIN YUNG

"We are delighted that Manet and Quincy Medical Center have teamed up in this way to protect and promote health care for Asian-Americans in Quincy and surrounding communities."

Doctors Liu and Yung provide a full range of internal medicine services in an office setting and offer

Quincy Groups To Share In $25,000 United Way Grant

The United Way of Massachusetts Bay has granted $25,000 to the Greater Boston Interfaith Organization (GBIO), which includes four organizations and congregations in Quincy.

They are St. Ann's Church in Wollaston, St. Chrysostom Church, also in Wollaston; United First Parish Church in Quincy Center and the Archdiocesan Labor Guild.

The GBIO was chosen to receive the funding because of the grassroots approach it uses to deepen citizen involvement and persuade policy-makers to act, the United Way said.

"These funds will allow GBIO to train and develop new organizers and leaders, who are key ingredients in successful grassroots advocacy campaigns," said Marian L. Heard, president and CEO of the United Way.

GBIO is a federation of 85 religious and community organizations dedicated to developing local leadership for concrete improvements in community issues such as health, education and the economy.

Harold Endorsed By Norfolk Labor Council

Paul Harold has been endorsed for Norfolk County Register of Deeds by the Norfolk County Central Labor Council.

The Council has 18 union locals with a membership of 80,000.

Council President Robert Rizzi said the vote to endorse Harold was unanimous by the 15 locals participating in the endorsement meeting.

Rizzi said, "We're proud to endorse Paul for the Register's post and recommend his candidacy to all the working men and women in Norfolk County. Based on his past record as state senator and city councillor we're confident that he will serve the people of Norfolk County with the highest degree of professionalism and integrity.

Harold expressed his gratitude for the council's past support and especially for this endorsement, saying, "The council's endorsement is particularly important in this primary election for two reasons. It directs voters' attention to the importance of the Register's job and helps to increase the turnout in the Sept. 19 Democratic primary."

The Norfolk Register's job is currently held by Barry Hannon who announced earlier this year his intention not to seek reelection after serving 30 years.

Harold previously served in the state senate representing the Norfolk District,

Extra $20 Million Good News For Schools, Other Needs

The School Building Needs Task Force's July 25 decision not to consider alternative plans for the school projects kept the city eligible for the 90 percent figure.

But at that same meeting task force members also discussed and approved at least five new measures which must now be dealt with, namely: parking at the Quincy Ave. site for the new high school; ballfields for same; the closing off of a section of Woodward Avenue for a proposed "green belt" around the new Central; the demolition of the Center For Technical Education (CTE); and the filling in of the marshlands around the new Central up to the Southern Artery.

"Additional parking at the new high school will require one or two acres, at the least," Sheets said. "And it makes no sense to have a new high school for 1400 students and not have a softball field and adequate parking."

Expansion of high school capacity and the footprint of the actual building, the mayor said, created the parking and ballfield issues.

The projects to close off Woodward Ave. and demolish the CTE, Sheets said, could themselves be eligible for 90 percent reimbursement and he estimated addressing all five issues for the schools would cost no more than $4 million.

In order to remain eligible for the 90 percent reimbursement, the city must submit plans for both projects to the state by July 1 of 2001. Sheets said discussions with DPW Commissioner David Colton have convinced him that that deadline will not pose a problem.

The new Quincy High School, estimated at roughly $55 million, is scheduled to open in 2004 and new Central (renovated OHS), estimated at roughly $25 million, is expected to open in 2006.

Costs for land-takings are not reimbursable by the state.

$100,000 Drive To Find New Home For Detox Center

han, for a detox which has helped over 50,000 patients in its history. "We've tried to be a good neighbor," he said.

One person who doesn't need much convincing on that point is Rev. John Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church and a former intern at the center during the 1980's. In a letter of support for the fundraising efforts, Rev. Swanson said Faxon House did "critical work" and was a "necessary service to the community."

"The majority of alcoholics are not street people. Also, the average resident of a Detox has a job, home, family, and friends (for the present!). Quincy is blessed with an excellent detoxification program, Faxon House, under the superb leadership of Shawn Sheehan. While in graduate school I worked for Mr. Sheehan at Faxon House as I pursued certification as a Substance Abuse Counselor. I and several of my South Shore colleagues have made referrals to Faxon House."

Sheehan and Faxon House Director Carol Hoban say they are both pleased with the response from the letter writing campaign. "But we're only at the beginning stages," Sheehan cautioned.

Although Quincy Medical Center has set a Sept. 15 deadline for Faxon House to vacate its Whitwell St. site, Sheehan said he was confident QMC would work with the center "as long as we are actively trying our best to find a new facility, which we are."

Sheehan thanked Quincy Medical Center, along with Mayor James Sheets and the City Council, for their strong support over the years.

Donations can be sent to: Faxon House Recov- ery/Detox, P.O. Box 697074, Quincy 02269-7074. For more information, contact the center at (617) 472-8060.

PRIME TRAVELER

by George P. Murphy

As heard on WJDA Radio, 1300 AM every Thursday at 11:00am!

TRIP INSURANCE

Whether you fall ill before your trip, the airline loses your baggage, or your tour operator goes bankrupt and cancels your vacation, you will be glad you bought trip insurance. Only about 3% of U.S. travelers opt for trip insurance, but the benefits are well worth the money - usually less than 10% of the cost of your trip - if you need it. The most common types of trip insurance are trip cancellation, which reimburses a traveler if he or she cancels a trip for a covered reason, and trip interruption, which covers the cost of the unused portion of a trip and any additional expenses to get home early if necessary. Always read the fine print before purchasing a policy.

Other important trip insurance involves a visit to PRIME TRAVEL, where we offer travel insurance that your trip will be a special one. If you're like most travelers, you've worked hard to be able to set aside the time and costs of a memorable vacation. Stop by 500 Victory Road, Marina Bay or call 617-472-3697 and let us make sure your time and dollars are not wasted. Are you on our mailing list? Just ask! We'd be happy to put you, your friends and your family on our list to receive special offers and announcements.

P.S. Most policies will pay if a trip is cancelled due to a pre-existing condition, as long as the policy is purchased close to the time when the trip is booked.

10 Quincy Residents Receive Third Term Honors At Thayer

Ten students from Quincy achieved academic honors for the third term at Thayer Academy in Braintree.

High honors went to Melissa A. Zine, daughter of Paul Zine; Matt Daylor, son of Rosalie Cryan; and William C. Harding, son of the Rev. and Mrs. William C. Harding III.

Honors were accorded to Kerry A. Whelan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Whelan; Alana Casciello, daughter of Louis Casciello and Mary Bellrose; Christina L. Phillips, daughter of Dianne Phillips; Johnice Rebecca Graham, daughter of John Graham and Mary Weafer; Laura Rachel Janowitch, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence A. Janowitch; Michael Huen-Wo Tsang, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter M. Tsang; Tiffany Michelle Wan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Wan.

Quincy 2000 Co-Project Ribbon Cutting Reopening At Finian's Restaurant

Quincy 2000 held a ribbon-cutting ceremony Tuesday at the recently renovated Finian's Restaurant, 1657 Hancock St.

The restoration project, undertaken jointly by Finian's owner James Hession and Quincy 2000, marks one of three storefront projects -- as well as one signage improvement project -- that Quincy 2000 is undertaking this summer before these commercial building renovation programs end.

The ribbon cutting marks the rebirth of Finian's, said Hession, who founded the restaurant in 1983.

He said the renovations express his confidence that Quincy, and Quincy Center in particular, are vibrant places to do business.

"We're looking into the 21st century," said Hession, who added that he has made a commitment to focus Finian's cuisine on New England style dishes served in a modern, upbeat atmosphere.

Many New England style entrees, he said, have been added to a redesigned menu and many of Finian's popular dishes have remained.

The exterior and interior of the restaurant have been remodeled to provide a warm and casual environment that will contribute to a memorable dining experience.

"We at Finian's are excited to bring a fresh new face to Finian's loyal customers and we invite new ones to come as well," Hession said.

"These highly successful programs have become models for other communities seeking to revitalize their business districts," said Quincy 2000 Economic Development Coordinator Michael Rie.

Funding for the programs comes from the City of Quincy and the US Department of Housing and Urban Development's (HUD) Community Development Block Program. Quincy 2000 Executive Director Joseph Mannarino added a "special thanks to Mayor Sheets and members of the City Council for their approval of the CDBG funding for this program over the past four years."

The Signage Improvement Program, started in 1993, has replaced or improved the primary signs for 150 businesses in Quincy, awarding a total of approximately $130,000 in grants to said businesses. The awards have also leveraged more than $150,000 in private sector spending.

The sign improvement projects have enhanced the Quincy Center, Wollaston, North Quincy, and Quincy Point areas.

The final project for this program was the installation of new awnings for six businesses located at 10-28 A Billings Rd. in North Quincy, initiated by property owner J&D Realty Trust. These awnings were recently installed and have greatly improved the appearance of the property.

Rie also added that "the Storefront Improvement Program, started in 1996, has been highly successful in eliminating deteriorated and blighted commercial buildings in the city's primary business districts."

Including the three final projects, Rie said, the program has renovated 47 individual storefronts, awarded a total of almost $500,000 in grants, and leveraged almost $3 million in private spending to renovate the exteriors and interiors of the properties.

The success of the program, Rie said, is due in part to the volunteerism of the Quincy 2000 Design Review Committee, comprised of: Mark Dickinson, Dickinson Development; James Edwards, Holmes & Edwards; Roberta Fitzgerald, City of Quincy Department of Planning and Community Development; Lynne Houghton, Jack Conway Realty; Joseph Mulligan, JAM Architects; Sheikh Rahman, SAR Engineering; and Caryn Smith, Caryn's Corner.

Finian's owner Hession undertook a significant renovation of both the interior and exterior of his restaurant. The exterior improvements include new windows and entrance doorways, new lights, and a new paint, awning, and signage scheme.

This is the fourth facade improvement project completed at the southern end of Hancock St. -- including the two properties on either side of Finian's and Firestone located across the street, all of which have improved the southern gateway into Quincy Center.

Later this summer, facade improvements will be made to 13-17 Temple St., the former Patriot Ledger Building in Quincy Center.

This architecturally significant building is currently undergoing a complete renovation by new owner Louis Mazzini.

"The installation of windows and entrances, replicating the original design, will be a significant improvement to the building," Rie said. "The successful renovation and leasing of this building, which has stood vacant for over 10 years, will be the crowning jewel in Quincy Center's revitalization, which has been a priority of Quincy 2000 since its inception."

The final project for this round of the program is 25-39 Temple St./33-37 Washington St., located adjacent to the former Patriot Ledger building.

This property, owned by Treace, Ltd., is also undergoing significant renovations. Plans call for the renovation and leasing of the property's upper floor, which has been vacant for five years.

Said Rie: "The facade improvement calls for the replacement of all upper floor windows, a new paint and lighting scheme, minor improvements to the ground floor storefronts and sign bands, and new entrances to the upper floors, including the installation of a new elevator."

Mannarino explained that Quincy 2000 will focus on its lending, small business assistance, and planning activities following the end of these building renovation projects.

"Quincy 2000 is proud of the improvements we've made to the business districts through these programs, but we are equally proud of the financial and technical assistance we've provided and will continue to provide the small businesses in Quincy," Mannarino said.

First Time Home Buyers Workshops Aug. 5, 12

Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services, an approved First Time Homebuyer Counseling Agency, will hold an accredited and MHFA certified First Time Homebuyer's Workshop in collaboration with Citizens Mortgage Corporation Saturdays, Aug. 5 and 12.

The workshop will be held at The Citizens Bank, 1200 Hancock St., Quincy Center, from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m. Attendance at both workshops is mandatory to receive the homebuying certificate which is required by all lenders to qualify for the many different mortgage options such as the Mass Housing Finance Agency, Soft Second Programs, down payment and closing costs grants, and other special first time homebuyer financing options.

Neighborhood Housing Services is a non-profit organization dedicated to assisting first time buyers through the homebuying process. The staff at NHS is unique in their approach to obtaining down payment and closing costs assistance as well as rehab grants for their clients, which are available throughout the entire South Shore area. Don't miss this opportunity to find out how you or someone you know can buy a home with little or no money down.

The agenda will be comprehensive and individualized. The focus will be on the many changing aspects of homebuying, including how to locate a property within your budget, how to make an offer, and determining the best mortgage program for your needs.

Advanced registration is required and space is limited. A $10 refundable registration fee is required.

Contact Debbie Kidd at (617) 770-2387 for more information and to register for the workshop.

A Solution For Some: FHA Program For Reverse Mortgages Seniors Find New Avenue For Property Tax Relief

While politicians and homeowners alike clamor to identify ways in which the issue of property taxes can be resolved, many homeowners have discovered the only solution they will ever need.

The solution comes in the form of the FHA program for reverse mortgages. The program allows homeowners 62 years of age and older with little or no mortgage remaining to draw tax-free income from their home equity without requiring repayment for as long as they occupy the home.

Unfortunately, the program can't do anything to lower the amount of property taxes which a participant will pay. What it can do, however, is provide the necessary funds to pay the taxes when they are due. In most cases, the participant can do this by establishing a "line of credit" which will be available to pay the property taxes. This completely eliminates the need for homeowners to make monthly installment payments toward their property taxes.

This "line of credit" is very similar to a "home equity line of credit" which one might get at a bank with two notable exceptions. Unlike a bank line of credit, an individual can draw as much as they wish from the line up to their predetermined limit and never make a monthly payment on the account.

The second difference is that the reverse mortgage line of credit will actually increase in value by about 7% per year. As long as a participant has an available line of credit, the account will continue to grow.

By providing the homeowner with another source of income which they can use to satisfy their property tax requirements, participants are able to use their fixed income for living expenses and do not have to worry about setting aside money every month to meet the property tax needs. This translates into extra income to use for the purpose of living.

Although this program has been very popular nationally, many eligible participants still do not realize that this alternative is available to them. The majority of those who are seeking this program so far have indicated that paying property taxes each year is a major consideration in their decision to look into the program.

Seniors often worry that the expenses of homeownership will force them to lower their standard of living. This is a choice most older homeowners simply do not want to make. With the reverse mortgage program the participants are able to make their property tax payments without having to use their fixed income resources.

For more information, contact Jeffrey Moulton of Wells Fargo Home Mortgage at (800) 950-3297.

Mass. Has A Blood Emergency

The Only Way Out Is To Donate

It's simple mathematics. At one time or another, 60 percent of Americans will need blood or blood products. But only about five percent of our country's population donates blood.

And now, dire predictions made two years ago are coming true. In 1998, the National Blood Data Resource Center predicted that declines in donated blood and strongly increased demand for blood and blood products would result in a shortage of crisis proportions in 2000.

And sure enough, halfway through 2000 we are seeing reports of a serious shortfall of blood — far beyond the annually anticipated summer shortages — despite the best efforts of Massachusetts hospitals and the American Red Cross.

Blood use has increased in the last few years for a number of reasons, including hospitals performing more sophisticated surgeries such as orthopedic procedures and organ transplants, and treatment of the aging baby boomer and World War II generations. Truly wonderful, life-saving things are being done with blood.

Ironically, it is the same generation of people (those who lived through World War II) who for many years have formed the corps of blood donors. But the onset of health problems such as heart disease, high blood pressure and diabetes are limiting the numbers of people who can now donate.

While blood donors are needed throughout the year, they are most urgently in short supply during holidays and in the summer. It is during these times that the number of donations declines while the demand continues or even increases.

This summer, the Massachusetts Medical Society has taken on a special project to help recruit more blood donors, so your doctor may very well be talking with you about the prospect.

Allan Kliman, M.D., a former medical director of the Red Cross in Massachusetts who heads up the MMS Committee on Transfusion Medicine, notes that there is only one way to reverse a growing shortage.

"The blood banks can't solve this problem on their own," he says. "The only solution is by finding more volunteers to donate more blood."

Most healthy people who weigh at least 110 pounds and are 17 years or older are eligible to donate. Federal regulations require that donors wait 56 days between donations.

Even if you are unable to donate yourself, there are ways you can help. If a friend or relative requires a blood transfusion, you can help recruit suitable donors. Chances are, you know someone who would be happy to donate blood, if only they were asked. Donating blood is one of the best gifts you can give. It costs about an hour, and it costs you absolutely nothing.

For more information on where you can give blood, contact the Massachusetts Medical Society at (781) 434-73-11 or on the Web at www.massmed.org.

Hearing aid "Tips from Tobias"

"How I clean my ears?"

You normally "clean" things that are dirty. Believe it or not wax is not dirt. It is a protective secretion from mother nature. It helps keep out infection and insects. It is produced in the outer portion of the ear canal, about 3/8" into your ear. When I see wax next to someone's eardrum it usually spells "Q-tip" or some other brand swab. Wax must be put there by some means, swabs, bobby pins, keys, you name it. When the ear itches people will stick just about anything in their ear to stop it, sometimes damaging the eardrum or canal wall. If your ear itches try to scratch it by rubbing behind your ear. Ear wax normally migrates outward, so don't push it back in, let nature take its course. Unfortunately in rare cases the ear produces too much, too little or too dry wax. Ask your doctor (preferably an ear doctor) about your specific problem. If you need the name of one in your area feel free to call me. Remember ear canals are not dirty they are probably the cleanest most germ-free part of your body! Now you go and spread the news! Steve

Granite Strike Early, Often In 27-8 Win

By CHRIS POISSON

This time, Mike Thomas was on time and the Quincy Granite wasted no time.

After rallying in the fourth quarter for a 15-14 win over the Mass Havoc in Week 3, Quincy struck quicker and more often in Sunday afternoon's 27-8 win over the Charlestown Townies (2-1).

"We got off to a quick start but we kind of stumbled at the end of the game," said coach Ken McPhee. "I think we got a little complacent after getting a big lead."

Quincy (3-1) will try to extend its winning streak to four games Saturday night when it heads north to take on the Maine Pride (2-1).

Thomas picked up where he left off against the Havoc, throwing for over 200 yards with four touchdown passes and no interceptions. As he gains more experience each week, the passing game should only become more explosive.

The ground game, on the other hand, concerns McPhee. As it struggles to get going, the top man in the backfield has been Thomas, who has two of the team's three rushing touchdowns this season. He rushed for a team-high 30 yards against the Townies.

"We didn't run the ball as well as we would have liked to," McPhee said. "Eventually, people will be treading off and going after the quarterback. If [Thomas] didn't have good feet, we'd be in trouble. But a lot of it has to do with the different lineman used each week. We don't have any continuity."

Defensively, the Granite continue to shine as Charlestown turned the ball over five times and managed only one touchdown late in the game.

"We're rotating guys in and out like a turnstile," McPhee said. "There's no question we're much more balanced than last year."

After missing the first half against the Havoc, Thomas clocked in early against the Townies, hitting tailback Jackson Vetiack on the third play from scrimmage for a touchdown on an 80-yard screen.

On its next series, Thomas hooked up with wideout Bill MacDougall for a 38-yard TD strike, giving Quincy a 14-0 lead in the first quarter.

"There's no question why he was a Division 1 football player," said McPhee on Thomas' progression. "He has a lot of talent. He throws the ball extremely well."

Quincy went up 21-0 when Bo Garcia hauled in a 25-yard TD pass. Thomas later found MacDougall again for a 34-yard score, the fourth time this season the two have combined for six points.

EFL Honors

MacDougall and John Skabeikis earned Eastern Conference Player of the Week honors for Week 3 (July 22) after their performance in the Granite's win over the Mass Havoc.

MacDougall, named offensive player of the week, hauled in two TD passes to lead a comeback in the fourth quarter. He finished with three catches for 69 yards.

Skabeikis earned defensive honors with three of the team's four interceptions. His last interception came late in the game to seal the win.

Against Charlestown Skabeikis intercepted his fifth pass of the year, which leads the league.

Higgins Update

Quarterback Liam Higgins, who has been out all season with head injury, is expected to return in a couple of weeks.

With Thomas playing well in his absence, his return figures to leave McPhee with a quarterback controversy. Not so.

"When he's back, we'll have two great quarterbacks. I feel confident with each one," McPhee said.

An Old Friend

Jim Timothy, who left the Granite about two weeks ago in search of more playing time, scored Charlestown's only touchdown when he rushed one in from a couple yards out.

A linebacker for Quincy, Timothy played two-ways for Charlestown Sunday.

Joe Hern Fourth In National Wrestling Tourney

Joe Hern of Quincy recently placed fourth in his weight class in the association division at this summer's AAU National Scholastic Duals Wrestling Tournament in Orlando, Fla.

Hern wrestled with a Massachusetts invitational team at the tournament, which drew 56 teams from 37 states.

Last season, he finished with a 19-3 record in dual meet actions and took fifth place in the Division 1 state tournament.

Hern is entering his junior year at Quincy High School and has been selected as a tri-captain for the 2000-2001 season.

QUINCY YOUTH FOOTBALL camp is being held this week at Faxon Park for all five teams in the league. Over 200 kids participated in the opening day of drills Monday. The camp is run by Jack Raymer (above right), former Quincy High School coach and current Stonehill College coach, Greg Burke (Stoughton coach) and Frank Tricani (Braintree athletic director) along with the coaching staffs at Quincy and North Quincy.

Changes To Granite Schedule

The Quincy Granite's schedule has changed as a result of last week's disbandment of the New Hampshire Chargers franchise from the Eastern Football League.

The bye week scheduled for this weekend has been moved to Aug. 26 to replace the New Hampshire game, and Quincy will now travel to Maine Saturday to take on the Pride at 7 p.m.

The following two weeks will remain the same — a bye Aug. 12 and a home game against Maine Aug. 19.

In the off-season, the two teams from New Hampshire (Rochester and Concord)

Recreation Dept. Crowns Street Hockey Champs

The Quincy Recreation Department recently held its annual Street Hockey Tournament at Montclair playground with over 75 children participating from seven of the 19 playgrounds throughout the city.

The event was run by sports specialists Ryan Bell, Patrick McDonough, Ryan Herlihy and Geoff Meade, and they were assisted by several playground leaders.

The following teams won first place in the tournament:

Midget Boys: (Faxon Park) Mark Gilboby, Zack Helfrich, Matt McGue, Matt

Rodriguez, Chris Randall, Kyle Craig and John Magliozzi. Coached by Sean Fitzpatrick, Caitlin Brillo and Laura McEvoy.

Runner-up: (Squantum) Andrew McCarthy, Jeremy Mock, Tyler Costa, Nick Hutchings, Sean Harrington and Jackie Kremidas. Coached by Joe MacRitchie.

Tony King, Ryan Doyle Featured In Hockey Showcase

Two Quincy residents are competing in Hockey Night In Boston's 26th annual Showcase of Stars tournament held at Merrimack College's S. Peter Volpe Complex in North Andover and the Icenter in Salem, N.H.

Tony King, a junior at Catholic Memorial, and Ryan Doyle, a senior at B.C. High, are forwards on the South Shore team, which is off to a 2-2 start.

The 18-team tournament began last Thursday and first round action ends Aug. 12. Over 400 of the nation's top scholastic players from 30 states and Canada are participating in the event.

Ryan Corbett Cycling To Help Fight Lung Disease

Ryan Corbett of Quincy will be riding in the 16th annual Autumn Escape Bike Trek Sept. 15-17 to raise awareness and funds for the American Lung Association.

"I like to challenge myself and see how far I can ride and this is for a good cause," said Corbett, who will be pedaling from Plymouth to Provincetown for the first time.

Over the three-day, 160-mile trek, cyclists will tour the Cape Cod canal, the Falmouth Shining Sea Bike Trail, the Old King's Highway and the Cape Cod National Seashore.

"What is unique and special about this event is that these people come together for a weekend united in making a difference in the fight against lung disease," said Martha Waldron, executive director of the American Lung Association.

Each cyclist pays a $40 registration fee and raises a minimum of $400 in pledges. A two-day Saturday to Sunday option is also available.

Cyclists must raise a minimum of $300 to participate.

Money raised through pledges and donations will qualify cyclists to win prizes such as a L.L. Bean gift certificate, a 4-day, 3-night stay at the Sonesta Beach Resort in Bermuda, and more.

For more information about the Autumn Escape Bike Trek or how you can fight lung disease, call the American Lung Association of Greater Norfolk County at (508) 668-6729, or e-mail at lungusa@worldnet.att.net.

Shea's Bertoni Memorial Golf Tournament Sept. 11

The Bill Shea's 12th annual Bertoni Memorial Golf Tournament will be held Monday, Sept. 11 at the Halifax Country Club to benefit the Quincy Animal Shelter.

The tournament will tee-off at 8 a.m. The event will also feature various golfing contests and raffles, such as a longest drive, closest to the pin and hole-in-one for a chance to win a new Buick. There will be an awards luncheon following the tournament.

Proceeds will be used to feed, pay medical bills and rehab the shelter for the animals. The tournament will be run with the help of Siro's

Restaurant, Quincy Animal Shelter, Bill Shea of Shea's Coriam, Jeff Sweeney of Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals and Sue Deegan.

Those interested in playing in the tournament, or would like more information, are asked to call Bill Shea at (617) 326-1266 or Sue Deegan at (617) 376-2001.

5 Residents Place At Bay State Games

Four Quincy residents placed in the track and field competition and one in judo at the recent 19th annual Bay State Summer Games.

In track and field, Kyle Piazza grabbed the second spot in the boys scholastic shot put (49'07) and finished third in the discus (132'11).

Margaret Crumety won the women's open triple jump (37'02), Katy Mercurio came in fifth in the girls scholastic high jump (4'08), and Jeff Hunt finished sixth in the boys scholastic long jump (18'00.5).

In judo, Ken Hede took second place in the boys ages 10-12, 68 pounds division.

Patrick White Inspires Pan-Mass Cyclists

On Saturday and Sunday, Patrick White of Quincy will be inspiring a group of cyclists at the 21st annual Pan-Massachusetts (PMC) bicycle fund-raiser to benefit the Jimmy Fund at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Through the PMC's new Pedal Partner program, 9-year-old White is being paired with the MFS Investment Management team of cyclists. The Pedal Partner program matches children who are Jimmy Fund Clinic patients with an individual PMC bicyclist or team.

By being paired with a patient, cyclists can focus on a real person as one of the reasons they spend countless hours training in the months leading up to the grueling two-day, 200-mile ride across Massachusetts.

White was diagnosed with rhabdomyosarcoma, a soft tissue form of cancer, this past November. He is currently undergoing chemotherapy and radiation treatments at the Jimmy Fund Clinic.

"This new program offers the children and PMC cyclists a personal connection to one another," said Lisa Scherber, Jimmy Fund Clinic activities coordinator. "Not only do the children inspire the riders, but the riders inspire the children—the children realize they have someone special, a friend, riding for them."

The MFS Investment Management team raised $610,000 for the Jimmy Fund last year, which included MFS sponsorship donation, the team's fundraising efforts and a corporate match. This year, with the help of a matching grant from MFS, the team hopes to raise $700,000 in honor of White to support cancer research.

"We have 52 riders and more than 50 volunteers," said Karen Brooks, PMC project manager for MFS. "Each has personal reasons for participating in the PMC, but being paired with a Jimmy Fund Clinic patient gives us a person to focus on as a team—a person who is benefiting from our efforts right now."

The Pan-Massachusetts Challenge, presented by MFS Investment Management, is the nation's oldest and most successful bicycle fund-raiser. Last year, more than 2,500 PMC riders contributed a record $8.7 million to the Jimmy Fund, bringing the PMC's total contribution over 20 years to almost $43 million. This year's goal is to raise $12 million.

To contribute to the MFS Investment Management team or the PMC, call 1-800-WE-CYCLE.

McDermotts Cycling In Mother's Memory

Quincy City Councillor Patrick McDermott and Quincy Police Patrolman Chris McDermott will once again be riding together in this weekend's Pan-Massachusetts Challenge.

Now in its 21st year, the PMC is a 194-mile bike ride from Sturbridge to Provincetown that serves as the largest single fund-raiser for the Jimmy Fund at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, having raised over $55 million for cancer treatment and research.

The McDermott brothers dedicate their ride every year to their mother, Patricia, who died from cancer in 1989.

"There has been no greater pain in our lives than the loss of our mother," Patrick McDermott said. "Our family faced a very difficult time, but together we made it through by honoring her memory through this ride."

"Cancer does not discriminate," Chris McDermott said. "It hits people of all ages and races. I unfortunately have seen first-hand the devastating effects this disease has on families. I just want to try to do my part to see the day when we can declare a full victory over this disease."

This will be Patrick's ninth and Chris' eighth ride. Together they have raised over $20,000 in their eight rides. In order to participate each rider must raise a minimum of $1,500.

"This event is truly remarkable," Patrick McDermott said. "Over 2,000 riders, 75,000 sponsors and countless volunteers make PMC weekend a unique event."

Patrick McDermott returned to the race last year after double-hip replacement surgery in 1998. He said the ride served as an inspiration for total recovery.

"I was grateful to hear that cycling plays an important role in the recovery from hip replacement surgery," he said. "I made it my own personal challenge to be back in the race last year, and finished with my best personal time ever. To know that some young child is sitting through chemotherapy treatment struggling for his life makes my own hospital stay look like summer camp. I ride for those kids."

Bonnie Hirtle, Kathleen Hester Participate In National Youth Basketball Tournament

Quincy residents Bonnie Hirtle and Kathleen Hester, members of the Lady Gators 15-and-under basketball team, recently returned home from a 10-day trip to Polk County, Fla. where they participated in the Youth Basketball of America National Championship Tournament.

Representing Massachusetts against teams from 14 other states, some which had two or three years experience, the Lady Gators were victorious in the end, finishing as the No. 8 team in the country.

"They played harder and better than anyone had anticipated, exhibiting the heart of a champion, said coach Maria Pazyra. "They became stronger and more focused as each game went by."

Leo Maloney, director of the Lady Gators organization, believes that if this team stays intact for the next two years, it could be one of the best teams in the country in the 17-and-under division.

Hirtle and Hester, both second-year players, played major roles during the 40-game season and they were also standouts during the national championship tournament.

Hirtle is a three-point specialist and outstanding foul shooter, while Hester is a defensive star as well as a team leader.

"Bonnie Hirtle, who is the youngest player on the team, really stepped up her game at both ends of the court, and Kathleen Hester put in a stellar defensive performance," Pazyra said.

"They should be as proud of themselves as we are of them," she added. "They represented themselves, their families, Quincy and Massachusetts with pride, dignity and honor."

apply. "Do I work for a public agency? Yes. Do I work for a municipal agency? No."

In addition, Kolson said the complex nature of the issue, coupled with what he termed "misleading" media reports, make his actions seem unseemly in a political world where appearances sometimes count for more than reality.

"It's been a long and frustrating situation," Kolson said of his attempts to collect his council salary from 1990, when he first took office as Ward I Councillor, to mid-1994 after a special waiver, in the form of a successful home rule petition, was passed by the State Legislature on his behalf in 1993.

From 1994 until his unsuccessful bid for councillor at large this past November, Kolson's exemption allowed him to collect both salaries.

"One law says I'm a municipal employee and the other law says I'm not," Kolson said. "The whole matter is convoluted. If I worked for a department head in the city of Quincy, I could apply for a 'special municipal employee status' and collect two salaries."

According to Kolson, this particular state law was created in the 1980's for political reasons involving another Massachusetts city and unfairly singles out housing authority employees. Why, asks Kolson, would the state grant an exemption for him, as it did in 1993, if it didn't think the law was flawed?

In a March interview on the subject, Mayor James Sheets said the law preventing Kolson from receiving both salaries "didn't make any sense."

Kolson blamed politics for the failure of this most recent home rule petition specifically targeting his back pay, which was passed unanimously by the City Council March 20. "The Quincy Legislative Delegation (Senator Michael Morrissey and Representatives Stephen Tobin, Ronald Mariano, and Bruce Ayers) did their best, and they support me wholeheartedly, but, for various reasons, they just did not want a fight with the chairman (Rep. Marie Parente, D-Milford) and that's why it's in study committee."

The petition was not passed, claims Kolson, because of the surface appearance of conflict of interest, since most people don't make the necessary distinction between whether a salary is municipal or not.

And Kolson added that the appearance of wrongdoing was also present in a July 27 Patriot Ledger article on the matter, in which it was reported that, during the early years when Kolson was allowed to distribute his council salary on projects within his ward, he paid $819 to a relative for landscaping work and $1,425 to a friend for painting crosswalks. Both of those matters, Kolson said, are misleading. Said Kolson:

"The article gave the impression that there was some wrongdoing, which couldn't be further from the truth."

Kolson admits that he used his council salary for ward improvements until the state ethics commission intervened and that the reported payments were made, but said he "had never even met before" the so-called "friend" who re-painted the crosswalks, explaining further that that first meeting did lead to a friendship later on. Also, Kolson said the job was an important one: painting badly needed crosswalks on Sea St. and Palmer St. which were becoming a safety hazard.

As for issue number two, the payment to a relative, Kolson said the person in question was his wife's nephew and that he checked with both City Solicitor Stephen McGrath and the ethics commission beforehand. "They (McGrath and the commission) said that the relation was so far removed that it didn't present a conflict," Kolson said. "There was nothing underhanded about what I did. Everyone knew the how, when, and where of it before I started."

Kolson said he spent about $20,000 of his roughly $30,000 in back pay on ward improvements, including $4,000 to the PTOs at Broad Meadows, Atherton Hough, Snug Harbor, and Merrymount Schools and the Friends For a Better Quincy High School.

As for whether he considered it right or wrong to use his council salary for ward projects, Kolson was adamant: "All I did was give the taxpayers back their money."

McGrath, who still holds the position as City Solicitor, said that he does remember speaking to Kolson in the early 90's concerning the council salary and members advising him that ward projects were, in his opinion, a "permissible use" of that salary. He does not recall, however, having a conversation specifically involving any personnel for the projects, nor could he locate any written documentation of such a discussion from his files. "My memory of it, going back 10 years, was that it was a conversation on the projects themselves," McGrath said.

McGrath also said that he understood Kolson's argument concerning a lack of conflict of interest but that, given the specificity of the written law, it was really beside the point. "The ethics commission weighed in and said that he needed legislation to solve the problem," McGrath said.

McGrath added that, unlike national legislation, the state does not keep testimonial records on laws, making it difficult to glean just exactly what the intent of the original law was.

McGrath said he knew of no exemptions for municipal employees wishing to collect two salaries. "I don't think there's an exemption that permits department heads or others from receiving two salaries," McGrath said. "And at any rate, that's not his problem."

At the City Council meeting on the issue March 20, Auditor Michael McFarland said that all salary funds not used by Kolson for Ward 1 were put back into the city's general fund.

At the time of the controversy, the annual city councillor salary was $10,000.

Union Congregational Aiding Pediatrics Unit At Walter Reed Center

Union Congregational Church of Wollaston continues to build a relationship with the Pediatrics Unit at the Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C.

The church's Outreach Ministry Department, under the direction of Rev. Martha Swanson, is gathering ball caps, T-shirts and small Boston type mementos to be mailed to the children at the hospital.

Walter Reed Hospital is the primary intensive and acute care pediatrics facility for all military personnel. Most of the children suffer from severe medical problems. The church began a relationship with the hospital in 1995 when the pastor of the church, Rev. John Swanson, then a chaplain in the Navy Reserve, did temporary duty there.

The public is invited to participate in this project. For more information call the church at 479-6661.

Bethany Congregational

There will be two worship services Sunday at Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center.

Holy Communion will be served at both the 8:30 and 10 a.m. services. Rev. William Harding, pastor, will preach on "Out of Control Wants."

Scripture reader will be Rev. George Hodgkins. Music will feature soloist Lu Ann Mina, soprano with Thomas Boyer, organist.

Childcare is available for infants and toddlers. Greeter will be Peter and Michelle Luzon. Members of the Diaconate assisting the pastor in serving Holy Communion will be Jean and Winslow Bettinson, Pamela Sawyer and Cheryl Totten.

The Fellowship Hour following the 10 a.m. worship service will be hosted by Thelma Borneman and Roberta Murphy. It will also be Pantry Shelf Sunday. All foods and paper goods collected will go to the Interfaith Social Services Agency.

Houghs Neck Congregational

Rabbi Alvin Lieberman, retired Army and VA chaplain, will be the guest speaker at the 9:30 a.m. worship service Sunday at Hough Neck Congregational Church, 310

Manet Ave.

Rev. M. Alicia Corea will conduct the service.

Coffee hour will follow the service. All are welcome.

Alzheimer's/Dementia Support Group Meetings

Hancock Park Rehabilitation and Nursing Center, located at 164 Parkingway, Quincy, will hold the first of its bi-monthly Alzheimer's Disease/Dementia Support Groups on Tuesday, Aug. 15 at 7 p.m.

The meetings will offer support and encouragement for family members dealing with the onset of Alzheimer's Disease and related dementia, and will also provide education on the disease.

For further information, contact Marianne McSweeney at 617-773-4222 ext. 234.

Free Health Screening Aug. 9

The Visiting Nurse Association of Boston and its affiliate, the Melrose Visiting Nurse Service, will offer a free health screening at Stop & Shop, 141 Newport Ave., North Quincy, on Wednesday, Aug. 9 from 9 a.m. to noon.

An agency nurse will be available at the screening to monitor blood pressure, check glucose levels and to answer any questions regarding general health issues or medications.

The free clinic is open to the public. Participants do not have to be VNA of Boston patients to attend.

For more information, call the VNA of Boston at (617) 464-5161.

Faith Lutheran Bible School

Vacation Bible School will be held Aug. 14-18 at Faith Lutheran Church, 201 Granite St.

The sessions will be from 9 a.m. until noon for children three years old and up. Fun mornings of Bible lessons, games, crafts, recreation and snacks are planned around the theme, "2000 Ark Avenue:

God's Great Get-Together."

There is no fee, but non-perishable food items will be collected for the Quincy Crisis Center and free-will offerings will be sent to MaaSae Girls Lutheran Secondary School in Tanzania.

For more information or to register, call the church office at 472-1247.

United Methodist

The Rev. Carol Stine will have "Bread That Perishes - Bread That's Yours" as her sermon topic at the 10 a.m. worship service Sunday at Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St., Wollaston.

Cathy Emerson will serve as the lector.

Adele Hamilton will be the greeter and Keith Eisenhauer and Donald Hunter will be the ushers.

Fellowship Hour in Susanna Wesley Hall will be hosted by Margaret Buckley, Susan Little and Pity Warungu.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Disappointment can be a blasting experience. Especially when high expectations are suddenly turned into denial, grief and discouragement. As the pressures of life increase, it seems that the causes for discouragement multiply. Have not all of us at one time or another faced a situation that has disappointed or discouraged us?

Let's think upon this quotation: "Let's learn to label properly Disappointment and Discouragement for what they are - two completely different states of mind. Disappointment can be a spur to improvement that will contribute to success... But discouragement is a mortal enemy that destroys courage and robs one of the will to fight."

It is not circumstance that causes Discouragement, but one's own REACTION to that circumstance. Everyone must meet Disappointment, many times; it is simply a part of life. When it is met, we may resign ourselves to Discouragement and failure. Or we may recognize each Disappointment as an asset by which we can profit and take new strength from a lesson learned.

The choice is ours, each time, to make." - John M. Wilson

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be the Zodiac's Sheik of Sheep, but Cupid could soon turn you into a doting little Lamb who wants to be somebody's very special someone.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your gift for creating order out of chaos might be severely tested, as problems continue to arise. Be alert. Someone might be trying to undercut your efforts.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A romance that seemed to have a chance for a long run could be winding down instead. Take time to assess your true feelings before attempting to restart it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) More allies rally around as you deal with your workplace challenger. Things are much easier on the home front, where good news brings cheer to you and your kin.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) An unexpected complication might force you to change your usual travel plans. But instead of growling over the situation, see it as a chance for a new experience.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That hazy atmosphere you've been living under is clearing up. Things become more defined and easier to deal with. Celebrate with that special person.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect to learn some surprising facts about some people in your life, as you sort out a misunderstanding. Everyone benefits when the air is finally cleared.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your aspects are positive for new ventures. As usual, let your sharp insight guide you as you consider a new undertaking. Travel is also favored.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) If you've been planning a career change, you could soon get some exciting news. Positive developments are also favored on the home front.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A long-time relationship with a partner or spouse is put to a severe emotional test. Your strength and innate wisdom will help you get through the difficult times.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Continue to make the needs of your loved ones your priority, despite distractions. Once things are settled in your personal life, you can deal with other challenges.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Go with the flow and let this new relationship develop before you make a commitment. Things you might have missed will come to the surface with time.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You have a flair for the dramatic. You also have a hot temper, which you often struggle to keep under control.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

LICENSE BOARD BRIEFS

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

*Granted a one-day alcoholic license to Aslanis Seafoods, Penn St. for their 4th annual employee outing, Saturday, Aug. 19 from 12 noon to 6 p.m.

*Granted a one-day entertainment license to the Quantum Yacht Club for a Sept. 9 concert.

*Granted a one-day general license to The Dianne DeVanna Center for their annual fund-raiser "Touch the Truck" to be held in the parking lot at Waterworks, Marina Bay, Sunday, Sept. 24 from 12 noon to 4 p.m. Children will be able to climb trucks from various companies and the fire department.

*Granted a beer and wine license to the Punjab Cafe, 253 Southern Artery. It was formerly the Roman Gardens. Atty. Edward Fleming told the board the restaurant plans to open within two weeks.

*Granted a Keno license to Murphy's Twin Shamrocks, 425 Hancock St. David Murphy told the board the Keno TV would be in the back of the restaurant near the kitchen.

*Granted a permit to the New England Haven for Animals to conduct a fund-raiser "Dog Days of Summer" in the parking lot of Pet Supplies Plus, 625 Southern Artery Saturday, Aug. 19 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Dogs will be washed and towed dry.

*Granted a garage repair license to Steven R. Cob-ban, owner of Emergency Towing Inc., 61 Copeland St. Also permission to park his tow truck on the premises.

*Voted to cancel the common victualer and beer and wine license held by Cafe Mediterania, 423A Hancock St. for failure to conduct business at a license premise. Board chairman Joseph Shea said the restaurant has been closed since July 24. The matter now goes to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission and the license will go back into the city's quota.

*At the request of Walter White, Director of Inspection Services, who reviewed the conditions at the Furnace Brook Gas & Variety, 507 Furnace Brk. Pkwy, the board will send a reminder to Salim Youseff to plant grass and install a curbing that had been paved over.

*On Aug. 29 the board will discuss the inspection of restaurant grill hoods and the chance of fires because of grease build-up. Restaurants will not be issued a license until the grills have passed inspection.

*Also on Aug. 29, the board will review its canning policy. Shea said Quincy has allowed other cities and towns to solicit for charities and now the calendar is "full until 2001." It was suggested that maybe they will allow only Quincy to solicit.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

On Aug. 3, 1492, Italian explorer Christopher Columbus set sail from the Spanish port of Palos in command of three ships — the Pinta, the Niña, and the Santa Maria — on a journey to find a Western ocean route to the Far East and confirm his belief that the world was round. ... On Aug. 2, 1876, famed frontier lawman "Wild Bill" Hickok was shot from behind as he played cards in a saloon in Deadwood, Dakota Territory. He died instantly. ... On Aug. 1, 1914, four days after Austria-Hungary declared war on Serbia, Germany and Russia declared war against each other, France mobilized, and the first German army units crossed into Luxembourg in preparation for the German invasion of France. ... On Aug. 4, 1944, the Nazi Gestapo abducted Anne Frank and her family two years after they took shelter to avoid deportation to a Nazi concentration camp. However, the Gestapo failed to capture the young girl's diary, a literary testament to the 6 million Jews, including Anne herself, who were silenced in the Holocaust. ... On Aug. 6, 1945, the Enola Gay, a U.S. B-29 bomber, dropped the first atomic weapon ever used in combat on the Japanese city of Hiroshima. Within minutes the massive blast and the firestorm it produced destroyed the majority of the city and killed almost 100,000 people, a third of Hiroshima's population. ... On Aug. 5, 1962, actress Marilyn Monroe was found dead in her home. Beside her bed was an empty bottle that had contained 50 sleeping pills, leading police to determine her death a suicide. ... On July 31, 1964, Ranger 7, an unmanned U.S. lunar probe, took the first close-up images of the moon — 4,308 in total — before it impacted with the lunar surface northwest of the Sea of the Clouds. ... On July 31, 1975, notorious U.S. labor leader Jimmy Hoffa, a former Teamsters president who had served four years in prison, was reported missing.

gun in the 1950's, and that even EEE has a minimal risk factor compared to major safety concerns such as the flu or, for that matter, traffic accidents.

Although no spraying is scheduled specifically for the mosquito which carries the West Nile Virus, Smith added that regular "nuisance" mosquito control spraying was started in Norfolk County in March and that mosquito control in water basins, of which Quincy has 5,400, was started in June.

The decision to spray or not to spray, Smith said, rests with the State Department of Public Health. For residents who want highly detailed information — including the type of pesticides used, the type of mosquitoes targeted, and links to such valuable resources as the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) — Smith recommended the control projects' at: www.ultranet.com/~ncmcp.

Jane Gallahue, Quincy's health commissioner, emphasized the importance of preventive steps which residents can take to limit their exposure to mosquitoes and the risk of infection.

The Health Department, Gallahue said, is working closely on the situation with the Massachusetts Department of Health, which has established a WNV information line at 1-877-603-3572.

Gallahue noted that the virus, which causes mild symptoms in most people but can be much more serious in the elderly and young children, has not been identified in any Massachusetts residents but rather in two crows (birds are considered an early warning sign for the virus).

Donald Conboy, the city's animal control officer, said that three dead birds — a seagull, a crow, and what appeared to be a type of starling — were discovered in Quincy Friday and sent to the state for testing. The city has not heard back, which Conboy says is good news because the state's policy on situations like this is only to report back any bird testing positive for the virus.

The state, Conboy said, wants all dead birds (not obviously killed by something else, such as a broken leg) to be tested within 24 hours of discovery and urged all Quincy residents to call the Animal Control Office at 376-1364 at any time (there is a message service) if they find any dead birds.

However, Conboy advised residents against actually touching the animal, suggesting they simply cover it with a plastic bag and wait for his department to pick it up.

To reduce mosquito populations around your home and neighborhood, get rid of standing water that is available for mosquito breeding. Mosquitoes will breed in any puddle or standing water that lasts for more than four days.

Tips to remember are: empty any metal cans, plastic containers, ceramic pots, and other water holding containers (including trash cans) on your property, paying special attention to discarded tires; drill holes in the bottom of recycling containers to let the water out; clean clogged roof gutters; turn over wading pools, wheelbarrows, etc.; aerate bird-baths or ornamental ponds; keep swimming pools clean and properly chlorinated and remove standing water from pool covers; use landscaping to eliminate standing water that collects on your property.

West Nile Virus Encephalitis is a rare disease caused by a virus. In a small percentage of people infected by the virus, the disease can be serious, even fatal. The virus that causes the disease occurs in Europe, Africa, and Asia. It was first identified in the United States during the summer of 1999. It is not known how the virus got to the U.S. West Nile Virus grows in birds and it is transmitted from bird to bird and from birds to humans by mosquitoes. Horses bitten by mosquitoes carrying the virus can also become sick.

Mild infections cause fever, headache and body aches, often with a skin rash and swollen lymph glands. More severe infections can cause headache, high fever, neck stiffness, stupor, disorientation, coma, tremors, convulsions, paralysis, and, sometimes, death.

There is no treatment for WNV infection. Doctors can treat the symptoms of WNV Encephalitis. However, about seven percent of people who become sick enough from the infection to be hospitalized die from it. WNV is spread only by adult mosquitoes that are infected with the virus. People and horses that have WNV infection cannot spread the disease without mosquitoes. The risk of getting WNV Encephalitis is highest from late July through September.

There is no evidence that a person can get WNV from handling live or dead infected birds. Still, you should avoid bare-handed contact when handling dead animals, including birds. If you must handle dead birds, use gloves or double plastic bags.

Anyone noticing unusual numbers of dead birds should call Quincy Animal Control at 376-1364; the Quincy Health Department at (617) 376-1273; or the Mass Dept. of Health Info Hotline at 1-877-603-3572.

JUST SCRATCHING THE SURFACE?

When vehicle owners discover scratches, they may be tempted to treat the problem themselves with a product that temporarily fills in the scratch. However, this do-it-yourself approach is likely to result in the reappearance of the scratch after the next wash. Professionals know that even the very lightest scratches require the use of an abrasive product to remove sufficient amounts of the surrounding paint to make the scratch appear less deep. For deeper scratches, it is usually necessary to move from hand application to the use of an orbital buffer, a dual action polisher, a rotary polisher and, (in the most severe cases), wet sanding. Scratches that penetrate through to metal require repainting.

John Black, Sailor

Tall Ship Crew Member 'Dream Come True' For Local Business Man

During the recent Tall Ships visit to Boston, most people had to content themselves with a televised glimpse of the majestic parade of sail.

A lucky few might have found their way to Long Island for an up-close and personal view.

But for John Black, photographer and owner of Presidential Camera on Hancock St., the experience of this year's Tall Ships can only be described, as he himself described it several times, as "a dream come true."

Black and a friend, Quincy resident Theodore "Ted" Leutz, went down to New London, CT, for one last look at the Tall Ships, which Black had fallen in love with during their first visit to Boston in 1976, and found themselves crew members on not one but two tall ships: The U.S. Coast Guard training ship Eagle and the Canadian tall ship The Sherman Zwicker.

Their unexpected travels took them from New London to Halifax, Nova Scotia, to Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, and finally to Portland, ME, on a whirlwind 10-day journey the two jokingly dubbed "John and Ted's Excellent Adventure."

"We both got to live out our dream," said an exhausted but jubilant Black of the trip. "What I learned from this whole thing was that, when you're stuck, don't be afraid to ask for a ride. I've been waiting to be on board a Tall Ship for 25 years, and all I had to do was ask."

True enough, but Black admits that more than a little luck was involved in keeping his dream vacation from becoming a nightmare.

The story begins with Black as an official photographer for SailBoston 2000, taking over 1,000 photos during the day but realizing that such an opportunity comes along perhaps once in a decade. Back in his shop after the day's work,

THE EAGLE, the U.S. Coast Guard's Tall Ship training vessel, was the home for temporary crew members John Black and "Ted" Leutz during their journey from New London, CT, to Halifax, Nova Scotia. For the trip back, the two hitched a ride on a different Tall Ship headed for Portland, ME. "It was a dream come true," said Black.

$33 Million HOPE Funds Not Available Germantown Project Seen Dead

By CRAIG SALTERS

Although there has been no official word, city officials admit there is little chance of success for the Quincy Housing Authority's federal application for $33 million in HOPE VI funds to revitalize the Germantown neighborhood.

"We have not received official notification, but you don't have to go to Harvard University to know how to add," said Jack Mather, executive director of the Quincy Housing Authority, referring to the fact that, through close monitoring on the Internet, the QHA has learned that $513 million of the $515 million available through the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has already been allocated. "About a week ago the first 11 of the (now) 18 award winners were notified, and it appears that 18 is going to be the number."

Mayor James Sheets was in agreement. "It is my understanding that the QHA will not receive the HOPE VI grant," Sheets said. "It's disappointing because a lot of hard work went into putting this application together."

Sheets said a "Community Consultation Meeting" is scheduled for Monday with representatives of HUD, including Community Builder Juan Evertze, and city housing officials. "HOPE VI will absolutely be discussed (along with housing issues in general) and, hopefully, it will provide more information as to why we were not successful," Sheets said. Black received a visit from Leutz who begged, pleaded, and bullied Black to head down to New London for one last look. Black agreed.

The two brought cameras and video equipment down to New London and were able to gain press credentials and access to a chartered media boat covering the event. While on board, Leutz was approached by Lt. Jennifer Hall, chief information officer for the Coast Guard Academy, who asked if the two wanted to sail aboard the Tall Ship training vessel Eagle on its journey to the parade of sail in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Without knowing how they were getting back, Black and Leutz accepted on the spot and soon found themselves taking what would eventually total over 4,000 photographs and over 10 hours of film documenting life aboard both ships.

Black said the Eagle, which trains 125 cadets with a permanent crew of 35, was nothing short of an amazing experience and gave him an even greater respect for the Coast Guard. Said Black:

"It was incredible how they all worked and lived together, under Luke's (Capt. Ivan Luke) command. They take it very seriously and are never anchored unless they absolutely have to. They are in constant sailing mode and, as an American, coming into Canadian shores with Canadian Air Force fly-bys, the people waving to us from the shores, the sights of the other ships ... well, it just made me very aware and proud of being an American."

While in Halifax, the two enjoyed Canadian hospitality and Leutz, a drummer in the Boston Blues scene for over 10 years, met a few friends and was soon up on stage at the local clubs. Black, who said he "used to sing a little," soon joined him, but in the back of their heads the two were still wondering how they could make it back to at least Portland, ME.

Then, as if they hadn't been lucky enough, Black struck up a conversation one day with a crew member of the Sherman Zwicker, a Canadian Tall Ship built in Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, and based in Booth Bay Harbor, ME. "I got word to their captain (Capt. George McEvoy) that my grandfather, Capt. Leslie Black, had lived over 50 years in Booth Bay," Black recalls. "In a few minutes a messenger came back and said, 'The Captain knows your grandfather. Welcome aboard.'"

Aboard the Zwicker, Black and Leutz took what they'd learned aboard the Eagle -- going "up and over" the rigging, walking to accommodate the constant pitch, "monkey's fist" and diamond knots, tacking, and the like -- and put it to good use aboard the Zwicker, even manning watches at the less than typical waking time of 4 a.m. "Everyone was so eager to teach us," said Black. "Once people realized who we were and the type of adventure we were on, they wanted to share as much as they knew."

Aboard the Sherman Zwicker, the two sailed to Lunenburg, Nova Scotia -- enjoying what they said was an almost private parade of sail in the tiny village -- and eventually made it to Portland for Maine's Tall Ships celebration.

"My wife and family came and got me before we sailed for Amsterdam," joked Black.

All told, the two had nothing short of an excellent adventure, crewing two separate Tall Ships and enjoying what both agreed was the best food of their lives for a total food cost of $80.75 each.

And the love of the open sea that was ignited by this spontaneous trip will not soon be forgotten by the two

"UP AND OVER" the rigging was how the U.S. Coast Guard Cadets put it during their training aboard the Eagle. Cadets learned to climb the rigging in sets of three, not two, so as never to lose balance with two legs or two hands at the same time. (Presidential Camera Photo/John Black) accidental sailors. "It still feels like a dream to say 'we did that, we were there,'" said Black. "But, in the year 2002, when the Tall Ships hit the West Coast, the adventures of John and Ted will begin again."

Besides expressing their gratitude for the captain and crew of both vessels as well as Lt. Hall of the Coast Guard for starting their particular odyssey, Black and Leutz wanted it known that there are Tall Ships sailing programs for qualifying high school students from across the nation. Named Captain, Lieutenant QFD Promotions For Peter Williams, John Gillan Swearing-in ceremonies for two promoted officers of the Quincy Fire Department took place Tuesday morning at City Council Chambers.

The officers are: Peter F. Williams, promoted to Fire Captain; and John P. Gillan, promoted to Fire Lieutenant.

"The City of Quincy shares in your joy and the pride and dedication you have shown for this city through the Fire Department over the years," said Mayor James Sheets to the two officers and their friends and family who had gathered for the occasion.

The official oath was administered by City Clerk

Joseph Shea.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman congratulated Williams and Gillan and thanked Sheets for honoring his promise to return the QFD to full strength after the "tough times" of the early 1990's when budget cutbacks and layoffs were necessary. "We're back to where we ought to be," Gorman said.

City Council President Paul Harold called the promotions "well deserved" and said he came not only as a representative of the council but as an honorary member of Local 792, the Quincy Firefighters union.

"The U.S. Department of Labor has labeled 'firefighter' the single most hazardous profession in the United States," Harold told the audience, adding that the council tries to keep that in mind when voting on necessary fire equipment and training.

Gorman said that 15 new firefighters will be appointed within the next two or three weeks after the completion of necessary physicals and strength tests.

According to Gorman, the QFD stands at a total of 215 firefighters with 14 captains and 42 lieutenants.

QMC Physician Named Healthcare Consultant For D.A.R.E. Program

Quincy Medical Center physician Octavio Diaz, MD, chief of the hospital's emergency services, will serve as the physician healthcare consultant for the Norfolk County District Attorney's Drug and Alcohol Resistance Education (D.A.R.E.) summer day camp program at Paget's field in July.

Diaz will ensure that emergency systems are in place for children in the event of injury or illness while attending day camp. Diaz, along with other emergency department personnel, will also host a presentation July 21 for the D.A.R.E. summer camp participants about drug and alcohol abuse prevention.

Norfolk County towns participating include Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Randolph, Holbrook and Avon.

Ward 4 City Councillor Michael D'Amico is in line for appointment to a new part-time post at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office.

Sheriff Michael Bellotti said Tuesday he is in the process of appointing D'Amico as part-time project coordinator of a juvenile safety grant.

The $50,000 Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Grant received from the federal government would allow the Sheriff's

MICHAEL D'AMICO

Office to:

- Participate in a school safety roundtable that meets monthly at Quincy High School.
- Establish a Prevention Policy Board consisting of members from the roundtable.
- Hire a part-time clinician to design a counseling treatment plan for at-risk youth.
- A Sheriff's Office spokesman said D'Amico

Leak Causes Shutdown Of City Hall Elevators

A hydraulic leak in the elevators at City Hall around noon Monday caused strong odors and forced a temporary shutdown while the Quincy Fire Department responded to the situation.

There was no fire, reported Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, and the elevators were repaired almost immediately and are back in service.

ROSE DRISCOLL REMEMBERED: Richard Dengenoter and his wife Barbara, the daughter of Rose Driscoll, share a moment with Mayor James Sheets by Driscoll's monument at the intersection of Furnace Brook Parkway and Adams St. Driscoll, who passed away recently, was recognized Tuesday for 32 years of service as a crossing guard at The Bernazzani School. (Presidential Camera Photo/John Black)

Over 30 Years As School Crossing Guard Rose Driscoll Remembered For Dedication

Quincy's Rose Driscoll was honored posthumously by the city Tuesday for her 32 years of service as a crossing guard for the Bernazzani School.

Driscoll, who retired several years ago, passed away recently.

"She was extremely dedicated," said Mayor James Sheets of Driscoll, adding that she crossed all four of the mayor's children across the busy intersection of Furnace Brook Parkway and Adams St. when they were students at the Bernazzani and, as she lived close by, would often visit the school after her retirement.

Fittingly, the ceremonies took place at the same intersection Driscoll had stood watch over for 32 years, with Driscoll's daughters -- Elaine Cannistraro and Barbara Dengenoter -- and their husbands in attendance.

Roughly 40 people attended the ceremonies including Bernazzani Principal David Hutchinson and former Principal Pat Duvall.

The mayor said he wanted not only to honor Driscoll's memory but also to highlight the dedication of all of Quincy's crossing guards whose job it is, he said, "to be out there, year after year, passing our children safely across the street."

Bush And Adams

Maybe someone should have whispered John Adams' name in Gov. George W. Bush's ear just before he delivered his acceptance speech in Philadelphia the other night.

Especially since the Bush family and the Adams family may be sharing a unique place in American history after the November election.

Bush overlooked Adams when he called for renewing America's purpose and said:

"Our founders first defined that purpose here in Philadelphia (Declaration of Independence). Ben Franklin was here. Thomas Jefferson. And, of course, George Washington -- or, as friends called him, 'George W.'"

That was kind of a cute quip about Washington.

But Washington, commander of the Continental Army, wasn't in Philadelphia for the Declaration of Independence. And wasn't one of the signers.

But Adams was there and quite prominent. Jefferson usually gets top billing as the author of America's birth certificate. But Adams played a major role. As noted author-historian David McCullough puts it, Adams "drove it through Congress."

J. ADAMS

Maybe we're getting a little too provincial about this.

But Bush should keep John Adams and John Quincy Adams in mind. And Abigail, too.

Because if he wins this year's election, he, his father former President George H.W. Bush, John Adams and John Quincy Adams will forever be linked in American history. As will Barbara Bush and Abigail.

George W. and George H.W. would tie John and John Quincy Adams for father-and-son Presidential honors.

And Barbara Bush would join Abigail Adams in the rare distinction of being the wife of one president and the mother of another.

John Adams, second president and John Quincy Adams, sixth president, have thus far been the only father and son presidents in the country's history.

If Bush defeats Al Gore in November he will become the 43rd president. His father was the 41st.

And they will become only the second set of father and son presidents.

But Quincy will still hold the distinct honor of being the birthplace not only of two presidents, but father and son presidents.

Former President Bush was born June 12, 1924 in neighboring Milton (173 Adams St.) but lived there only six months. Son, George W. was born in New Haven, Conn. July 6, 1946. Then the family dug new roots in Texas. The Adams' roots remained deep in Quincy.

The former president, who hasn't paid much attention to his birthplace, was there Aug. 12, 1997 when Milton dedicated a plaque on a granite stone to mark the house as his birthplace.

During his brief visit, Bush toured the 15-room Victorian house with present owners Dean and Nina Graves and looked into the second floor room where he was born.

He later acknowledged to those attending the dedication ceremony he had no real memories of living there. But added with apparent pride and a smile:

"I was potty trained in six months, right here in this house. It's a remarkable historical fact that will live on forever."

Don't know about that.

But if son George W. is elected president the then new historic link between the Adams and Bush families would surely live on in history.

MIKE RIE has left Quincy 2000 where he was Economic Development Coordinator, to return to graduate school.

RIE

He will be entering Columbia University at the end of the month to begin a year's study to earn his master's degree in Real Estate Development.

Rie joined Quincy 2000 in 1993 as an intern and worked his way up to Economic Development Coordinator and a right arm to Executive Director Joseph Mannarino.

"I learned a lot here and got some great experience," he says. "This is a great city. I would like to come back to the area after finishing school."

After receiving his degree in Real Estate Development he says he plans to be involved in the purchasing and developing of land for both commercial and residential projects.

"Something like D.J. MacKinnon," he says.

Great role model, Mike.

Good luck.

FOR THOSE OF you who get The Sun on Wednesday, you still have time to make the summer barbecue fundraiser being held for State Treasurer Shannon O'Brien. It's also at the Gazebo at Adams Inn, North Quincy, 6 to 8 p.m. Suggested contribution: $35 per person, $50 per couple.

MAYBE YOU COULD call it a sweet milestone.

Sean and Debbie Kenealy are parents of their first child, Joseph Michael, born July 15 at South Shore Hospital.

But instead of cigars, proud Pop, who is with Key Realty and is first vice president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, has been handing out chocolate bars.

The wrapper looks like a Hershey bar but instead of Hershey has imprinted in large letters: HEREHEIS. (Here He Is). Joseph Michael Kenealy. Net Wt. 9lbs., 3 oz.

The back of the wrapper has other statistics along with it: Ingredients: Frogs and Snails and Puppy Dog Tails and Mfd. by Sean and Debbie.

The wrappers were a gift from friends in Atlanta, GA.

Sean purchased actual Hershey bars to put in them.

Boston Architects Selected For New YMCA

By PAUL HAROLD

The Boston architectural firm of Cram and Ferguson were selected as the architects for the new YMCA slated for Coddington St.

The nationally prominent firm had designed the New England Life Insurance building at Copley Square and St. John the Divine Church in New York (the second largest Christian church in the world). They also designed the John Hancock building that was under construction in Boston. Wollaston resident Frank Cleveland of Summit Ave. was a member of the firm.

Construction of the new "Y" would not begin until the total $1 million cost was raised. To date there were pledges of $467,000.

ROSS TO RUN AGAIN

Mayor Charles Ross took out nomination papers this week for re-election, making the first candidate in the race.

Potential candidates included councillors at-large Frank Orcutt, Russell Bates and Christian Burkhard as well as Rep. Charles Hedges, William Jenness, former Mayor Thomas Burgin, Myron Lane and former Rep. Arthur Burgess.

CITY BATTLES DUTCH ELM BLIGHT

At the request of the mayor, the city council appropriated $2,500 to combat the Dutch Elm disease in the city.

Earlier in the week a summit meeting on the disease was held at city hall with representatives from the neighboring communities of Milton, Weymouth and Braintree. A plea was made to Governor Bradford for state funds to help in the campaign to shade trees worth millions of dollars.

QUINCY-ISMS

William Edwards of Germantown, father of city historian William Edwards, died this week. He was a direct descendant of one of the city's oldest families, the Bass Family who settled here in 1639. Before his retirement, he was a leather merchant in Boston. He attended Adams Academy.

Five leaders' cabins were dedicated at Camp Massasoit in memory of leaders who died in combat in World War II: Robert Weeden, Charles Perkins, Hazard Robinson, Robert Claussen and Dietrich Rasetzki. Residents at the veterans' housing on Pond St. conducted a major clean-up, constructing a playground for the project's children. Some 600 Quincy youngsters watched the Braves beat the New York Giants 8-7 at Braves Field. The trip was sponsored by the Quincy Amvets, with funds raised from local merchants. Leo Lamb was named by the mayor to head the arrangements committee. Rodger Burgin, former president of the Quincy Savings Bank, was named president of New England Trust. A Dorchester man was robbed of his watch, jack knife and wallet (containing $1.40) while swimming in Lyon's Quarry. Typhoid and polio were feared at Squantum with the eruption of the "grease pot" off Dorchester St. It resembled a small lighthouse, but was actually a vent for the sewerage that was piped from Boston to Moon Island. It had erupted a number of times in June, and again this week with such force that neighbors described the eruption as sounding like thunder. The salary for Quincy City Hospital ambulance driver Arthur Blake was raised from $38-$40 a week. The city council received an order for $165,000 to acquire land for the Houghs Neck fire station. Navy dungarees were on sale for $1.98 at Quincy War Surplus Store, opposite Sears on Hancock St. Emma Tausand hosted a picnic at her Shelton Rd. home for members of the Quincy Business and Professional Women's Club. Atty. Henry Gesmer was elected president of the Jewish Community Center, succeeding Rueben Grossman. Richard Morrissey was dance chairman for the North Quincy High School Class of 1942 reunion. Boats left the public landing in Houghs Neck for a day trip to Nantasket; 75 cents for adults, 50 cents for children. Former Quincy Point resident Henry Shea, an official with the U.S. Maritime Commission, was named head of the Chosen (Korean) Heavy Industries Company in the city of Pusan. The reunion dance for the Holy Name Society of Our Lady of Good Counsel Church was held at the Quincy roller rink, formerly Taylor's Ballroom. Committee members included John O'Hara, James Flavin, Anthony Dwyer and Francis McGinty.

A Plea For A Skate Park

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
Once again, here it is mid-summer and there is still no skate park in Quincy.

There would be one that my kids and many others would be skating at. The site at the Munroe Playground was dug up and would be complete by now, but work on the park had to stop. Why? Because William Aylward of the Black's Creek Newsletter filed a petition against the skate park being built at Munroe Playground.

Mr. Aylward feels that a skate park there, so close to Town Brook, is conversationally and environmentally hazardous. He feels that the Park Dept. did not explore the possibility of putting the skate park at one of the many other parks in the City of Quincy.

Of course, the Park Dept. says they did look at all the park properties and felt that Munroe Playground was the best place. I don't know about the environmental issues, but I think Munroe Playground is a great spot for the skate park. For one thing, there's room for it and there is parking available. Also, it is centrally located so that kids from all parts of Quincy can use the MBTA to get to the park. There are stores nearby so kids can get food or drinks and it's in a nice open space so it is easy to drive by and see what's going on. Mr. Aylward feels a skate park doesn't belong at Munroe Playground and, because of Town Brook, it should be left as a natural habitat. Why, then, do the baseball fields, basketball court, and tennis court belong there?

Mr. Aylward went to the City of Quincy Conservation Committee and asked them to deny this project from being built. They saw no reason to deny it and they approved the project. Now he has appealed to the state to ask them to deny the project from being built. He has also stated that, if the state DEP approves the project, he will appeal it further. Of course, it is also possible the state will deny the project, in which case the Park Dept. may appeal the decision. But either way, this delays our kids from having a skate park to use.

I am appealing to Mr. Aylward that, if the state also approves the skate park site, won't he please consider that he is wrong and to stop appealing this project until he finds someone to agree with him. Because, if he does continue with his appeals, he is hurting the kids of Quincy who only want a place to skate.

A Plea To Asian Residents

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
To those who are involved in making their communities better, we are grateful for your efforts and appreciate them.

To those who aren't, please get involved. If you want your neighborhood to be or continue to be safe; if you want your schools to be or continue to be highly regarded places of learning; if you want your streets to be or continue to be clean, participate. If you need something done, you must raise your voice and let it be heard, but also give a helping hand. Don't depend on others to do everything. Clean streets, good schools, safe neighborhoods, etc., are the results of people's activism and hard work.

We Asians have been stereotyped as being quiet and docile, saying "yes" and obeying whatever comes our way and, to a degree, it's true. If you have the desire to change this image, make yourselves heard, seen ... participate. Vote: find out about local issues; join food drives; support local businesses; be an ESL tutor; do public service. There are so many opportunities out there.

In general, we are hard workers. Let's also be "community-caregivers."

Chris Peter Blood Drive A Success

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
The Peter family would like to thank everyone who helped make the 16th Chris Peter Blood Drive a success.

Although Mother Nature did not cooperate, bringing us torrential rain a short power outage the donors still came. Our average total for a blood drive is 105 pints of blood; this year we collected 107.

The people most responsible for our success are the wonderful donors. Without them there would be no blood drive.

In closing, thank you all again, and we hope to see you next year.

Yard Rock Show On Road To Cohasset Music Circus

Yard Rock, the popular Quincy Point modern music club, is taking the show on the road for the first time with a performance Tuesday, Aug. 15 at 7:30 p.m. at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset.

Headlining the show will be Mighty Sam McClain, straight from the B. B. King Blues Club & Grill in Manhattan, and his special guest, Toni Lynn Washington, two of the premier blues artists in New England.

Also on the bill are The Love Dogs, a blues and swing group, and Steve Murphy & the Yard Rockers with their special guest, Rick "King" Russell.

There are many people who love this style of music but don't get out to the club," said Yard Rock entrepreneur Joe Hajjar. "This is a perfect chance to see some great performers at one of the best venues in New England."

The South Shore Music Circus is an outdoor theater in the round under a tent that brings some of the country's best known musical groups and individuals to Cohasset in the summer.

Tickets at $25 for the Yard Rock concert are available by calling the South Shore Music Circus at 781-383-1400 between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. or visiting the box office in Cohasset from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

'Skyline Cabaret' Dinner Theater Tonight At Raffael's

Skyline Cabaret: An Evening With Boston's Brightest Cabaret Stars takes place tonight (Thursday) at the Skyline Room at Raffael's, 1 Enterprise Drive, North Quincy.

Other performances of the dinner theater show are scheduled for Aug. 23 and 25 with a noon matinee also scheduled for the Aug. 23 date. Dinner for the evening shows begins at 6:30 p.m.

Skyline Cabaret is a revue of Broadway, jazz, popular, and contemporary songs and offers an atmosphere reminiscent of the "supper clubs" of the past. The show features Ida Zecco, Sarah deLima, Jan Peters, and Carol O'Shaughnessy, four professional cabaret singers who have performed both nationally and internationally.

Ticket prices for all evening performances are $40 per person and the matinee performance is $30 per person. To purchase tickets by phone, call Raffael's during normal business hours at (617) 328-1600. For more information on the show, call Quincy-based JM Productions at (617) 786-7469.

Two Quincy Residents Selected To MDC All-Star Band

The Metropolitan District Commission has selected Quincy residents Diana Ainsley and Elizabeth Bondaryk to participate in the MDC All-Star Band for the 2000 summer season.

The All-Star Marching Band is comprised of 33 of the best and brightest high school musicians from the Greater Boston area.

Diana, a trumpet player returning for her second year with the band, is a student at North Quincy High School. Elizabeth attends Milton Academy, where she is a member of the track and field and swimming teams as well as the speech team. This is her first season with the MDC Band playing piccolo. She also plays the piano and flute.

Joseph M. Brogan, music director for the Town of Dedham Schools, is an accomplished musician. He joins the MDC for his sixth season as band director and has selected some popular songs for the band's 2000 program: "I Dream A Dream" from Les Miserable, Paul Simon's "You Can Call Me Al," and "Jump, Jive and Wail" by the Brian Setzer Orchestra.

The Installation Dinner, the club's 60th, was held recently at the Neighborhood Club. Dr. Will, who handled the installation of new officers, is himself a Past King Lion from 1967-1968.

Quincy Lions Club Installs New Officers

The new officers are: Thomas Zukauskas, president; John Pickering, 1st vice-president; Christine Cedrone, 2nd vice-president; Michelle Lydon, 3rd vice-president; David Sawyer, treasurer; Helen Garvey, secretary; Frank McCauley, tail twister; and Ailina McNamara, lion tamer.

Zukauskas takes over the duties as King Lion from Greg Glennon, who served as King Lion from 1999 to 2000.

Beginning their two-years terms on the board of directors are: Youssef Abdouh, Steven Mansfield, Mary Mathias, Loretta Oliva, and Cindy Watson.

RICHARD HOYT (left), member of the famous father-son wheelchair marathon team and keynote speaker for the Lions Club Installation Dinner, receives a token of thanks from Master of Ceremonies and Past King Lion Thomas Williams.

The Lions also welcomed new member Bruce Knapp.

The installations were conducted by Past King

Lion Dr. James Will.

Richard Hoyt, who with his son Rick forms the noted father-son wheelchair marathon team, was keynote speaker for the event and Past King Lion Thomas Williams was master of ceremonies.

Lion of the Year honors went to John Reed, who was honored for his service as a Past King Lion and for his years of dedication to the organization.

Annalee Collins Receives Award For Teaching Excellence At Northeastern

Annalee Collins of Chickatabot Rd., Merrymount, received a Faculty Award for Teaching Excellence in the Health Professions and Sciences Program at Northeastern University's part-time division, University College.

Collins, who has been teaching Health Information Administration at Northeastern for the past 27 years, was nominated for the award by her students. As one student stated, "Annalee makes class enjoyable by treating us like equals not

Recycling Commission Urges: 'Don't Trash The Grass'

By SALLY OWEN

The Recycling Commission announces a new campaign to promote yard waste recycling.

"We are asking residents to try leaving grass clippings on their lawns, using them as mulch in their gardens or adding them to their compost bins or piles," said Michael Hurley, commission chairman. "We are also urging people to try composting their other yard waste or using it as mulch around bushes and plants."

"Leaving grass clippings on your lawn is less work, creates a natural fertilizer for your grass as the clippings decompose and saves you the cost of buying fertilizer and trash bags," said Joan Pierce, botanist and Recycling Commission member. "Since the organic matter in the clippings helps retain moisture, you will also need to water less frequently."

The state has recently begun enforcing its ban on yard waste in landfills and incinerators.

"Although the ban seems to impose a new burden on the citizens throughout the Commonwealth, we should work together to figure out positive ways to deal with the situation," said Claire Silverman, commission member.

The Recycling Commission has consulted with yard care experts in Quincy for advice (see related article on this page).

"The commission would love to hear from residents who have ideas they would like to share about ways to recycle yard waste," said Hurley. "We are also hoping to sponsor a garden tour next year of some Quincy yards that demonstrate yard waste recycling."

Residents with ideas or yards they would like to open up for a tour are invited to write to: Quincy Recycling Commission, c/o Department of Public Works, 55 Sea St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Residents may obtain a free pamphlet with grass recycling tips, "Don't Trash the Grass," from any of the branches of the Thomas Crane Public Library or from the Department of Public Works, 55 Sea St.

To learn more about grass recycling and composting, residents may also borrow two videos, "Don't Trash the Grass" and "Turning Your Spoils to Soil" from the library.

These videos will be shown as a double feature on Quincy Access television Channel 8 tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m., Aug. 12 and 13 at 12 noon and 6 p.m. and Aug. 15 at 6:30 p.m.

Compost bins may be obtained from the Department of Public Works for $22, roughly one-third of the cost of bins purchased commercially. The bins come with directions on composting.

Before the recent enforcement by the state of the ban on yard waste going to landfills and incinerators, Quincy collected and composted the yard waste residents paper bags and open barrels, four weeks in the spring and six weeks in the fall. The compost is used on city ball fields. Yard waste put in plastic bags or collected at other times of the year was sent with the rest of Quincy's non-recycled trash to the incinerator in Rochester, Mass.

Since the state's enforcement of the ban, the Department of Public Works has added an additional monthly collection of yard waste. The next collections are the weeks beginning Aug. 28 and Sept. 25. Yard waste left in open barrels or paper bags will be collected on residents' regular trash days those weeks.

Beginning Oct. 30, there will be six consecutive weeks of yard waste collection on residents' regular trash days. Residents may also bring yard waste to the DPW composting facility at 55 Sea St. from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Saturday. No tree limbs larger than six inches in diameter or root bulbs are accepted.

Although Quincy is recycling more tons of trash than in the past, the tonnage of trash that Quincy incinerates is also increasing.

"As a result of the ban, all of Quincy's yard waste will now be composted in our city, returning valuable nutrients to our soil and saving scarce and costly incinerator capacity for trash that cannot be composted," said Jean Mackey, commission member.

Recycling Tips

The Recycling Commission has asked several Quincy experts on lawn and yard care for ideas on recycling yard waste.

Cynthia Antonopoulos, president of the Wollaston Garden Club:

"I promote using a mulching blade on your lawnmower. You can buy blades to fit your lawnmower at Home Depot or hardware stores. Remove the old blade and the bag from your lawnmower, install the new blade and leave the clippings on your lawn. You will provide vital nutrients to your grass, need less fertilizer and improve the quality of your lawn."

Sally Erickson, past president of Seaside Gardeners and board member of the Mass. Federation of Garden Clubs:

"I use grass clippings as mulch in my vegetable garden and around my trees and bushes to hold down weeds and provide nutrients for the soil. People with lots of bushes and small trees might consider buying or borrowing a shredder. You can shred small tree limbs and bushes and use the mulch around bushes and plants. Rather than rake all your leaves in the fall, try mowing them. It's good for the grass. You can also use mowed leaves as mulch around plants and bushes. When you put yard waste in the trash, you are throwing away some good mulch and fertilizer."

Carol Haglund, groundskeeper at Eventide Home:

"I compost all our grass, leaves and other yard waste and use it around flower beds. What some people call yard waste, I call 'black gold.' People don't realize how valuable the nutrients in yard waste are."

Jeff Houde, superintendent at Furnace Brook Golf Club:

"We use a mulching mower on the rough at our course and leave the grass clippings on the grass. If you use a mulching mower, you can actually incorporate valuable nutrients into the soil and reduce the use of fertilizer."

Thomas Koch, director of the Quincy Park Department:

"Our crew achieves excellent results on our ballfields by leaving the clipped grass on the fields. We use no pesticides (in order to provide maximum safety to our children) on the fields and only organic fertilizer. One of the most important factors in the quality of our grass is the use of compost we obtain from the Department of Public Works. I would urge residents to create their own compost from the leaves, yard and food waste they have at home. It makes a wonderful free organic fertilizer for your yard."

At National Night Out

Accent On Children's Identification, Safety

By ANNIE BERGEN

Quincy's second annual National Night Out was more of a National Night "In" but the accent was still on child identification and crime prevention.

The event was moved from Veterans' Memorial Stadium to the Quincy Vocational Technical gymnasium due to inclement weather, forcing Quincy police officers and numerous volunteers to fill the gym in an effort to entertain as well as educate.

The Quincy celebration was one of many held across the nation with goals similar to what Crime Prevention Officer Robert Hanna described as an effort to "bring the community together to fight crime."

Children roamed the gym floor, stocking up on crime-busting tools that included fingerprints, teeth prints, and, yes, even paw prints, as the evening also celebrated the twentieth birthday of McGruff the Crime Dog. McGruff was praised for his 20 years of dedication to crime prevention awareness and was treated to birthday cake and a stirring rendition of "Happy Birthday."

The National Night Out celebration, said Mayor James Sheets, confirmed his belief that the QPD does

"far beyond what is expected of them."

One important goal of the night was to strengthen the relationship between the police and the community they protect. Police officers and citizen volunteers chatted with youngsters in between pony rides and moonwalks. In addition to learning safety and health tips, children and their families took part in a petting zoo and marveled at a magician's sleight of hand.

"It's a good level for kids to see police," said Charlene McDonald, president of the Quincy Citizens Police Academy Alumni Association (QCPAAA).

Quincy elementary student Robby Lawson declared "the camera thing" -- a section of the gym where children could receive videotaped interviews of themselves -- to be his best memory of the evening, adding that, according to his sister, the fingerprinting was the most fun event.

The Child Identification Program (CHIP) was conducted by members of the Masonic Lodges in the Boston 4th and Quincy 26th Masonic Districts in cooperation with the Massachusetts Dental Society, the Quincy Police Department, and the Quincy Citizens Police Academy. It is estimated that more than 60,000 children have already participated in the Masonic program throughout Massachusetts.

The toothprint impression is a relatively new means of identification where the child bites down on a wafer, making a permanent, archivable record of their teeth. Toothprints were developed by Dr. David Tesini of Framingham, a pediatric dentist who developed toothprints as another means of identifying a child that fingerprints along may not guarantee.

According to the FBI's Peter Banks and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, when a toothprint is taken, sufficient proteins remain in the saliva on the wafer from which a DNA test can successfully be performed for yet a second means of identification.

He also stated that, since the toothprint is sealed in a "zipper-style" plastic bag, enough scent remains for a trained dog to identify and track it.

Masonic Child Identification programs are held periodically throughout Massachusetts and may be sponsored by local Masonic Lodges as part of their community service programs. Many school officials have requested that the program be brought into the school systems in their municipalities.

D'Amico To Get Sheriff's Office Youth Project Post

would work approximately 20 hours a week at $20 per hour which would be $400.

He said the $50,000 grant would have to be matched in-kind by the Sheriff's Office.

D'Amico's appointment is subject to approval by the Norfolk County Commissioners who were scheduled to meet Wednesday.

The purpose of the school roundtable is to share information and recommend interventions to assist troubled students and to preserve school safety.

The roundtable currently consists of 20 representatives of the Quincy community including the Department of Youth Services, The District Attorney's Office, Quincy Probation Department, Quincy Police Department, and the Quincy Public Schools.

D'Amico is a former member of the Massachusetts Juvenile Justice Advisory Committee to which he was appointed by former Gov. William Weld in 1991.

From then to 1996, he assisted the committee in seeing that juvenile justice agencies and lock-up facilities complied with the major mandates of the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act.

As part-time project coordinator, D'Amico will be charged with the responsibility of collecting juvenile justice data for presentation to the new Policy Prevention Board.

Project Bread Fundraiser Sept. 17 Six Local Food Programs To Benefit From 'Ride For Hunger'

Six local food programs will benefit from Project Bread's Tour de Boston -- The Ride for Hunger, on Sunday, Sept. 17 through the neighborhoods of Boston and beyond.

The one-day bike-a-thon begins and ends at the Boston Common and will raise funds for food pantries, soup kitchens, food banks and food salvage programs throughout the state.

Quincy-based Project Bread supported agencies that will benefit from the fundraiser are:

Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion (Quincy Crisis Center); Interfaith Social Services, Inc. (Pantry Shelf); Quincy Community Action Programs, Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition (Father Bill's Place), Salvation Army/Quincy Temple Corps and Seaside

Advocacy Group.

The Ride for Hunger offers two routes to help the hungry on Sunday, Sept. 17. The In-City Route (40K) begins at 9 a.m. on the Boston Common and winds Beacon Hill, Back Bay, Allston, Jamaica Pond, Arnold Arboretum, Franklin Park, South Boston's Waterfront and the Financial District.

For riders interested in a greater challenge, the Tour Route (100K) offers a long ride through Boston's neighborhoods and the scenic countryside west of the city. The Tour Route begins at 8 a.m. After the ride, all cyclists will enjoy a finish line celebration with refreshments, entertainment and prizes.

Project Bread is a non-profit community organization devoted to alleviating, preventing and ending hunger in Massachusetts. With deep roots in the community and more than three decades of commitment to and caring for the hungry, Project Bread strives to meet the needs of those who struggle each day to put food on the table.

Leadership sponsors for the Ride of Hunger are International Bicycle Centers and Kryptonite Corporation. For more information about the Ride for Hunger, contact Project Bread at 617-723-5000 or www.projectbread.org.

Bright Horizons Fair Benefits Cystic Fibrosis

For the second year in a row, cystic fibrosis will be the beneficiary of a raffle at the annual Summer Fair of the Bright Horizons Family Solutions at 2100 Crown Colony Park.

Bright Horizons is a child day care center in the West Quincy office park. The fair will take place Thursday, Aug. 24, from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. Admission is $10 per family.

Stacy Tyler of Bright Horizons said cystic fibrosis was chosen to receive the benefits of the raffle because one of the youngsters who has attended the center for the past two or three years has the disease.

The fair will include pony rides, a moonwalk, a dunk tank, mini golf, face painting, games, popcorn and a hot dog dinner.

REAL ESTATE

Preapproved Buyers Are Preferred Buyers

When you begin looking for a house, you need to know how much you can afford to pay. You can obtain prequalification, or you can take the process one step further by getting preapproved.

Prequalification is not a commitment by a lender to lend you money; it's merely an indication of how much you can afford. A prequalification includes an analysis of your income, monthly debt, employment and available cash down to determine the best loan for you and the amount you might qualify for.

The preapproval process is more advanced. When you are preapproved, you actually have a lender's written commitment to grant a loan once certain conditions have been met. You must obtain a purchase contract to receive the money, as well as a satisfactory appraisal and a clear title report.

You can get preapproved even before you begin the house-hunting process. In some cases, the mortgage broker will honor the commitment for up to three months.

Home sellers prefer buyers who are preapproved because they don't have to wait to see if the prospect receives the loan. If a seller receives offers from two different people, the seller may give stronger consideration to the offer from the preapproved prospect — you.

First Time Homebuyer Workshop At City Hall

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., is sponsoring a First Time Homebuyer Workshop open to anyone interested in purchasing their first home.

The three-part workshop is scheduled for Sept. 5, 7, and 12 from 6 p.m. to 8:45 p.m. at the second floor conference room of Quincy City Hall.

"This September event will be the kickoff to a monthly schedule of educational classes which QCAP will host for would-be homebuyers in Quincy and surrounding communities," said Housing Program Director Trish Appert.

A variety of homebuying professionals will present a range of topics to workshop participants. Topics discussed at QCAP's workshop will include: how to choose a mortgage program that is right for you; how much of a mortgage you qualify for; strategies for working with a real estate agent; how to submit an offer and signing a purchase and sales agreement; how to obtain a home inspection; and what to expect at the closing.

A $30 per-household workshop registration fee covers all three nights and course materials.

QCAP is a certified U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and Massachusetts Housing Finance Agency (MHFA)

Housing Counseling Agency as well as an Executive Office of Elder Affairs (EOEA) approved Home Equity Conversion Mortgage Counseling Agency. Conway Commercial Lease Crown Colony Office Space

Conway Commercial recently negotiated the lease of office space at the Crown Colony complex in Quincy.

George Jamieson of Conway Commercial represented the tenant, Mainsoft Corporation of San Jose, Calif. in the lease of 3,739 square feet of office space at 300 Crown Colony Drive. John Miller of Lincoln Property Company represented the landlord, Three Hundred Crown Colony Inc.

Jamieson said Mainsoft, a computer software company, develops and markets a Windows cross-platform of UNIX systems. MainWin, its flagship product, is sold to Fortune 1000 companies, software developers, government agencies and other users. Mainsoft was established in 1991 and is a privately held firm.

The company recently inked a strategic investment agreement with the Formula Group, a leading international Information Technology software company, Jamieson said. The firm, which has offices in Atlanta, Austin, Washington and London, is now building its Boston-based marketing and sales organization.

Conway Commercial is a division of Norwell-based Jack Conway and Company. Founded in 1957, the company is the largest independently owned real estate firm in Massachusetts, with more than 600 agents in 36 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

Judge Coven Named Presiding Justice At Quincy Court

good leader and a good manager of people in a particular courthouse are sometimes different from the qualities needed to be a good judge. It is important that a First Justice have all these skills."

The First Justice's term is five years, subject to renewal, and the appointment is subject to the approval of Judge Barbara A. Dortch-Okara, Chief Justice for Administration and Management of the Trial Court. Chief Justice Zoll has designated Judge Coven as Acting Presiding Justice until he takes the oath of office.

A resident of Brookline,

Judge Coven received his B.A. degree from Union College, Schenectady, NY, in 1972 and his law degree from Boston University School of Law in 1975. After serving as Law Clerk to Hon. William A. Grimes of the Supreme Court of New Hampshire, he was Chief Legislative Assistant to U.S. Senator John A. Durkin. Thereafter he worked as an attorney for the elderly with Western Massachusetts Legal Services and Greater Boston Elderly Legal Services.

He was Assistant Secretary for Health and Welfare from 1983 to 1987, after which he served as Chief of the Consumer Protection Division of the Massachusetts Attorney General's office and then Deputy Attorney General for Policy. In 1989 Governor Michael S. Dukakis appointed him Associate Justice of the Somerville District Court.

Judge Coven has written and lectured extensively on such topics as Massachusetts civil trial and appellate procedure, domestic violence proceedings, public employment and the First Amendment, and social welfare litigation and programs. He has taught for a number of organizations, among them the Trial Court's Judicial Institute, the Flasher Judicial Institute, the Massachusetts Bar Association, and Massachusetts Continuing Legal Education, Inc. He has also been active on moot court programs in area law schools.

Judge Coven has served on several boards of directors and is a member of the Board of Overseers of the Heller School for Advanced Studies in Social Welfare, Brandeis University. He was also chair of the Trial Court's Committee to Examine District Court Jurisdictional Lines as well as chair of the District Court Sitting Committee for the Juvenile Court Department. He is a member of the District Court Committee on Continuing Education as well as the Supreme Judicial Court's Judicial Education Policy Board. He is on the Board of Directors of the Massachusetts Judges Conference.

"In the course of considering this appointment," said Chief Justice Zoll, "I visited the Quincy District Court and met with people from the justice community, along with many court personnel. I listened to their views with regard to the needs of the court. The Quincy District Court impacts many people, in many different ways, every day. The court is highly regarded for the quality of service that it provides to the community. Judge Coven knows that community well, having sat in the court on a continuing basis for the past three years.

"The Quincy District Court has an outstanding, dedicated staff of clerks, probation officers, and support personnel. All of them, and the community at large, will benefit from Judge Coven's enlightened leadership."

"I am pleased to be able to appoint one of the Commonwealth's best judicial public servants to this important post."

Cronin Endorsed By Women's Political Caucus

Mary Ellen Cronin, Quincy Democrat, has been endorsed by the Massachusetts Women's Political Caucus-Political Action Committee for Norfolk County Register of Deeds.

"Mary Ellen is an experienced and respected member of the Conveyancing bar," said MWPC president Susan Webber.

She said Cronin's experience makes her the best qualified candidate.

"She has a broad knowledge of and familiarity with real estate issues and the Registry of Deeds," Webber said.

Webber cited Cronin's managerial experience and legal knowledge of real estate, which she said includes over 19 years activity at the Norfolk County Registry and 11 years in the administration of her family law firm.

Cronin is vice chairwoman of the Quincy Zoning Board of Appeals, secretary of the Ward 3 Democratic Committee, a member of the City Democratic Committee, and has been a delegate to Democratic state conventions.

She is a member of the Norfolk County Bar Association, the Massachusetts Conveyancers Association, the Massachusetts Association of Bank Counsel, the Massachusetts Bar Association and the South Shore Chamber of Commerce.

Quincy Medical Center Opens Pain Center

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) President and CEO Christine Schuster announces that comprehensive and coordinated pain management services are now available at QMC.

The new services, to be provided by physicians and anesthesiologists associated with Boston Medical Center (BMC), are the latest in a long line of benefits to which Quincy area residents now have access as a result of QMC's affiliation with BMC.

QCAP Free GED Classes

Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) is offering free basic reading and GED preparation classes starting in the fall in Quincy and Weymouth.

Classes will begin in September, meeting two days each week, with evening classes in Quincy and day classes in Weymouth. Orientations begin in August.

For more information, contact Susan Hearn at the QCAP office, (617) 471-0796, ext. 112.

"Our multidisciplinary pain program brings to Quincy-area patients acute and chronic pain specialists who until now could be found only in Boston and other major urban centers," said Schuster.

"This program offers comprehensive, one-stop medical, physical and interventional strategies to address the pain management issues of this most challenging patient population. We are delighted to be able to offer this enhanced capability to our patients in Quincy and surrounding communities."

The team of doctors will evaluate patients and determine an individualized treatment plan. James Otis, M.D., director of the Neurology Pain Service at BMC and an associate professor of neurology at Boston University School of Medicine, will be on site at QMC weekly to treat patients who have pain associated with neurological conditions, such as migraine headaches.

Dr. Otis will be joined by Daniel Carney, O. D., an attending physician in the Department of Rehabilitation Medicine at BMC and a clinical assistant professor at the Boston University School of Medicine. Dr. Carney specializes in musculo-skeletal pain syndromes.

Quincy Medical Center's Pain Clinic will also offer the services of Anesthesia Associates of Massachusetts, who provide anesthesia for surgical services at both Quincy Medical Center and Boston Medical Center.

The anesthesiologists will administer pharmaceutical agents on site to provide pain relief for patients suffering from sciatica post-back surgery pain, other degenerative diseases causing spinal stenosis, cervical pain syndrome, neuropathy and other conditions which create acute and chronic pain.

Appointments for the Multidisciplinary Pain Clinic can be made by calling 376-5557

SUMMER CAR CARE

Hot Tips To Keep Your AC Cool This Summer

In the heat of summer, there is never a good time for your car's air conditioner to stop cooling. It can ruin a great vacation and is especially important when traveling with elderly or very young passengers. Here are a few tips to make sure that your car's air conditioning will not cause you discomfort this summer.

First, it is important to understand how air conditioning works. Your car's system works in the same manner as your home's refrigerator and air conditioning system. Basically, refrigerant is pumped through the system by a compressor and reduced to a low pressure and temperature inside the passenger compartment. Then the refrigerant is squeezed to a high pressure and temperature outside under the hood. Inside the car, the "blower" or fan forces air over the cold part of the system and heat from the air is transferred to the refrigerant. Moisture is also removed from the air as it clings to the cold cooling surfaces and discharged outside through a drain tube. Under the hood, air is also forced over the hot part of the system by the cooling fan (in some cases, the same one that cools the radiator) and heat is transferred out of the refrigerant into the atmosphere. The refrigeration cycle is repeated over and over.

How well the system cools your car depends on the efficiency of the above components and also on having the right amount of refrigerant in the system. Maintaining your air conditioner actually begins by careful attention to the engine's cooling system. If the engine is running hotter than normal, or if the cooling fan is turning too slowly, it will be harder for the refrigerant to give up its heat under the hood, resulting in poor cooling inside the car. If the belt that drives the compressor slips or breaks, the refrigerant cannot be pumped through the system properly. Inside the car, a poorly functioning blower or blocked air-conditioning outlets will decrease cooling efficiency.

This leads to the refrigerant itself. Too much or too little in the system will result in poor cooling because the pressures and temperatures will not be correct for good heat transfer. But there are problems other than refrigerant level that can cause system pressures and temperatures to go haywire, so it is dangerous to just have refrigerant added to a poorly cooling system. Overcharging could actually decrease the cooling efficiency even more and could also cause major damage. It is best to have the refrigerant level professionally checked and adjusted, if necessary, using only the type of refrigerant designed for your car's system.

Contrary to popular belief, there is no such thing as a normal refrigerant leak. If the system requires periodic recharging or "topping off," there is a leak that needs repair.

To keep your air-conditioning working at its best:

- Have the engine cooling system maintained and inspected regularly
- Have drive belts inspected and adjusted
- Watch for cold steam from air-conditioning outlets. This may indicate low refrigerant.

- Check for good airflow at the air-conditioning outlets.

- Refer all air-conditioning system service to qualified personnel

However, you should NOT:

- Have a leaking air-conditioning system recharged or "topped off."

- Try to add refrigerant yourself.

- Attempt to open or disconnect air-conditioning hoses or lines. Serious frostbite or eye injury can result from escaping refrigerant and oil. Discharging refrigerant into the atmosphere is illegal in the United States.

Newsletter Focuses On Driver Safety Awareness

The Shell Oil Company recently announced an alliance with MapQuest.com, Inc., a leading provider of online, voice and wireless mapping, directions and destination information solutions, to raise driver safety awareness among MapQuest's electronic newsletter subscribers.

The newsletter will include safety tips from the "Count On Shell" driver-awareness campaign beginning in the July issue of its newsletter.

MapQuest.com, which distributes the bimonthly electronic newsletter to more than 1 million subscribers, will provide information from Shell's safety booklets in a new column each month on road safety. Each MapQuest road safety column will feature a question such as: "How do you handle a tire blowout?" Readers will find a link following the question to the MapQuest website, where they will receive a detailed answer to the road safety question from a Count On Shell booklet.

The current booklets are entitled: "Driving Dangers," "Kids In The Car," "Crash Course," "Alone Behind The Wheel," "Breakdown," and "Sharing The Road." They offer life-saving tips on how to handle dangerous driving situations; how to keep young passengers safe; what to do when an accident occurs; how to keep safe while driving alone; what to do if an unexpected car breakdown occurs; and how to drive safely around trucks, buses and other vehicles.

The newsletters are distributed to subscribers via e-mail on the second and fourth Tuesday of every month. In addition to the biweekly posting, MapQuest is also looking to archive the safety tips so readers can refer to them at any time. MapQuest is a member of America Online's Interactive Properties Group.

The Count On Shell safety booklets can be found at more than 9,000 Shell stations in 39 states.

Granite Blank Maine, 27-0

By CHRIS POISSON

The Quincy Granite has reached the middle of their season and one thing is for certain — they belong in the Eastern Football League.

From the fourth quarter comeback against the Mass Havoc to the spankings of Hyannis and Charlestown on the road, Quincy continues to surprise its opponents each week.

Saturday night, Quincy was missing around 15 players due to a late schedule change, leading the Maine Pride to believe it held an advantage. It turned out the only advantage Maine had was that it didn't have to make a 2 1/2 hour trip home.

The short-handed Granite (4-1) took the pride out of the Pride (2-2), stunning them with a 27-0 road victory for their fourth straight win. After a bye this week, Quincy will wrestle Maine Aug. 19 in a return match at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Although the offense put 27 points on the board, the story was the defense which turned in another dominating performance. After five games, it's clear the Granite defense is one of the premier units in the league. How else do you explain the 7.2 points per game, two shutouts and 11 interceptions?

"The defense was awesome," said coach Ken McPhee. "It was just an outstanding defensive job by coaches Tony Green, John Sarinidias and Mark Bolster. We weren't sure how good the defense was going to be this year. But they've only given up 36 points. They're pretty stingy."

Standout linebacker Ryan Craig, nicknamed the "Hammer" by his teammates, highlighted the defense, picking off two passes and returning one 47 yards for a touchdown, which was the nail in the coffin.

Cornerback Troy Parks received praise from McPhee as he continues his strong play in the secondary.

"They don't complete many passes on him,"

McPhee said. "He's the best corner in the league. He's a Ronnie Lott type of hitter. He kills people."

Quincy set the tone early, real early, when Mike Thomas hit wideout Bill MacDougall for a 53-yard touchdown on the first play of the game. The extra point was no good.

"We shocked them," said offensive lineman and co-founder Dave Harris. "It took a little bit out of them. It's definitely a plus to get up on a team early."

"With Mike Thomas with have big-strike potential," McPhee said. "We thought we could get it and we did."

Later in the first quarter, Thomas connected with tailback Jackson Vetiack for a 55-yard screen pass which set up Vetiack's four-yard TD run. Wideout Bo Garcia caught the two-point conversion for a 14-0 lead. Vetiack carried much of the load in the backfield, finishing well over 100 yards on the ground.

"The running game really improved," McPhee said. "It was nice to see us move the ball up an down the field."

Craig's touchdown at the end of the half put the Granite up 20-0. In the fourth quarter, wideout Derrick Epps replaced Thomas at quarterback and he closed out the scoring with a 60-yard bomb to Garcia.

EFL Honors Thomas

Thomas earned Eastern Conference Offensive Player of the Week honors for Week 4 (July 30) after his performance in the Granite's 27-0 win over the Charlestown Townies.

Thomas tossed four touchdown passes and threw for over 200 yards with no interceptions. He also rushed for a team-high 30 yards.

Joe Glover Returns

Offensive lineman Joe Glover returned from injury to play his first game of the season. Glover had been out with a dislocated elbow he suffered in a softball game before the start of the season.

Quincy High School Student Project Benefits Happy Acres

Quincy High School students donated funds raised through their class project to purchase a portable basketball backboard for the special needs participants enrolled in the Happy Acres Summer Program.

The students in Ms. Maureen O'Brien's 11th grade English classes wrote and published "Reflections," a book of writings that share in words and pictures the feelings of students. The book was published by graphic art students in Mr. Michael Looney's class, and photography was contributed by Ms. Janet Meade's students.

The donation was made by the students from proceeds of the sale of the book to family, students and friends of the Quincy High School community.

Recreation Director Barry Welch accepted the donation from Andrea Verlicco, Christina

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL students from Ms. Maureen O'Brien's 11th grade English class present a donation that was used to purchase a portable basketball backboard for the special needs participants at Happy Acres Recreation Program. From the left are Recreation Director Barry Welch, Meghan Connolly, Christina Keenhan, Andrea Verlicco and Ms. O'Brien.

Keenhan and Meghan Connolly, who represented their classmates.

"This donation will provide hours of enjoyable activity for these most deserving of participants," Welch said. "The young authors and teachers at Quincy High School are to be commended and congratulated for both 'Reflections' and their gift to our participants."

Welch noted that the gift was initiated by the students, who had previously volunteered to work in the summer Special Needs Program. Happy Acres provides recreational activities for special needs participants who attend the public schools in Quincy.

Happy Acres Program is supervised by supervised by the Quincy Recreation Department and is held during July and August at Pagcant Field in Merrymount Park.

NQ Apaches Seek Coaches

The North Quincy Apaches of the Quincy Youth Football League are looking for coaches for the upcoming season.

The Apaches are seeking coaches with playing experience at the high school level, 21 or older, who can volunteer to help teach young players the basics of football.

Practices are three days a week in the late afternoons. Games are Saturday mornings or Sunday afternoons, and the season lasts from August through early November.

If interested, call Doug Henderson at 847-1846.

Physicals For QHS Athletes Aug. 17

Physicals for interested athletes at Quincy High School will be held Thursday, Aug. 17 from 8:30 a.m. to 12 p.m. at the QHS Nurse's Office.

NQHS Physicals Aug. 21, 24

Physicals for interested athletes at North Quincy High School will be held Monday, Aug. 21 and Thursday, Aug. 24 from 8:30 a.m. to 12 p.m. at the NQHS Nurse's Office.

Volleyball Challenge At Wollaston Beach Saturday

The third annual Wollaston Beach Volleyball Challenge will begin Saturday at 10 a.m. along the southern end of Wollaston Beach.

Interested teams can sign up by calling 328-7982 or visiting any of the sponsor locations below. Up to 16 co-ed adult teams can compete in the event. Conference sponsors are seeking interested individuals without teams as well.

"Each year some teams are short a few players," said

Doug Gutro of the Ward 5 Association. "There is always a high likelihood that we can place individuals on a team if they are interested."

Teams must consist of three men and three women. One male and one female alternate on each team are permissible. Registration costs $80 per team. Proceeds will go to the Wollaston Beach Clean Up fund designed to promote educational and recreational events along Wollaston Beach.

"This event has grown each year in terms of teams and sponsors," Gutro said. "This year we will have four nets with constant play in this double-elimination tournament. With the help of Coke and all of our sponsors, we will give away free volleyball challenge T-shirts to all players. As always, winners will get some terrific prizes and bragging rights for the year."

Sponsors include: The Ward 5 Community Association, MDC Wollaston Beach, Tony's Clam Shop, The Clam Box, Matilda's Boardwalk Café, Hot Rod Harry's, The Beach Comber, Coca Cola and Sam Adams.

In 1999, a team sponsored by Sam Adams came out on top of a 12-team field to win the championship.

Quincy Couple Modern-Day 'Mom & Pop' Success Story

By ART DUNPHY

In this age of national and international chainstores, such as Wal-Mart, Home Depot, CVS, etc., it's an anomaly to find a hometown "Mom & Pop" business thriving; and even more unusual to find one that is expanding.

But such is the case with Quincy's Steve and Sally Goldman. Owners and managers of Weymouth Club, the South Shore's largest and most successful health, fitness, and tennis club, the Goldmans recently bucked the national trend and opened Canton Club, an upscale health and fitness club located in the Village Shoppes at Cobb's Corner in Canton.

Sally grew up in Quincy, where her father, Ken Rickson, was the physical education instructor and a highly successful basketball coach at North Quincy High School during the 1950s and '60s. Ken later went on to become both the athletic director and physical education director for the Quincy public schools, a dual post he held for 15 years, retiring in 1988.

In 1968, when Sally was about 11 years old, she was introduced to tennis when her older brother, Ken Jr., went out for the Quincy High School tennis team. In order to help hone his skills, Ken Sr. took a family membership at the Quincy Tennis Club. The entire family, including mom, took up the game and for Sally it was the beginning of a life-long love affair with tennis that grew into a career.

Her dad, being a coach and an outstanding athlete in his own right, encouraged and nurtured Sally's tennis career. Over the next few years she developed into an outstanding junior talent as she climbed the USTA Junior ladder to become the No. 2 ranked player in New England as a 16-and-under and later as an 18-and-under player.

One summer during her playing days at QTC she met Steve Goldman, an outstanding young man and tennis player for whom she developed a fondness. Steve had attended private schools and had transferred to Quincy High as a junior, playing varsity football and tennis for two years before he graduated in 1965.

Following Sally's graduation from Quincy High School in 1975, she matriculated at Bentley College. It was before Title IX, the federal law that mandated equal rights and budgets for women athletics, so Sally went out for the men's tennis team. Much to the chagrin of her male teammates and opponents, Sally played No. 1 for Bentley, posting a two-year winning record. During her junior year, Bentley started a women's team and Sally made the shift to the distaff side, for which she played No. 1 for the next two seasons.

During her senior year she began to date Steve, and another long-term love affair began. Nine months later, following her graduation with a BA in business management in 1979, she and Steve were married.

Following graduation, Sally also had the opportunity to play tennis professionally, playing for Bob Kraft's "Boston Lobsters" in the World Team Tennis League, until the league folded.

It's not surprising, then, given both Sally's and Steve's love of the game, that they launched their marriage partnership and entrepreneurial careers as owners and partners of the Randolph Tennis Center. It was during this time that they developed the work ethic that was to shape their futures.

After seven years of 15x7 weeks they decided to sell the Randolph Club. However, after just a brief period as employees at the Weymouth Tennis Club they decided that they really didn't want to work for someone else. So in 1988, when the WTC became available, they jumped at the opportunity to buy it from the Tedeschi family.

Both Steve and Sally recognized that if their club was to grow and prosper, they had to offer more than just tennis. "Tennis-only had its limits," says Steve. So the couple did their homework and in 1990, they launched the first major initiatives which characterize their management style to this day. "We decided to cater to the family market and this required expanding our facilities and programs to accommodate the full range of family activities," says Sally.

Initially, they added a fitness center, an indoor/outdoor swimming pool, and an aerobics studio. With the new facilities came a commensurate increase in professional staff and programs as well as a sharp increase in membership.

"We recognized early on that we didn't know everything," Steve adds, "so we surrounded ourselves with good people and created a professionally friendly environment that has proven to be successful."

They have also been quick to recognize and respond to changes within the fitness industry. "The physical fitness industry is experienc-

Hearing aid "Tips from Tobias"

A "house call" reminds us of the time when the family doctor came to your home because you were too sick to go to them. Ah! the good ol' days. In today's world it is still a great service but one must be cautioned against allowing just anyone into their home. There is nothing easier than shopping from the comfort of your own living room, but be careful that the individual is qualified and that the company that they work for is reputable. Call around and ask local hearing aid specialists if they do home visits, if they are "Board Certified" and what are their service policies. They will be happy to show you their Board Certification Credentials! Anyone that fits and sells hearing aids should be a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist! It is the highest degree available in the profession of fitting hearing aids! If at all possible stay away from home visits because the Specialist will have more "tools" to work with in his office. Good luck in your quest for better hearing and a more fulfilling life! Now you go and spread the news! Steve

WHAT TO DO ABOUT THAT BACK PAIN

Most people will experience some degree of back pain at one time or another in their lifetime. Experts point to the general trend in our society to do more and more sitting, coupled with a general decline in our level of physical fitness as possible causes. Regardless if the back pain is brought on by an accident, poor posture, straining while working around the house, or playing a sport, or by doing too much bending and lifting, there is a lot of confusion as to what to do for treatment.

There are some general recommendations that often prove helpful to patients suffering from lower back pain. In my practice, I strongly urge patients to apply ice immediately after injuring their lower back. The ice tends to reduce any swelling or inflammation while also serving as a natural pain reliever. People with lower back pain should avoid excessive sitting because the seated position dramatically increases the structural pressure of the lower back. The recommended posture is known as the fetal position, whereby the patient lies on his/her side with both knees brought up toward their chest. Excessive exercise, bending, twisting and/or lifting should be avoided, as these actions tend to aggravate an injured lower back.

While I have taken the liberty of offering some basic suggestions on the care of back pain, there is no substitute for a thorough evaluation and examination to correctly diagnose the cause of the problem. The doctor of chiropractic, with intensive training and knowledge of the spine, is eminently qualified to treat patients suffering from lower back pain.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment, please call Dr. Mark Jaehnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Road, N. Quincy, 773-4400.

Facts from the Centers for Disease Control & Prevention

- DO change diapers in a bathroom. Germs can contaminate surfaces and objects around the water.
- DO wash your child thoroughly with soap before swimming. This helps keep invisible amounts of fecal matter from ending up in the water.
- DO NOT count on swim diapers or pants to keep fecal matter from leaking into the water. These products are not leak-proof.
- DO keep an eye on your child at all times. Remember, kids can drown in silence.
- DO protect your child against sunburn. Use a sunscreen with at least SPF15 and both UVA and UVB protection, and re-apply it after swimming.
- DO NOT let your child chew gum or eat while in the water. Chewing or eating while swimming can cause choking.
- DO take your child to the toilet for bathroom breaks often. Waiting to to hear "I have to go" may mean it's too late."

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"If love is blind, how is it, pray... That love will always find a way?... Author Unknown

After Edwin Markham, noted poet and author of "The Man With The Hoe," had lost his fortune by bad investments, there stirred within his soul, a spirit of resentment. But realizing that the man who hates hurts himself more than he does the other fellow, he became certain that there was no safety except in love... "Love will outwatch the stars," he said, and so on that particular day, his resentment subsided and the philosophy of his life returned. And in a flash, on a sheet of paper, he inscribed two circles. One was a diagram of all that wisdom which years had brought; the other, a brief inspiring allegory, subtle but clear, a terse summation of religious and human faith, all embracing love. These four lines have come to be one of the best-known quotations in the world.

"He drew a circle that shut me out—
Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout;
But love and I had the wit to win;
We drew a circle that took him in."

Rev. Bedros Baharian, 84 Played Key Role In City's Development

Rev. Bedros Baharian, 84, who played a key role in bringing major development to Quincy during his 17 years as chairman of the Planning Board, died Aug. 4 at his home in Leesburg, Fla.

Rev. Baharian was also the driving force behind the Quincy Point Congregational Church Homes, Inc., complex for senior citizens, popularly known as 1000 Southern Artery.

It was the largest local project undertaken in the 1960s, expanding from 216 units to 762 under his guidance as director. His son Paul Baharian is director today.

Rev. Baharian served as planning board chairman from the mid-1960s to the early 1980s mainly under Mayors James McIntyre, Water Hannon and Arthur Tobin and briefly with Mayor Francis McCauley who did not reappoint him in 1983.

He also served four years as the city's Development Director as a $1 a year man.

In a letter to Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth last September in response to a Sunbeams column remembrance of him, he said:

"I have some of those $1 checks framed in my office here in Leesburg.

"Yes, I'm very interested in Quincy, although I moved away 17 years ago when I finished my fourth term as chairman of the Planning Board.

"With the great cooperation of the city council and various department heads and some wonderful mayors, we did substantially change the face of the city and brought in many outstanding and generous tax paying developments to the city. Over a quarter billion dollars of appraised value."

Some of that development included State Street South in North Quincy, the Stop & Shop headquarters in downtown Quincy, the National Fire Protection Association headquarters in West Quincy and Marina Bay in Squantum.

"He was a wonderful human being who loved Quincy," said former Mayor Tobin.

"He had a positive approach that made things happen. He was a right arm to me in our efforts to revitalize the city."

Rev. Baharian was a strong proponent of a downtown road connector 20 years ago and said he had the same support for the Quincy Center Concourse.

"The Quincy Center Concourse is long overdue," he said. "When completed, the concourse will have a strong positive effect on the center of the city."

Although he was living in Leesburg, his heart remained in Quincy.

"We have a great city," he said, "still very well led by a visionary mayor with the help of a great Chamber of Commerce. Keep the dream going."

Rev. Baharian came to Quincy in December, 1943 to become pastor of Quincy Point Congregational Church, then located at Washington and South Sts. He later had the church moved up Washington St. to its present site near Southern Artery.

He received national attention in 1946 when he established an exchange program between Quincy Point Congregational Church and Grace Congregational Church in Harlem, N.Y.

In the early 1980s while living part-time in Leesburg, he built a housing complex for the elderly and a nursing home.

He also owned a herd of dairy cows in Cabot, VT.

He was honored at Quincy Point Congregational Church in 1992 on the 50th anniversary of his ordination at which time his long-time efforts to improve relations between Christians, Jews and minorities and his development activities in the city were cited.

He was a member of the Pilgrims United Church in Fruitland Park, Fla. and a member of the board of directors of Pilgrim Press, a national publishing firm.

Born in Worcester, he lived in Quincy nearly 40 years before moving to Leesburg 17 years ago.

He is survived by his wife, Jane Norton Baharian; two sons, Paul N. Baharian of Weymouth and David H. Baharian of Quincy; a daughter, Carol Jane Bolton of Clairmont, GA; a sister, Vera Brown of Glendale, Calif.; and five grandchildren.

Cremation was at the National Cremation Society in Fruitland Park, Fla.

Deware Recognized For Helping To Keep Area Children And Seniors Safe

Scott Deware, president of the Deware Family Funeral Homes of Quincy, was recently recognized by Robert Stuber, internationally known safety expert and founder of the Escape School child abduction prevention program and the Smart and Safe Seniors, senior safety program, for his efforts in New England concerning child and senior safety.

Deware was in New York recently attending a week-long educational seminar and training hosted by Dignity Memorial Funeral Providers, the national sponsors of the programs and Stuber.

Deware is one of 50 presenters throughout the US and the only presenter in New England.

"I have enjoyed presenting these programs to many groups in the Quincy area as well as throughout New England. The abuse of children and seniors are difficult and ugly issues," Deware said.

"Most people would rather not think about it. But

Social Security Testing Internet Technologies

By LAURIE ZASTROW

The Social Security Administration is partnering with CommerceNet, a nonprofit consortium, to test a variety of Internet technologies to determine if they can be used by the agency to enhance customer service.

Social Security envisions utilizing Internet services to allow customers to interact with an agency representative while they are online at Social Security's website.

The Internet has tremendous potential to expand and improve customer service at Social Security. But before we move forward, we must first test these technologies to determine if they are practicable and to ensure that they meet Social Security's strict standards for protecting customer privacy.

CommerceNet brings together a number of private companies to work with Social Security in a tightly controlled lab at the Social Security Administration. They will begin to integrate various methods of providing customer service such as the telephone and the Internet.

Some of the technologies to be tested include:

- Instant messaging which will allow the customer to type questions and receive an immediate response from a Social Security customer representative

- Secure email that will allow the customer to send and receive personal information from their Social Security records

- Voice over the Internet which will allow the customer to have a phone conversation with a Social Security representative while on the Social Security website

By working with CommerceNet, we can create a unique working environment to develop and test service options for our customers. We appreciate the opportunity to work with them and its member organizations and are looking forward to future public/private sector technological collaborations to improve public service.

(Laurie Zastrow is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A more harmonious aspect favors all relationships. Family ties with mates and children are strengthened. Libra is Cupid's choice to win the amorous Aries' heart.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The bold Bull is ready to take on fresh challenges. Expect some opposition as you plough up new ground — but supporters will outnumber detractors.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) An upcoming job change could mean uprooting your family to a distant location. Weigh all considerations carefully before making a decision one way or the other.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A long-standing problem is resolved by a mutually agreed-upon compromise. You can now focus on getting the facts you'll need for a decision you'll soon be asked to make.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Big Cat needs to be wary of what appears to be a "golden" investment opportunity. That "sure thing" could turn out to be nothing more than a sack of Kitty Glitter.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You give of yourself generously to help others, but right now you must allow people to help you. Confide your problems to family and trusted friends.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Relationships benefit from a strong harmonious aspect. Things go more smoothly at work. Someone you thought you'd never see again asks for a reconciliation.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A minor distraction interferes with travel plans, but the delay is temporary. Meanwhile, expect to play peacemaker once again for feuding family members.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Keep that positive momentum going on the home front. Arrange your schedule to spend more time with your family. You'll soon have news about that job change.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Control that possessive tendency that sometimes goads you into an unnecessary display of jealousy. You could be creating problems where none currently exist.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A new project holds some challenges you hadn't expected, but don't be discouraged. You'll find you're more prepared to deal with them than you realized.

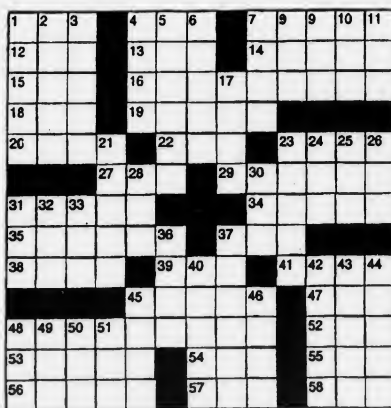

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Yours is the sign of the celestial Chemist, so don't be surprised if you experience a pleasant "chemistry" betwixt yourself and that new Leo in your life.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy being fussed over, as befits your "royal" Leonine nature. You also have a strong loyalty to family and friends.

The Goldmans continued to reinvest, improve and expand Weymouth Club to keep current and competitive. This was never more evident than in the past year when they announced a $5-million, two-to-three year expansion of their Weymouth Club facilities.

The expansion will include a new Tennis Center with six additional indoor tennis courts, a new club house and locker rooms; a new Aquatics Center with a 25-meter, eight-lane indoor pool, a new therapeutic pool, and new locker rooms; an indoor gymnasium to accommodate basketball, volleyball, gymnastics and other team sports; expanded fitness and group exercise studios; a new Children's Center with computer rooms, arts & crafts rooms, indoor recreation space, and expanded day care services; and a Physical Therapy facility. Also being considered are a Pro Shop, spa services, squash courts, and expanded restaurant facilities.

Seemingly without missing a beat, the Goldmans also opened the Canton Club last March. True to form, they Nazarene College.

This year's camp theme,
"Together We Can Make a Difference," focuses on issues relating to diversity within the school community.

Quincy High School is home to approximately 41 different ethnic groups, approximately 39 different languages, about an equal number of males and females and differing sexual orientations. There are adults and children living and working here with a wide range of religious backgrounds, ranging in age from the early teens to their mid-60's. Each of these people have differing abilities and capabilities for studying, working and living in this complex.

As happens in any community of 1300 people the differences found among them can lead to tension-building or conflict present situations.

"It is our intent to develop a core teachers and students within the school community with the knowledge and skills for mediating and remediating these tensions and conflicts in a positive fashion," said Jack Scanlon, Jr., chairman of the Quincy High School Heritage Program.

Scanlon said there are two plan objectives:

- Development of a diversity training and conflict resolution program, involving teachers and students at Quincy High School.

- Implementation of a teacher student leadership group which will be available for conflict resolution situations regarding a number of diversity issues.

Germantown HOPE Project Seen Dead

course from there."

The $33 million in HOPE VI funds was specifically targeted to demolish the 180 affordable housing units at the River-view Development in Germantown and replace them with 210 units of both public and private housing distributed more evenly across the city. Other projects included the modification of 60 of the 275 units at O'Brien Towers senior complex to create assisted living units and the razing of 32 of the 400 units at the Snug Harbor Development to create more parking and space.

Just as important, however, the HOPE VI grant had been described as the necessary "linchpin" to a roughly $100 million comprehensive plan by the QHA to "de-concentrate pockets of poverty" in the city and create a better balance of affordable, market-rate, and assisted living homes in neighborhoods such as Germantown, which holds the lion's share of Quincy's public housing.

"The object was really to diversify the type of housing you have in Germantown, to really transform the landscape of an entire neighborhood," the mayor said.

Under the HOPE VI plan, the federal government was allowed to contribute a maximum of $35 million to a particular project with the stipulation that every federal dollar be matched by $2.38 from a combination of private, city, and state funds.

"Obviously, we're disappointed," Mather said. "It (HOPE VI) was the engine to leverage, or motivate, other funding, and now we have to re-assess and see how much (of the plan) we can move forward with immediately and what other leverage engines are available."

Mather said the first step would be to listen intently to the HUD de-briefing showing just exactly where the QHA application ranked and what separated it from the successful applications, adding that the process was "very competitive" and one could never factor the degree of need which might exist elsewhere across the nation. After that, Mather said, he would meet with the QHA board of directors to determine the best possible way to move forward.

Despite his disappointment, Mather remained upbeat and pointed to the additional $10 million in leverage financing already committed to by the state, which will go towards projects at Snug Harbor, as well as city commitments for street repairs and increased public-private partnerships for such activities as ESL courses and First Time Homebuyer Workshops. "I've already started rolling up my sleeves for next year," Mather said. "If HOPE VI isn't out there, then we have to work all the harder for the residents of those neighborhoods, which is what we intend to do."

Ward 1 Councillor Gregory Hanley, chairman of the council's Committee on Housing and a staunch advocate of HOPE VI, said the best thing to come out of the application process was the plan itself, which Hanley said was still very much a reality. "There's no use crying over spilled milk," Hanley said of the HOPE VI setback. "This process has educated us. Through HOPE VI we've identified the needs of the Germantown community and developed a comprehensive needs assessment, both physically and socially. Now we should see if any federal renovation funds are available to move forward to make Germantown a better place."

Hanley, who emphasized the new Germantown Community Center is still "moving right ahead," said that he, like Mather, was anxious for the Monday meeting with HUD.

HUD's HOPE VI project, designed to replace

"unsalvageable" and hopeless distressed housing developments, is scheduled to be phased out in 2002, leaving only a small window of opportunity for future funding from this particular source. Mather was quick to add, however, that a new president and a new congress would set their own agenda for HUD and that, regardless of one program or the other, "HUD is very committed to local neighborhoods and Congress is very committed to HUD. That will not change."

THE "CHECK ENGINE" LIGHT

If the "check engine" light comes on briefly and then goes out without any unusual performance problems, drivers can usually ignore it. On the other hand, if the "check engine" light comes on intermittently and there is something unusual about the way that the engine is running, a diagnostic checkup is required. When the "check engine" light comes on and stays on, a diagnostic checkup is absolutely required. This does not necessarily mean you have to pull your vehicle over and shut off the engine. If the light comes on then goes out when the engine is re-started, a diagnostic checkup is required if a performance problem is noted, particularly if the light comes on repeatedly. Warning lights coming on? Don't hesitate and bring your car to us. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO we want you to be well informed about every system in your car. Our friendly, ASE Certified, professional service staff here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. D'Amico Mounts Campaign To Revoke Hat Rack License

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico has called a Crime Watch Meeting Monday, Aug. 28, at 7 p.m. at the Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave., to discuss the recent Quincy Police Department raid of the Hat Rack bar, Copeland St., Brewers Corner, which resulted in eight arrests.

The goal of the meeting, which was rescheduled to accommodate the License Board's hearing on the matter Aug. 29, is simple: to organize residents and businesses in pressuring the Quincy License Board to revoke the bar's liquor license.

"We must work together and lobby the Quincy License Board to revoke this license once and for all," D'Amico said in a statement

Tuesday. "Please join me on the 28th as we formulate our plan to proceed ahead to see this neighborhood detriment closed permanently!"

A meeting of the Brewers Corner Redevelopment Committee is scheduled immediately after the Crime Watch Meeting and will begin at 7:30 p.m.

The numerous incidents

Trained DPW Team Zeros In On West Nile Virus Carriers City Targets 3,000 Catch Basins For Mosquito Control

By CRAIG SALTERS

As a pre-emptive measure against the spread of the West Nile Virus, five newly trained DPW employees will larvicide 3,000 catch basins to kill the Culex Piapiens mosquito, which breeds specifically in stagnant water and is the known carrier of the potentially deadly disease.

The DPW employees have been specially trained and certified by the Massachusetts Pesticide Bureau in Waltham and will now coordinate efforts with the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project (NCMCP), which began treating catch basins in June.

Thomas Fabrizio, contract manager for the DPW who is spearheading larvicide efforts along with George Clark, director of the Sewer and Water Department for the DPW, said work should begin early next week as the actual larvicide pellets arrive. Material cost for the project will be approximately $2,000 and the DPW larvicide should be completed within 10 to 14 days.

"Between the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project and ourselves, we expect to take care of a vast majority of catch basins in the city," said Fabrizio, who noted the NCMCP has already treated 900 catch basins. "Also, we expect that more DPW employees will be trained and certified as we move forward with the project."

Overall, said John Smith, superintendent of the NCMCP, the city has 5,400 catch basins, roughly 3,000 of which are immediately accessible.

"This is a pro-active response," Fabrizio emphasized. "It's not certain that this virus will have any impact in this area, but this may reduce or eliminate the need to do anything later on."

In order to maximize the effectiveness of the larvicide, the DPW crews will first clean the catch basins and then deposit the larvicide pellets, which can last as long as 30-days, through the grates to the base of the catch basin.

The DPW's Clark estimated that this first application should be good until September, at which point the state's Division of Pesticide would decide whether to re-apply or not based primarily, Clark said, upon whether infected birds were discovered in the area between now and then.

"We think this is extremely helpful as a preventive measure," said Quincy Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue, who has been working with Fabrizio and Clark on the project. "We're also working closely with the Department of Public Health and monitoring areas very closely."

Both Gallahue and Fabrizio agree that the areas of greatest concern are marshy areas of the city or sites with heavy concentrations of seniors or small

Project Impact, FEMA Grant City Receives $300,000 To Prevent Future Flooding

The City of Quincy will receive $300,000 from Project Impact, a grant program sponsored by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), to make property more "disaster-resistant" especially as pertains to flooding.

Signing ceremonies celebrating the event will be held at 11 a.m. today (Thursday) in Council Chambers at City Hall.

According to Inspectional Services Director Walter White, most of the funds will be earmarked to "flood-proof" both residential and commercial property in the city, including the elevation of existing structures. Many projects, White said, are already in the planning stages but have to go through a review process to ensure they meet federal environmental guidelines.

White said both his office and the Planning Department have been involved in the grant process and added that flooding is the city's top priority in terms of emergency management, as opposed to earthquakes or tornadoes in other parts of the country.

Several local businesses and organizations have become Project Impact Community Partners, including, among others: Stop & Shop, Curry Hardware, Marina Bay, Quincy Medical Center, Agnitti Insurance, and CVS.

A sample brochure for the Project Impact campaign will be on display at the ceremony.

at the Hat Rack bar have been a thorn in the side of neighborhood residents for several years and D'Amico has gone on record as saying that the bar has negatively affected the area's past, present, and future. "There has to be a heightened scrutiny of that particular business," D'Amico promised after a June 26 meeting in which a Quincy 2000 revitalization plan for Brewers Corner was discussed. "The perception of the area is where we have to start first."

With a history of incidents at the bar, the Hat Rack's reputation in the neighborhood has always been in question. For D'Amico and many others, the Aug. 11 police raid appears to have been the final straw.

More than 20 Quincy officers raided the bar that night based on information from Community Police Officers, undercover work, and local residents. Police arrested five people on drug charges, including possession and distribution of cocaine, and three on running an illegal dice game.

One woman charged in the dice game was the bar's co-owner and liquor license holder, Donna Hatfield of Pembroke, who owns the bar with her husband James Hatfield, also of Pembroke.

Others arrested were: Rhonda Hatfield of Quincy and Denise McCall of Abington, charged along with Donna Hatfield of setting up and promoting an illegal lottery; Thomas Egan of Quincy, distribution of cocaine within 1,000 yards of a school and distribution of cocaine; Anne Marie Kennedy of Quincy, sale of a controlled substance within 1,000 yards of a school zone, possession of a class B substance with intent to distribute, and conspiring to violate the controlled substance laws.

Robert Marshall of Quincy, possession of a Class B substance and possession of a Class E substance; Anthony Isaac of Quincy, possession of cocaine; Daniel Ronaghan of Weymouth, possession of cocaine.

All eight pleaded innocent to the charges. No bail was set and they will appear in court Sept. 27.

Police allege that the bar was the center of the neighborhood's drug-dealing and other criminal activities.

It was decided Tuesday morning to place discussion of the Hat Rack on the agenda for the Aug. 29 meeting of the License Board, its next scheduled meeting.

D'Amico made it clear that he wants the Hat Rack shut down permanently. Said D'Amico:

"It's just not fair for law-abiding residents to have to put up with that kind of establishment. The Hat Rack is directly responsible for the deterioration of that neighborhood. We now have clear and concise information on the matter and we intend to use it.

"And when that place finally closes, you will see a dramatic turnaround in the quality of that neighborhood."

Assisting Sea Side Gardeners County Inmates Helping To Beautify Causeway

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti has committed inmate labor to assist the Sea Side Gardeners Club of Squantum in maintaining the area along the Squantum causeway.

The inmates, who started in July, will be working once a month until the end of October to remove weeds, cut grass and to replace the soil in flowerbeds located on various sides of the causeway.

Bellotti agreed to offer the inmate labor after hearing that the club needed help to perform the work. The club, which was formed in 1952, has been relying on volunteers to help maintain the landscaping of the area since 1997 when the effort was started by then President Sally Erickson.

"I'm happy to offer these resources to assist the Sea Side Gardeners in their continuous efforts to maintain this area of Quincy," Bellotti said. "Their goal — the beautification of the Squantum area — is an honorable one and I feel fortunate to play a part in its achievement."

The inmates working on the causeway are part of the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office Community Service Program — a program that has provided municipalities and non-profit organizations throughout the county with free labor since its inception in 1986.

"We are so fortunate to have this program in Norfolk County," said club co-president Marie Stamos. "Everybody that drives the causeway will benefit from the work these inmates are doing here."

"We really appreciate the Sheriff's help. Without the help of the Sheriff and his department, this job would have been unmanageable from a volunteer standpoint," said co-president Laurie Kelliher.

INMATE LABOR FROM Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti's Community Service Clean-up Program is helping the Sea Side Gardeners Club to beautify the area along the Squantum causeway. Bellotti is shown here with, from the left, Sally Erickson, former president of the club; and present Co-Presidents Laurie Kelliher and Marie Stamos.

Quincy Medical Center Pathology Lab Accredited

Quincy Medical Center's Laboratory has been accredited by the Commission on Laboratory Accreditation of the College of American Pathologists (CAP) based on the results of a recent on-site inspection.

The laboratory's director was advised of the national recognition and congratulated for the "excellence of the services being provided." Quincy Medical Center's Laboratory is one of the more than 6,000 CAP-accredited laboratories nationwide.

The CAP Laboratory

Accreditation Program, begun in the early 1960s, is recognized by the federal government as being equal to or more stringent than the government's own inspection program.

Inspectors examine the records and quality control of the laboratory for the preceding two years, as well as the education and qualifications of the total staff, the adequacy of the facilities, the equipment, laboratory safety, and laboratory management to determine how well the laboratory is serving the patient.

The College of American Pathologists is a medical society serving nearly 16,000 physician members and the laboratory community throughout the world. It is the world's largest association comprised exclusively of pathologists and is widely considered the leader in laboratory quality assurance. The CAP is an advocate for high-quality and cost-effective medical care.

Commemorative Bricks Available For Germantown Community Playground

The Germantown Neighborhood Council has organized a commemorative brick program that will adorn the walkways leading to the community-built playground at Snug Harbor School.

The estimated cost to build the playground is $35,000 and the communities fundraising efforts are more than halfway there thanks in part to the donation of CNA Insurance.

The community organized through the parents of Snug Harbor Community School and the Germantown Neighborhood Center are offering personalized bricks for $75, granite plaques for $250 and playground monuments for $2500.

The committee's goal is to raise the funds by the barn raising event on Sept. 30.

Donations or commemorative brick orders may be mailed to the Germantown Neighborhood Council/Kaboom Playground, c/o Lisa Hajjar, 15 Howe St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Those who would like to get involved or would like more information are asked to call 770-9930 or 479-5777.

Those Light Voter Turnouts

If there's one thing that bothers Joe Shea as city clerk it's a light voter turnout on election day.

Even though it means he gets to go home a little earlier election night.

"Makes you wonder if people really care," he says.

He means those who stay home on election day. And this year the great lack of challengers that builds voter apathy.

The state primary coming up Sept. 19 doesn't look like it will cause any traffic jams at Quincy's polling places.

With only one contest on the Democratic ballot and none on the Republican, the voter turnout appears destined to hit one of the lowest points in many years.

The lone contest is for the Democratic nomination for Norfolk County Register of Deeds, a job that is important and pays $85,000 a year but hardly excites the average voter.

The three candidates, listed alphabetically on the ballot, are:

County Commissioner Peter Collins of Milton, Mary Ellen Cronin, vice chairwoman of the Quincy Zoning Board of Appeals, and City Council President Paul Harold.

The winner will square off in November against former County Commissioner Bruce Olsen of Stoughton, the only Republican contender.

Shea, meanwhile is trying to drum up voter interest. He wants you to know, for example, that if you are going to be away Sept. 19 absentee ballots are now available at City Hall. Drop by and pick one up.

And, he has this reminder:

If you aren't a registered voter, the deadline for registering for the Sept. 19 primary is Wednesday, Aug. 30.

The Election Department that day will be open until 8 p.m. But you can register before then during regular (8:30-4:30) hours at City Hall.

Shea is reluctant to predict what the turnout will be Sept. 19. He'd like to see 20 percent and hates to think it could be half that as some observers believe.

Another thing Shea can't stand about light turnouts is that the election costs run about the same as that of a large turnout election.

Because it is a city-wide primary, the same number of polling workers and police will be on duty.

And, by law, there has to be a ballot for each registered voter—now over 51,600.

The price tag on this one-contest election: about $50,000.

SPEAKING OF SHEA, he's in Newport, R.I. this week, attending the International Institute of Municipal Clerks seminar at Salve Regina University.

City and town clerks from throughout New England are attending classes to update them on various subjects pertaining to their jobs. Such as records preservation, new voting equipment, communication skills, computer techniques, etc.

This is Shea's first year at the seminar which actually is an annual course over a three-year period.

Those completing it graduate with a "Certified Municipal Clerk" designation.

SHEA

Gee, Joe, with all your experience you ought to be down there teaching the course.

AND SPEAKING OF THE Sept. 19 primary, we noted in a recent column the lack of challengers this year.

That Democrats Senator Michael Morrissey, Reps. Bruce Ayers, Ron Mariano and Steve Tobin and County Commissioners John Gillis and William O'Donnell are all running unopposed for re-election.

It apparently prompted this note from Jim Mileski of Botosoph St.:

"What if they called an election and nobody came? It's pretty sad when not even the opposition party can circus up a candidate to give the illusion of democracy."

CITY COUNCILLOR Mike D'Amico was LA bound this week to attend the Democratic National Convention.

Not as a delegate but as a guest, he said, of former governor and Presidential nominee Michael Dukakis.

D'Amico said he was "very excited" because it was his first national convention. He planned to be there by Wednesday to hear Senator Joseph Lieberman give his acceptance speech as the vice presidential nominee.

D'AMICO

A FUND-RAISER reception for City Council President Paul Harold, candidate for Norfolk County Register of Deeds, is set for Tuesday, Aug. 29, 5:30-7:30 p.m. at Siro's Restaurant, Marina Bay, North Quincy.

Sponsoring the event, you might say, is a lineup with a little political clout: Frank Bellotti, former attorney general and lieutenant governor; Brian Donnelly, former congressman and ambassador to Trinidad; Dist. Atty. William Keating, state Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Bruce Ayers and City Councillors Gregory Hanley, Patrick McDermott and Joseph Newton.

Tickets are $100 per person and may be obtained by calling Chairman Neil Murphy (479-5279) or Anne Corcoran (471-9040).

AND ON SUNDAY, Aug. 27, Dist. Atty. William Keating will hold his summer cookout, 1-4 p.m. at the Canton Town Club, 300 Bailey St., Canton.

Tickets are $15 per person, children under 12 admitted free. For tickets or more information call 781-344-7673.

DON'T KNOW IF the Quincy High School Class of 1945 gives a prize to the classmate travelling the longest distance to its reunions.

The 55th anniversary reunion is set for Sept. 8, 12 noon to 4 p.m. at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

And if there is a longest distance prize it probably will go to Milton Katz, founder of Miltons clothing store.

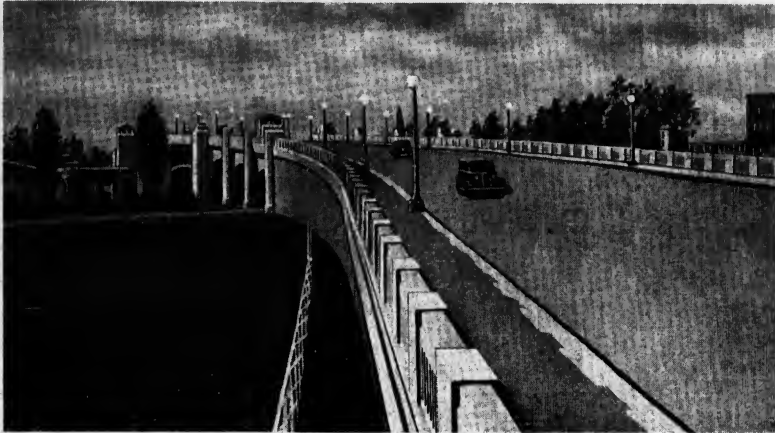

He has informed the reunion committee that he and his wife, Marilyn, will be there.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1936 postcard view of the newly opened Fore River in Quincy Point. This new is from the North Weymouth side, you can see the coal escalator for the Edgar plant on the left. The original steel bridge that this bridge replaced was on the left where today's new temporary bridge is being built. In times past, engineers designed structures like this with more than function in mind. For example, this bridge includes many striking art deco design features such as the railing and the bridge tender towers as well as handsome street lights. Compare this to the present nondescript Neponset Bridge. Hopefully when this bridge is rebuilt or repaired it will retain its artistic details.

Faces Of Autism

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Any child you have the pleasure to meet could be affected by Autism.

It does not discriminate; it takes every ethnic and social group. Who knows what the criteria may be. I am the parent of a 5-year-old boy who was diagnosed Autistic by Children's Hospital, Boston, Oct. 29, 1999. My son shows no exterior signs of being "different." He enjoys most things "regular" kids enjoy, indoor and outdoor pursuits. If you were to meet us by chance in a playground, or at a McDonalds, you may notice he doesn't always make eye contact, he responds to very simple language and engages in repetitive behavior. His view of the world is probably alien to us. I cannot wait for the day that I can ask him and he can tell me.

He was diagnosed first with PDD NOS, which actually stands for Pervasive Development Disorder, not otherwise specified. Okay, so something is wrong, in a neurological sense. Just what it is cannot be determined. After a year in a special education classroom, his diagnosis changed to Autism. His speech, language and social skills are delayed. He requires an intensive educational program to help him reach his potential.

We are lucky. We managed to secure an Applied Behavioral Analysis (ABA) program for him, along with a Behaviorist, who comes to the house and works with us all for three hours a week. This was not achieved easily. However, after much persistence and the intervention of people willing to put the special needs of these children first, he is doing well, beginning to speak and interacting much more readily with his older sister.

Remember how it felt when you first heard "Mama" or "Dada" — imagine hearing it when you never knew if you ever would.

The next time you hear the controversial debate of the cost of children with special needs, please bear this in mind. The hospital evaluations to determine whether a child is protected by Chapter 766 law can be exhaustive. Evaluations by Developmental Pediatricians, Psychologists, Psychiatrists, Speech and Language Pathologists and Occupational Therapists are required.

Ever watch your child go through an EEG? Never mind the waiting to get the appointment in the first place. The services required by these children are determined in conjunction with the school district. All parties, medical, educational and parental, must agree on the appropriateness of the program services. There are limits involved, paperwork to be read and understood, in addition to the yearly re-evaluation of the child by medical and educational teams.

These children need these services to achieve some potential to function in society, however limited that may be.

Yes, the cost to the schools and the city can be very high. Can it be justified? Absolutely. Not only am I the parent of a child with Autism, I also have a Neurologically Typical child, attending public school. My son is in a private placement, paid for by the city because the services offered through the public school were not intensive enough to maximize his potential. As parents, isn't our main objective to ensure our children receive what is in their best interest? Who is anyone to say my child is not "deserving," or is a "drain on the regular education population" simply because he is the one in a thousand children affected by Autism.

Life is not fair. We learn this at a young age. Why then is any child singled out and denied what they need to accomplish whatever they can?

Quincy's Yesterdays

Moon Island Prison Opposed

By PAUL HAROLD

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa voice his strong opposition to plans by the city of Boston to consolidate its corrections operations on Moon Island.

Moon Island is located within the boundaries of Quincy but owned by Boston. Under the consolidation plan, Suffolk County's house of correction on Deer Island and jail on Charles St. would be combined at a new Moon Island site.

Della Chiesa said the impact on traffic to Squantum would make the plan completely unworkable.

SECRET BALLOT FOR GEAR WORKERS

In an attempt to help resolve the strike by the 800 workers at the Boston Gear Works, Mayor Della Chiesa offered the use of the auditorium at North Quincy High School for a secret vote. The vote would be by the United Steel Workers' on the acceptance or rejection of management's latest offer.

The mayor's plan was severely criticized by union officials and federal mediation commissioner John Sullivan who said it upset progress he'd been making on the dispute.

CLARA THOMPSON DIES

Well-known Quincy High School math teacher Clara Thompson died this week. She taught at the school for 48 years, starting in 1892 when there were only 300 students.

She taught many students who gained prominence nationally and locally including movie star Ruth Gordon, attorneys Donald Mackay and John Flavin, City Clerk Donald Crane and Louis George, head of the Quincy Housing Authority.

Rev. Chester Porteus presided at her funeral at Christ Church.

Zucchini, Baked Two Ways

My husband and I were having breakfast on a rare SUNNY Sunday morning when our longtime friend Carl Awed brought us two huge zucchinis from his fabulous garden.

Later on that day I prepared one of them sliced and a couple of days later I prepared the other with stuffing. Here are both recipes, take your pick as to which one to prepare.

Sliced Zucchini

1 zucchini
flour or bisquick for coating
2 eggs mixed with milk salt and pepper
a smidgen of grated cheese oil to coat a cookie sheet

Slice the zucchini in 1/4 inch slices. Mix the eggs, milk salt pepper and cheese. Place flour on paper plate or aluminum foil. Coat the zucchini in the flour mixture first and then the egg mixture. At this point most of you will opt to fry them and drain which is how I usually do it. But this day, I decided to bake them in the oven. Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. The only thing is you first have to put oil on the cookie sheet and heat that in the oven. Then remove the sheets from the oven, and add the slices side by side. You'll need two sheets at least. They took at least 45 minutes to cook.. Turn once until both sides are light brown. Drain and keep in warming oven. They were really delicious.

The stuffed one is easy and our family loves stuffing no matter what Stuffed Zucchini.

1 zucchini
3 slices bread
1/2 cup seasoned bread crumbs
1/4 cup grated romano or parmesan cheese
1/4 cup tomato sauce or fresh tomatoes diced
1 tablespoon basil, a smidgen of oregano water if mixture is too dry

First cut the zucchini in half, scoop out the inside. Save some of the pulp for the stuffing and of course throw away the seedy part.

Soak the bread and squeeze. Place in a bowl with the pulp, the tomato sauce and the rest of the ingredients. Mix until well blended. Fill each side of the zucchini topping it with a bit more sauce and grated cheese. In a baking pan, add about a cup of water. Place the zucchini and bake covered for about 30 minutes, and then uncover the bake until tender. Cut in large pieces.. We all enjoyed them both ways. Thanks Carl .P.S. At other times, I've included rice in the stuffing.

Luisa Binetti Wed To Robert Thomas

A reception at Barker's Tavern in Scituate followed the recent wedding of Luisa Binetti and Robert S. Thomas. They were married in St. Agatha's Church Milton by Deacon Daniel Sullivan.

The bride is the daughter of Dominick and Rosa Binetti of Port Orange, Fla. The groom is the son of Robert and Barbara Sealund of Quincy.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride was attended by Lynda Welch as Maid of Honor. Tracy Cafaro served as Matron of Honor. Serving as bridesmaid was the groom's sister, Carol McCabe.

Meagan Robichaud was the flower girl and Brian McCabe, nephew of the groom the ring bearer.

Paul Leary and Joseph Robichaud both served as Best Men. Patrick Leary was the usher.

After a cruise to Europe, they are living in Milton.

Matthew Lebo In National Scholars Society

Matthew Lebo of Highland Ave., Wollaston has accepted membership in the National Society of Collegiate Scholars and will be honored during a campus ceremony this fall at Boston University.

The National Society of Collegiate Scholars (NSCS) is a highly selective, national, non-profit honors organization. Founded in 1994, NSCS recognizes first and second year undergraduate students who excel academically.

Lebo, son of Emily and Stewart Lebo, just completed his sophomore year at Boston University where he is a double major in biology and math, and currently has a 3.9 GPA.

During his sophomore year, he worked as a teaching assistant in freshman biology. He spent his spring break volunteering in the "Alternative Spring Break" program through BU, rehabilitating homes in North Carolina.

He is working this summer for Technology in Medicine in Biomedical Engineering.

Erin Barry of Quincy has been accepted into the National Society of Collegiate Scholars (NSCS) and will be honored during a campus ceremony at Northeastern University in the fall.

The NSCS is a national honors society, founded in 1994, that recognizes first and second year undergraduate students who excel academically.

"NSCS provides the opportunity for students, like Erin, to be recognized for their outstanding academic accomplishments early in their college experience," said Steve Loflin, NSCS executive director.

"Erin will also have the opportunity to join other high achieving college students in developing leadership skills and a sense of civic responsibility."

STACIE BUSH (center) of Quincy is the recipient of a $30,000 Henry David Thoreau Scholarship from Northeast Educational Services (NES). With her here are Marilee Jones (left) of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and a member of the Henry David Thoreau Scholars selection committee, and Stacie's mother, Nancy. A 1999 graduate of Quincy High School, Stacie attended Northeastern University this past year.

5th Annual Senior Conference Sept. 16

Quincy's fifth annual Senior Conference will be held Saturday, Sept. 16 at the Broad Meadows Middle School in Quincy.

The conference, sponsored by the Mayor's Commission on the Family and the Quincy Council on Aging, will begin at 8 a.m.

with registration and breakfast. Keynote speaker will be Professor Margery Silver, a neuropsychologist at Harvard University. This year's participants will have a choice of 20 workshops.

Silver will speak at 9 a.m. Workshops will follow at 9:45 a.m. to 11 a.m., and 11:15 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. There will be a luncheon after the workshops. Mayor James Sheets will conclude the day with closing remarks.

To receive an application for the conference, call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1245. Cost is $8.

Home Schooling Meeting Topic Aug. 24

A meeting for home educators will take place Thursday, Aug. 24 at 7:30 p.m. in a North Quincy home.

Hosted by Denise Trias, a Quincy home schooler, the meeting is for current and new home schoolers.

The purpose of the meeting is for parents to meet fellow home schoolers in Quincy and to discuss the possibility of starting a Quincy area support group.

Other items of presentation will include various methods of teaching, the starting of a study group on the Charlotte Mason Method and the needs of Quincy home schoolers.

Toastmasters Offers Friendly Setting For Public Speaking

By CRAIG SALTERS

Many polls list the fear of public speaking as greater for most people than the fear of dying.

That means, according to the twisted logic of comedian Jerry Seinfeld, that more people would prefer to be in the casket than speak at the eulogy.

But at 7:15 p.m. every Monday Night from September through June at the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Rd., members of the Quincy Toastmasters Club meet to conquer that fear, as well as hone business and management techniques and enjoy each other's company.

"Toastmasters is all about participation," says John Connolly, a two-year member and vice president in charge of public relations. "We're all here to help each other and we're all here for one reason: to become better communicators."

Toastmasters International is a non-profit organization founded in 1924 by Dr. Ralph Smedley who conceived and developed the idea as a way to help others speak more effectively. The organization now boasts over 8,642 clubs worldwide and a membership of 174,900.

The Quincy chapter was formed in February of 1949 under the leadership of its first chapter president, Thurman Sallade. In his acceptance speech, Sallade remarked that Toastmasters was "founded on one of the most solid pillars of democracy: freedom of speech. A man must know how to express his thoughts in spoken words."

Dr. Joseph McDermott of Quincy, treasurer of the charter club, recalled that many of the original members were young businessmen eager to speak more comfortably in public situations. "Toastmasters back then was called the poor man's Dale Carnegie course. It gave us an opportunity to improve our speaking skills and improve our businesses."

Toastmasters fully opened its doors to women in 1973.

In the year 2000, Connolly says, Toastmasters is still a great place to improve communication skills in a friendly, supportive environment. "I used to think I was a good public speaker until I came here," Connolly recalls, "but now I prepare more, focus on three or four issues that I want to address and really hit them."

Connolly, a real estate agent, said the most dramatic change in his presentations now is that he won't let speakers, himself included, extend past their allotted time, a tactic which speeds along business meetings and first-time homebuyer seminars which had a tendency to drag before. "It wasn't the information that was different," said Connolly. "It was the way I presented that information."

It's not uncommon, he said, for business men or women to give a practice speech at Toastmasters the day before an important presentation, but Connolly is quick to add that just as many people join Toastmasters because it's a social thing to do on a Monday night.

A typical Toastmaster evening is very structured with many of the members assigned roles beforehand. The night begins with remarks by that night's host, or Toastmaster, and is followed by another member leading the invocation and pledge.

There are then the four "of the days:" joke of the day, thought of the day, word of the day, and toastmaster tip of the day, each designed to allow speakers to gradually get used to public speaking.

The highlight of the night is the three or four speeches given on various topics by the night's speakers. As the speakers are giving their talks, they are also being monitored by a general evaluator, evaluators, a timer, and a grammarian, a fact which can seem daunting, Connolly admits, until one realizes that there is no criticism, only constructive advice issued in the form of challenges, such as "I challenge you to speak the entire five minutes" or "I challenge you to cut your 'ums' and 'aahs' in half."

"There is no negativity. If you have 'ums' and 'aahs,' we all have 'ums' and 'aahs,'" Connolly said.

There's even an evaluator for the evaluator, just to make sure things stay on the positive side.

The night ends with a short "table topics" discussion to again make sure everyone who wants to has a chance to practice public speaking, even if it's only for a minute or two.

There is also a mid-meeting break for snacks and socializing.

There are many different levels to the Toastmaster program, but the bread and butter program, often referred to as "The Basic Manual," consists of ten public speeches of increasing difficulty which focus on the different skills of the art of public speaking.

The ten core speeches, in order, are: the ice breaker; speaking with sincerity; organize your speech; show what you mean; vocal variety; work with words; apply your skills; add impact to your speech; persuade with power; and, finally, inspire your audience.

The toastmaster for one particular evening said that it took him a month to make his first "ice-breaker" speech and three full years to complete all ten speeches.

"It's all totally voluntary," Connolly said. "You move up the ladder when you're ready."

Membership in Toastmasters is $60 per year but visitors are welcome to all of the meetings.

For more information on Toastmasters International and the Quincy chapter, contact John Connolly at (781) 848-9064.

"You have nothing to lose," Connolly said. "Just poke your head in and see what we're all about."

Hurricane Season Here, Are You Ready?

By SETTI D. WARREN,
Regional Director
Federal Emergency Management Agency

The recently released movie, "The Perfect Storm," dramatically depicts the October, 1991 Halloween Nor'easter that took place in New England and caused millions of dollars in disaster damage.

Most people do not remember that a major element of the weather system that led to the formation of the Perfect Storm was the remains of Hurricane Grace. In recent years, New England has been fortunate to avoid serious hurricane damage. But it is not if a major hurricane will strike, but when.

Have we New Englanders done enough to prepare ourselves and our communities for the severe damage these storms can cause? Here are a few things you can do to help yourself before a hurricane strikes:

First, assess your risk from the coastal and inland flooding that hurricane rains can bring. Determine whether you live in a flood area, as identified on your community's Flood Insurance Rate Map. Standard homeowners' policies do not cover floods, so having flood insurance is important.

During the course of a 30-year mortgage, there is a 24-plus percent chance that a house located in a 100-year flood zone will experience a flood loss. (The chance of experiencing a fire loss during that same period amounts to less than one percent.)

Assess your vulnerability to wind damages. During Hurricane Hugo (1989), hurricane force winds damaged homes 300 miles inland. To protect your home from wind damage, you can strengthen roof connections with hurricane clips or straps; brace the gabled end of the roof; and pre-cut plywood shutters for all windows. An ounce of prevention will save you thousands in damages. Before you begin these projects, contact your local building official for advice and any permits that may be required.

Develop a family disaster plan. Know what you and your family will do when a storm approaches. Contact your local officials to determine if you are in an evacuation zone. If you are, know your evacuation routes. When told to leave, know where you will go and which route you will take. Remember that public shelters are just that — shelters. They should be the last option after staying with family or friends or in a hotel. If you are not in an evacuation zone and plan to ride out the storm in your home, determine how and where you will do that. The best option is the basement or a small interior space or closet.

Plan on being on your own for a minimum of 72 hours. Stock up on canned food (and have a non-electrical can opener), prescription drugs, eye glasses, baby necessities (baby food/formula/diapers/wipes), toys for children and water. Have flashlights (not candles, which are a fire hazard) and a battery powered radio (with extra batteries). Fill the bathtub or a garbage can with clean water for flushing toilets in the event of a loss of water pressure or loss of power to a well pump. Be sure to fill car(s) with gasoline.

Nationwide effort to build disaster-resistant communities. Just as there are things you and your family can do to mitigate against natural hazards, there are also actions your community can take to become more disaster-resistant.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) has launched a national initiative called Project Impact just for that purpose. Through Project Impact, the community — civic leaders, business leaders, elected officials, local government officials and concerned citizens — are given the tools and support to pro-actively manage the risks it faces from natural hazards such as hurricanes.

By assessing what is most at risk (e.g., high school roof from hurricane winds) and developing a systematic approach to managing that risk (e.g., include roof retrofitting with hurricane straps in the school maintenance budget), a community can make itself more resistant to the hazards it faces. It is this kind of action for which New England is famous, and it is the founded principal behind Project Impact. To date there are over 200 communities nationwide with 24 in New England and more than 1,100 businesses that have joined the Project

Impact initiative. The hurricane season will end Nov. 1, but until then, preparing your family and community ahead of the storm is the best prevention New Englanders can have.

To learn more about Project Impact and how you can take action to make yourself, your family and your community more resistant to disasters, look at the FEMA web site at www.fema.gov.

Quincy Medical Center is a teaching affiliate of Boston University School of Medicine.

CHRISTINE SCHUSTER, CEO of Quincy Medical Center, pledges her support of the Marie A. Curry Walk which helps provide free mammograms at QMC to uninsured women.

ROBERT CURRY, who established the Marie A. Curry Foundation at the Quincy Medical Center in memory of his wife who died of breast cancer, thanks those attending Monday's walk kick-off breakfast for their continued support.

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS stresses the importance of mammograms and noted it was fortunate that the Quincy Medical Center is here to carry on that vital program for uninsured women.

To Help Fight The Battle Against Breast Cancer Third Annual Marie Curry Walk Set For Sept. 17

A kick-off breakfast for the third annual Marie Curry Walk to raise funds to help fight the battle against breast cancer through free early detection was held Monday at the Quincy Medical Center.

The five-mile walk is set for Sunday morning, Sept. 17.

Last year's event with some 600 participants raised nearly $90,000 for the Marie A. Curry Fund at Quincy Medical Center. The year before realized $80,000.

The fund provides free mammography screenings for uninsured and underinsured women. More than 200 such mammograms have been given at Quincy Medical Center through the fund.

It is hoped that in the future, the Marie Curry Fund will expand to help those needing cancer related services.

Marie Curry died in 1995 at age 52 from breast cancer. Her husband, Robert Curry, Quincy businessman, donated $100,000 to establish the foundation in her memory to help other women through early awareness and detection.

The walk is spearheaded by the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women and the Quincy Medical Foundation.

Major co-sponsors of the walk are Citizens Bank and Quarry Hills Associates whose representatives were among those attending Monday's kick-off breakfast.

Also attending were Mayor James Sheets, honorary chairman; Quincy Medical Center CEO Christine Schuster, committee members and other community supporters.

Dr. Bruce Borgelt of the South Suburban Oncology Center, principal speaker, stressed the need for early detection and said it was time to win the fight against breast cancer.

Sheets and Schuster pledged their support of the walk.

Robert Curry, chairman of the QMC Board of Trustees and co-chairman with his son, Sean, of the walk committee, thanked those attending the breakfast for their continued support.

The walk Sept. 17 will step off at City Hall Plaza at 9:30 a.m. and proceed along Quincy Shore Drive to the Summer House at Marina Bay where a reception will follow. Registration at City Hall starts at 8 a.m.

Sponsor sheets for the walk are available at citizens Bank, City Hall, Curry Hardware stores, and the Quincy Medical Center. They may also be obtained by calling 617-376-3728.

Each person with $15 or more in collected sponsorships will receive a free T-shirt.

Those who might feel a five-mile walk is too long may walk a two and a half mile version instead. Buses will be available at 9:30 a.m. to transport those people to the walk mid-point along Quincy Shore Drive.

FOR A WORTHY CAUSE -- Officials, sponsors, supporters and committee members teamed up at a kick-off breakfast at Quincy Medical Center for the third annual Marie A. Curry Walk to be held Sunday, Sept. 17. Seated are Co-Chairman Sean Curry with son Brendan, and Co-Chairman Robert Curry, Quincy Medical Center CEO Christine Schuster and Tara Curry. Standing, Dr. Bruce Borgelt, Joanne Nelson, Donald

Surgical Technology Program At Quincy College

With a booming regional economy, options for many qualified individuals are plentiful.

But for local residents seeking short-term training to enter professions that pay well, the options are less accessible. One exception may be the Quincy College Surgical Technology Program.

This nine-month certificate program enables students who successfully complete coursework and clinical placement to enter the workforce.

According to Quincy College, all of the students find placement if they seek it, in some of the best hospitals in the area. Jobs pay in the mid 20's to start and demand for qualified individuals exceeds the number of people looking for jobs.

Earlier this year, college officials had suspected that declining enrollments in the program might signal its demise. However, before a decision was reached, faculty, students and staff contacted hospitals and employers for input.

"One of the amazing facts of this strong economy is that many people look at any type of training or educational program as unnecessary, and employers desperate to hire folks take what they can get," said interim President Sean Barry. "History tells us that education is a wise investment with a demonstrated return. Income increases, and career options are greater for those with degrees or certificates. Take a job now, without educational credentials, and you risk a whole lot if the economy nosedives."

"Hospitals in the area said 'help us' and we were quick to respond," Barry added. "This was an opportunity to do exactly what we're best prepared to do...to develop programs and training to meet the needs of area institutions and employers."

So the leadership team at Quincy College developed a plan that would allow for a class of students in Surgical Technology to begin in Fall 2000.

Turnaround time is shorter than ideal and admissions staff are trying to select from a limited pool of applicants.

"A student with the proper preparation could still be admitted today for the program beginning in September," Barry said.

The college will run the program with five or 50 students, he said.

"Whatever loss in revenue is realized is eliminated in goodwill and I am confident that keeping the program alive is essential to increasing enrollments in the future," Barry added. "We're looking at this investment in a unique and accredited program as venture capital. There was no place else to merge or modify the program. It was the program as it exists, or none at all."

Faith Evans-Tucker, the coordinator for the Quincy College program established a network of clinical placements throughout the region and has worked tirelessly to continue the program.

Barry, in consultation with the executive staff of the college, and members of the Finance and Facilities Committee of the college's Governing Board, decided to "green-light" the program in order to preserve clinical placements and to help area hospitals find highly professional competent employees.

"When an employer says we respect your programs, the quality of your instructors, and the caliber of graduates, you cannot walk away...you find a way to make it work," said Daniel Raymondi, a member of the Finance and Facilities Committee.

"This nine-month program is not easy, and it requires commitment and dedication," said Theresa Lord-Piatelli, chairwoman of the Quincy College Board of Governors, "but that is so true about anything worth having. These students become ambassadors for Quincy College."

Surgical Technicians work in the operating rooms or surgical suites of hospitals and medical centers. They assist the team performing operations. Greater Boston is renowned for excellence in medical training and research and an opportunity to work in that setting, alongside some of the best teams in the world is an exciting and rewarding prospect, Barry said.

The full-time program begins in September and concludes the following summer. Students are placed in clinical settings and participate in coursework on campus. English proficiency is required.

Preparing For Hurricane Season

The months of August through October are typically the busiest months for Atlantic-based hurricanes. The American Red Cross recommends that all families in Eastern Massachusetts prepare for extreme conditions and emergency situations caused by these potential storms.

"If you live in a coastal area or have planned a vacation to a coastal area that is prone to hurricanes, now is the time to prepare," said Patricia Deyton, CEO of the American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay. "Take a weekend now and get ready by compiling a disaster supply kit, developing an evacuation plan and forming a family communication plan."

According to Dr. William

Gray, noted Colorado State University climatologist, the 2000 Atlantic and Gulf Coast Hurricane Season will likely be active, predicting 12 named storms, eight hurricanes and four major hurricanes.

Hurricanes are the most unpredictable storms. Though hurricanes are easily tracked and have an advanced-warning period, they can change direction, speed and intensity quickly.

Since August marks the highest month for beach vacations, the American Red Cross recommends that everyone who will be in a coastal community take precautions. The American Red Cross offers the following tips (also available at bostonredcross.org) to help people to prepare and to respond appropriately in the event of a hurricane:

• Prepare a Disaster Supplies Kit. It should include: battery-operated radio, flashlight, extra batteries, water, food, first aid kit (one for your home and one for each car), prescription and non-prescription medications, tools and supplies (paper cups, utility knife, hammer, non-electric can opener, etc.), supplies to maintain sanitation (toilet paper, paper towels, household chlorine bleach), clothing and bedding.

• Prepare a Family Communication Plan. Designate a friend or relative outside your town or area as your family contact in the event you are separated from family members during a hurricane, if you are told to evacuate, or if it knocks out your electricity. Make sure everyone in the family knows the name, address and phone number of the contact person. Identify where you could go if told to evacuate.

• Prepare your Home. Remove dead or diseased branches and limbs so that they don't break off and become missiles during high winds. Prepare window coverings with outdoor plywood to fit every window in your home.

• Know the meaning between a watch and a warning. A hurricane watch means a hurricane is possible in your area within 24 to 36 hours. A hurricane warning means a hurricane is expected in your area in 24 hours or less.

For more hurricane safety information, access the American Red Cross website at www.bostonredcross.org.

Computer Furniture: The Overlooked Back-To-School Supply

Nearly half of all households with computers agree that their children would not do as well in school if they did not have a computer.

Yet, the PC remains one of the most overlooked back-to-school basics, sharing space atop a makeshift desk, serving as a centerpiece on the dining room table or even stuffed in a cramped corner.

A look inside people's homes during a recent ethnographic study conducted by Sauder, North America's leading manufacturer of ready-to-assemble furnishings, revealed that these seemingly absurd scenarios are not uncommon. But, homes can be back-to-school compliant with hard-working, affordable computer furniture that help kids and parents work (and play) smarter together.

"While most families can't live without their computer systems, they don't feel at home with their technology," says Susan Dountas, director of marketing for Sauder. "They're living with awkward makeshift setups that are clumsy and less functional than furniture made for computers. It's important for families to be adequately equipped before the school season begins, because proper computer furniture can help students work more efficiently and quickly."

And, it's easier than ever to find a stylish home for a complete computer system that is space-conscious enough for compact areas like attics and stairwells as well as price-conscious enough to stay within the household budget, adds Dountas. Whether it's an armoire or a computer cart on wheels, computer furniture is now available to solve the most common hi-tech organizational problems.

• Computer crowded onto an overused, undersized desk? Sauder recommends compact computer carts that take up only three feet of space and costs as little as $80, which make them ideal for a kid's bedroom. Mobile computer carts on casters also provide "ease on wheels," making it a snap to relocate equipment for added convenience or tuck it away after hours.

• CPU tower serving as a footrest? Keep it out of sight and out of mind with furnishings that hide the tower in specially designed vertical storage compartments.

• Keyboard sitting on your lap? Pullout keyboard trays provide ease of operation as well as ergonomic and space benefits. Telescoping trays provide both a pullout keyboard tray as well as a pull-out desktop tray for extra workspace.

• Monitor sporting post-it notes on every side? Built-in bulletin boards are great organizers that don't take up valuable workspace. Single or dual bulletin boards help minimize paper trails and help families with busy schedules keep on track. Posting important websites that can aid in student research is another efficient use of bulletin boards.

• Floor carpeted with wall-to-wall books and papers? Simply look for furnishings, such as Sauder's award-winning "office-in-a-box" Monarch design, that are equipped with plenty of storage from adjustable shelves that keep reference books and paper reams within reach to closed-door cabinets that conceal files.

• CDs and computer disks stacked in mounds? Built-in CD racks are the perfect space-saving solutions. Today's techno-savvy computer units can conveniently accommodate up to 50 CDs, making out-of-control clutter a thing of the past.

For more information on Sauder furniture, visit the company Web site at www.sauder.com or call the toll-free consumer line at 800-523-3987.

City Targets 3,000 Catch Basins For Mosquito Control

children, who are most at-risk for serious illness from the virus.

In particular, Gallahue applauded Sharron Beals, executive director of Beechwood Community Life Center, for her efforts to draw attention to the catch basin in front of the center as well as the fact that Beechwood, located near marshland, has over 175 children attending programs in addition to its large senior population.

Beechwood, Gallahue said, has and will be monitored and treated very closely and area residents, especially parents of youngsters in the Beechwood programs, will be kept well informed of the situation.

Although six more infected crows (which are the warning sign for the virus) were recently identified in the Boston area, Gallahue emphasized that absolutely no birds had tested positive for West Nile Virus in Quincy. Gallahue also urged that preventive measures -- such as removing all stagnant water, avoiding outdoor activities between dusk and dawn, wearing the proper insect repellent, fixing window screens, and the like -- were still the best way to limit what is already a very small risk of infection.

The NCMCP's Smith urged people once more to prepare but not panic, reminding residents that the West Nile Virus is not nearly as harmful as the already well-established "Triple E:" Eastern Equine Encephalitis.

Smith also wanted to alert Quincy residents that the city is currently undergoing a rather severe outbreak of salt marsh mosquitoes, which, although plentiful, have not been found to carry the West Nile Virus. "Just because there's a lot of mosquitoes around doesn't mean they necessarily carry the West Nile Virus," Smith said.

The West Nile Virus, which causes mild symptoms in most people but can be much more serious with the elderly and young children, is transmitted by only the "container bucket" variety of mosquito. There have been several cases of infected birds in the state but the virus has not been identified in any Massachusetts residents.

The Massachusetts Department of Health has established a WNV information hotline at 1-877-603-3572.

Massachusetts Recruiting Inspection Stations To Test Diesel Vehicles

The MA Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) and the Registry of Motor Vehicles (RMV) announced they are recruiting inspection stations to conduct emissions testing for diesel-powered vehicles.

Through Keating Technologies, program manager for the Massachusetts Enhanced Emissions & Safety Test, the Commonwealth will provide equipment and training to businesses that want to become a public inspection station for light- or heavy-duty diesel vehicles, a mobile inspector for heavy-duty diesels or a "self-tester" licensed to test their own fleet of diesel vehicles.

Since its launch last October, the Massachusetts emissions test has targeted the largest population of vehicles on the road — gasoline-fueled passenger cars and trucks. On Jan. 1, 2001, annual emissions testing for Massachusetts registered diesel-powered vehicles — including cars, trucks and buses — will begin. While safety testing for diesel vehicles has been ongoing, this is the first time Massachusetts will test its 120,000 diesel vehicles for excess emissions. Massachusetts is only the second Northeast state to implement a periodic emissions testing of diesel-fueled vehicles.

The Enhanced Emissions & Safety Test was created to comply with air quality requirements established by the federal Clean Air Act of 1990. Emissions from cars, trucks and buses account for more than 40 percent of all air pollution in Massachusetts. The enhanced emissions program is expected to remove 120 tons of air pollution each day.

"Diesel testing is the next step in the state's comprehensive emissions testing program," said Keating Technologies spokesman Jon Spampinato. "An effective program to reduce air pollution and improve air quality must include vehicles powered by diesel fuel. Keating is currently building a statewide network for diesel testing to complement the 1,250-station network already in place for testing gasoline-fueled vehicles."

He noted that inspection stations currently performing the Enhanced Emissions and Safety Test (for gas-fueled cars and trucks) would need a minimal amount of additional equipment. The cost of the diesel testing equipment is $3,413 (plus tax) with an annual maintenance fee of $288.

The new program will require state-licensed inspectors to test diesel emissions along with the safety test. Keating will provide all software and hardware and a training program for technicians seeking certifications as emissions inspectors for diesel-fueled cars and medium- and heavy-duty vehicles.

For more information about the diesel-testing program, contact Keating's "Station Support Hotline" at 1-877-297-5552. Additional information is also available online at www.vehicletest.state.ma.us.

AAA Safety Tips For Summer Breakdowns

Because even the best maintained vehicle can develop a mechanical problem, it's critical that motorists know how to handle breakdown situations safely, advises AAA Southern New England.

The first rule when your vehicle begins to malfunction is not to panic. Signal and pull completely off the road onto the shoulder. Avoid any sudden or panic maneuvers.

Once on the side of the road, turn on your emergency flashers. Use extreme caution when exiting the vehicle. If necessary, exit from the passenger side of the vehicle to avoid the risk of being struck by traffic.

As soon as possible, set up reflectors, flares, or other signal devices to alert passing motorists.

If waiting for assistance and the temperature permits, return to your vehicle and lock all the doors and roll up windows. If someone other than a uniformed police officer stops, roll down the window only enough to ask them to telephone the police, AAA, or a service station.

Since surroundings and hazards vary, use your best judgment in deciding whether to stay with your vehicle or go for help.

A cellular phone or citizens band (CB) radio is a good investment that can be used to summon help in the event of a breakdown or emergency.

Summer Storms Need Special Driving Skills

Motorists caught in a sudden summer thunderstorm will be safer if they learn and practice wet-weather driving skills, reports AAA Southern New England.

AAA offers the following tips to help motorists navigate their way through wet weather:

- Turn on windshield wipers as soon as rain begins to fall. If intermittent wipers are used, be certain they are set to a speed that will clear the windshield before visibility is compromised.

- If windows begin to fog, turn on the car's defroster and air conditioner if equipped. Use fresh air setting as opposed to recycled, if available.

- Use low-beam headlights to help other drivers see your car and increase visibility.

- Slow down and increase following distances. Speed limits are set for ideal road conditions, when it rains, visibility is reduced and braking distances increase.

- If you are forced to stop in traffic due to poor visibility, turn on emergency flashers immediately and pull as far off the road as possible.

Preventive maintenance is also important in reducing wet-weather driving risks. AAA recommends the following equipment be inspected by a certified technician, especially before starting a long-distance drive: battery, ignition system, lights; brakes; tire pressure and tread wear; heating and cooling system, belts, hoses, and defroster blower; windshield wipers and washer fluid reservoir.

Tree Pitch, Droppings & Insects can become baked on your car's finish in summer's heat, dulling its luster.

Granite Remembering The Maine (Pride)

By CHRIS POISSON

Images of the Quincy Granite steamrollering into Biddeford two weeks ago still linger with the Maine Pride.

The sight of Quincy scoring on the first play of the game, or a linebacker returning an interception for six points, or a wide receiver completing a Hail Mary touchdown pass humiliates them. They were more embarrassed than a teenage boy having his mother drive him to the movies on his first date.

Fresh off a 31-27 win over Randolph, Maine (3-2) has a chance for redemption Saturday night when it heads south to tackle Quincy (4-1) at Veterans Memorial Stadium in a rematch from the 27-0 debacle just 14 days ago.

"This Maine team, we obviously did a pretty good job against them," said Quincy coach Ken McPhee. "But they had some kids missing so they're going to be ready to go. They have some reason to come down here and pay us back a little bit. They just beat Randolph, 31-27. They're coming off a high right now, so we're going to have to play well."

And Quincy has been playing well for awhile as it rides a four-game winning streak. But the worse thing that could've happened to them was having a bye last week.

"I hate it because you want to continue to play," McPhee said. "You don't want to give up any time. Last week was lousy weather-wise and this week has been lousy. It's going to be difficult for us to put it together."

Although Quincy boasts a top-ranked defense and blanked Maine the first time, McPhee still has respect for Maine's offense. If you disregard its game against Quincy, Maine averages close to 33 points per game.

"Defensively we're playing very well," McPhee said. "We've only given up 36 points in five games. We shut them out the last time and the defense wants to do the same thing this time. I'm not sure if we can do that. Maine is pretty proficient. They scored 31 points last week and I don't know how many total. They're up near the top."

Offensively, if Thomas comes out with a hot hand again, Quincy will look to attack with its aerial game from the start. But it won't abandon its improved running game. Jackson Vetic, who rushed for about 100 yards in the previous game, will be counted on to turn in another strong outing.

"We have some different things we're going to try to do," McPhee said. "We have some different protections to try to keep people off our quarterback. We'll do some different things with our receivers and hopefully we'll be able to run the ball."

Quincy, meanwhile, will be playing its first home game in nearly a month. Home sweet home. Or is it?

On the road, Quincy has won't all three games, outscoring its opponents by an absurd 83-8 margin while posting two shutouts. At home, albeit quarterback Mike Thomas has yet to play a complete game there, it's 1-1 and has been outscored, 34-23.

Regardless, the Granite is eager to play a game in the quarry. Next week, they'll have a bye and then hit the road to face Randolph and Marlboro before returning home for Middleboro and Providence.

"Oh yeah, a little home cooking is good," McPhee said. "You want to play in front of your fans. We've been on the road. It will be good to go home for a quickie."

Dr. Joshua Dubin On Team USA Staff Quincy Chiropractor Treats World-Class Athletes

Quincy resident Dr. Joshua Dubin did something this summer that few medical professionals can claim — he treated a number of the world's elite athletes at the 2000 International Triathlon Union (ITU) Long Distance Triathlon World Championships in Nice, France.

Dr. Dubin was the only chiropractor in the United States selected as a member of the Team USA medical staff for this event, which took place in June. Attracting more than 2,000 participants and over 100 of the world's top professional triathletes, the competition tested skills and determination with a 2.5-mile swim, a 74-mile bike ride and an 18.6-mile run.

Dr. Dubin was there to treat those athletes injured while training for the event in the days preceding the competition, as well as to provide examinations and techniques for performing at maximum potential.

He worked eight hours a day for six days, treating athletes during their pre-event training, including U.S. professional triathlete Cameron Wifford, who finished eighth in the competition and just won his first Ironman title at this year's Lake Placid Ironman competition.

"It was a great feeling to be part of the medical staff representing the United States," Dr. Dubin said. "I was proud to have been selected, and proud of the care we provided to all of the athletes. We quickly distinguished ourselves and were overwhelmed by the positive responses we received from the athletes."

Selection for the medical team is determined by a committee review, in which applicants are chosen based on their experience and training. According to Tim Yount, deputy director of USA Triathlon, the national governing body for the sport of triathlon in the United States, Dr. Dubin has been selected four times to participate on their medical teams.

"This is a tribute to his background and his ability to work with athletes," Yount said. "Josh's energy, experience and great personality allow him to work with athletes in a way that isn't stressing to them or imposing."

A serious athlete who has run the Boston Marathon twice, Dr. Dubin was selected in part because of his experience with Active Release Technique (ART); he was the first doctor certified in ART in Massachusetts. ART is one of the most effective deep tissue techniques for breaking down scar tissue/adhesions and restoring function. "Athletes train intensely for a competition like this," Dr. Dubin said. "Swimmers, bikers and runners often encounter problems with their neck, mid-back, low-back, shoulders, hips, knees and ankles; treatment during training before the competition frequently helps them to continue functioning at their maximum level. Many of the athletes admit that proper treatment during training before the race can make all the difference between succeeding and failing."

Dr. Dubin is a Certified Chiropractic Sports Physician, a Certified Strength Conditioning Specialist, and served as a member of the American Chiropractic Association's Sports Physician Team at the Ironman Competition in Kona, Hawaii, in 1995. He has raised more than $10,000 for charity in the last five years by running in the Boston Marathon and by cycling in the Pan-Mass Challenge. Additionally, he earned a spot on the USA duathlon team last year that competed in Huntersville, N.C.

The triathlon has now been accepted into the Olympic program and will be included in the 2000 Olympic Games in Sydney, Australia, next month.

Limited Openings For Recreation Volleyball Clinic

The Quincy Recreation Department has limited openings for its volleyball clinic, which will be held Aug. 21-25 at the North Quincy High School gym from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. under the direction of Quincy head coach Christine Barrett.

The clinic is for boys and girls ages 12-18, and is part of the Recreation Department's self-supporting sports clinics and workshop programs.

Instruction will include a variety of individual skills from defense to offense. For beginners, emphasis will be on passing and serving, while the advanced players will concentrate on attack.

The clinic will also include instruction by some top collegiate players as well as guest coaches. Competition experiences of doubles, triples and 6-on-6 will highlight the clinic.

Cost is $40 and registration is at the Quincy Recreation Department, One Merrymount Parkway, Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. as long as openings exist.

For more information, call 376-1-FUN.

North Quincy Boys Soccer Practices Start Aug. 28

Double-session practices for the North Quincy High School boys' soccer team will begin Monday, Aug. 28.

All boys interested in playing who have not yet received detailed information about the upcoming season, should contact head coach Robert Dano at (617) 773-9087 immediately.

Athletic physicals will be given next week at the NQHS Nurse's Office. The season opens Friday, Sept. 8 with a non-league game at Norwell.

NQHS Girls' Swim Coach Sought

A coaching position for girls' swimming at North Quincy High School is available for the fall season.

Interested parties should contact NQ athletic director Brian Buckley. The swim team is a cooperative team with Quincy High School. For more information, call the athletic office at 984-8912.

10 Local Youngsters Win State Hersey Track Titles

Recreation Director Barry Welch announces 10 participants from Quincy Recreation qualifiers won state championships at the recent Hersey's National Track and Field meet.

Five of those winners will represent Quincy at the National finals in Hersey, Pa. They are Quincy residents Krystin Newsom and Alex Nee, who are state champions in the ages 9-10 4x100 meter relay along with Nicole Affannato of Whitman and Taylor Raftery of Walpole. They will be joined by Guled Ali, who is the ages 13-14 300 meter state champion.

The other five qualifiers from Quincy who also won state titles are Joanna Timmons (ages 9-10 100 meter), and Dave Allen, Nicholas Poles, Shane Regan and Tim Stille (ages 9-10 4x100 meter relay). Affannato also won the ages 9-10 standing broad jump.

"This program is designed to introduce physical fitness through track and field events as well as producing good experiences for kids that are fun," Welch said. "I want to congratulate the champions and acknowledge the work of the members of the Quincy Recreation staff who each year supervise this world class event. A special thanks goes to Geoff Hennessey of the Quincy Track Club for serving as a volunteer meet director."

The Hersey Track and Field program is for boys and girls ages 9-14. Thousands of local meets are conducted throughout the nation. Winners of local meets take part in the state championship. The state champions are selected by region to participate in the National finals with all expenses paid for by Hersey foods.

Quincy participants who qualified for the state championship are:

Entry Forms Available For City Tennis Tourney

Entry forms are now available for the Quincy Recreation Department's 30th annual City Tennis Championships, announces Recreation Director Barry Welch.

Deadline for entry is Thursday, Aug. 31 and the tournament will start Wednesday, Sept. 6. The forms can be picked up at the Quincy Municipal Credit Union, which has once again agreed to serve as co-sponsor, the Recreation Office, City Hall and at various tennis courts throughout the city.

"This is the 30th consecutive year we have supervised this event and are grateful to the Credit Union for its sponsorship," Welch said. "This a wonderful activity for Quincy residents of all ages to take part in a tournament that has no equal in tradition, size and quality of play."

Cost is $11 for adults and $8 for youth. Matches are played nights and weekends at the Russell Park tennis courts on the grounds of the Center for Technical Education.

Events scheduled are men's 50 and over; men's 35 and over; men's singles; men's doubles; women's 35 and over; women's singles; women's doubles; boys' 16 and under; girls' 16 and under.

der; mixed doubles; and a special event, men's "B," which is open to all participants in the men's singles who are defeated in the first round.

The tournament, which is believed to be the largest municipal tournament in New England, will be directed by John Franceschini, who has guided the event for over 20 years.

For more information, call the Quincy Recreation Department at 376-1394.

Quincy Players On Elite Baseball Squad

Pat Bregoli and Keith Doherty, both of Quincy, were on the South Shore Baseball Club's elite Seadogs/AAU 16-and-under

"Red" team that competed in the prestigious Arby's Super 7 World Series in Atlanta last week.

The world series, held Aug. 9-13, was played on the campuses of Georgia Tech and Kennesaw State University. There was also a skills competition and a home run derby.

The Seadogs accepted the invitation from the host East Cobb Astros — six-time defending 16U Junior Olympic champions. The Seadogs finished third in last year's 16U Nationals.

The East Cobb Astros have more than 25 former players in Major League Baseball, including the Atlanta Braves' Kevin Millwood and the Pittsburgh Pirates' Jason Kendall and Chris Benson.

The other five invitees were the Bayside Yankees (Alex Rodriguez, Johnny Damon), Chet Lemon Juice (Fla.), Orange County Dawgs (Calif.), Blue Springs Sluggers (Kan.) and Maryland Orioles (sponsored by the Baltimore Orioles).

Before the world series, the Seadogs, 2000 Massachusetts AAU champions, played in the AAU Baseball National Championships in Kissimmee, Fla.

Tara Houghton Running For Research

Tara Houghton of Quincy has been training with the Arthritis Foundation's "Joints in Motion Training Team" since June to run Dublin's "Friendly Marathon" Oct. 30.

In addition to the challenge of running 26.2 miles, Houghton has to raise $3,800 in pledges to support arthritis research, community education and outreach programs for the millions of Americans affected by this debilitating disease.

If you would like to contribute, checks should be made payable to the Arthritis Foundation and sent to Tara Houghton, 81 Bigelow St., Quincy 02169. Contributions are tax deductible.

Getting Enough Calcium In A Healthy Diet

(NAPS) -- The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) increased the recommended daily value for calcium from 800 milligrams (mg) to 1,000 mg.

This move, made in response to the growing evidence of the health benefits of calcium—including strong teeth and bones—also points to an increasing gap between the recommended daily amount of calcium and the amount Americans actually consume.

According to the United States Department of Agriculture's Continuing Survey of Food Intake by Individuals, an estimated 90 percent of adult women don't get enough calcium in their diets. Eighty-eight percent of teenage girls fall short, as do 73 percent of adult men and 68 percent of teenage boys. And 30 percent of children 5 and under fail to meet the necessary requirement.

Since the FDA's announcement, there has been a growing consumer demand for more sources of calcium. Many food categories have reacted to this demand by

STRESS FRACTURES AND BALLET DANCERS

Stress fractures are "hairline" anywhere from 4 to 8 weeks. In breaks in bones usually caused by a repetitive load on a portion of that bone. Activities such as marching, jogging and dancing can predispose a person to stress fractures. In ballet dancers the base (bottom portion vs the "head") of the second metatarsal has been observed to the most common site. Interestingly, risk factors for developing these injuries include a poor diet, improper training techniques and irregularities with menstruation (this appears to be common in young professional women dancers).

Treatment consists of rest, various casting possibilities, and other modalities aimed at relieving symptoms. Healing can take

Hearing aid "Tips from Tobias"

How does the consumer know what an aid should cost?

You could compare price but what is the exact product brand and model? What warranties and services are included? Does a discount refer to a suggested retail price or a "real discount" from an already fair price? If a company always sells a product for ten dollars, don't be told it's fifteen and a "SPECIAL" five dollars off because it's "Cousin Ed's Birthday Sale!" Check out the "specialists" entire package! What is the extent of their training, experience and equipment? Are they Board Certified? Can they modify and repair cracked hearing aids or loose fitting aids in the office without having to send them back to the factory for costly repairs. What is your gut feeling when you meet with them! Your hearing aid purchase does not just buy you a hearing aid, it pays for your specialists expertise, level of commitment and the sophisticated equipment to serve you properly. To select a competent specialist, visit a few that are Board Certified H.I.S. A hearing aid purchase is a marriage between patient and specialist. Properly matched, you'll never stray. So shop carefully and say "I do" to the right one! Now you go and spread the news! Steve Stephen Tobias Hearing Center 488 Quincy Ave, Quincy (next to shipyard) 617 770-3395

Taste Of Quincy Farmers' Market Aug. 18

Mark Hall, Chef de Cuisine of The Elephant Walk of Brookline, will make a guest appearance at Quincy Farmers' Market Friday, Aug. 18 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Hall will cook up a variety of farm fresh vegetables from the market for the consumers to sample.

Quincy Farmers' Market, an open air public market, is held Fridays at John Hancock municipal parking lot, on Chestnut St. from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Hall will answer consumer questions on fresh vegetable preparations and give demonstrations on cooking techniques. Patrons are invited to sample entries and personally greet him.

Hall grew up on working farm in upstate New York. An active member of the national organization, Chefs Collaborative 2000, Hall supports the organization's goal of promoting local farms and organic produce.

As a young man, Hall did not set out to become a chef. While attending a hotel management school he decided to learn more about what went on in the kitchen. Time spent with a French chef quickly convinced him he belonged in the hotel's kitchen, not in the office, and his passion for cooking took root.

Hall received his degree from Johnson & Wales University in 1985 after completing the school's advanced culinary arts program. He then began work as a rounds cook at Boston's Ritz-Carlton.

In the last 14 years, Hall has worked at some of Boston's finest restaurants. He says he learned from each position and now has developed his own creative style. Important in all dishes, he says, is a balance of flavors and textures. His flavors are lean and crisp, reflecting classic French combinations. One way he monitors that is to check with his customers several times each night. Complaints or concerns are followed up immediately. Sometimes, dishes are even dropped from the menu.

"It is a real honor that Mark Hall, distinguished member of Chefs Collaborative 2000, is sharing his talent with Quincy Farmers' Market's loyal customers on Aug. 18 at the Taste of Quincy Farmers' Market, and to celebrate the upcoming National Farmers' Market Week," says market manager Harry Johnson. "We appreciate our farmers who serve the citizens of Quincy and surrounding towns."

On Aug. 25, University of Massachusetts Extension will be on hand to do a food and nutrition lecture-demonstrations. Quincy Farmers' Market continues until the end of October.

Harold Endorsed By Newspaper Pressmen's Union

Quincy City Council President Paul Harold, a candidate for Norfolk County Register of Deeds, has been endorsed by Boston Newspaper Printing Pressmen's Union Local 3.

The union represents union pressman and paper handlers for a number of Boston area papers including The Boston Globe, the Boston Herald and The Brockton Enterprise.

In endorsing Harold, Union President Martin Callaghan said, "Both as a state senator and a city councillor, you have clearly demonstrated that you are pro-worker, pro-family and pro-community. I am certain that the citizens of Norfolk County will be well served by you."

Rev. Ann Suzedell New Pastor At Point Congregational

Rev. Ann Suzedell, a Quincy native, is the new senior pastor of Quincy Point Congregational Church.

She was unanimously selected by the congregation at a special meeting Sunday following the morning service.

Rev. Suzedell succeeds Rev. Fred Atwood-Lyon who retired in June, 1999 after serving 15 years as pastor. She will begin her pastorate in early September.

An eight-member Search Committee named to find his successor, met monthly and developed a church profile, a needs assessment and qualifications required for the position.

The opening was advertised in the New England area through the United Church of Christ office.

More than 60 resumes were received and the committee interviewed six candidates, unanimously recommending Rev. Suzedell was born in Quincy and attended the Wollaston School. A graduate of Milton High School, she received her bachelor's degree from Wellesley College, and her Master's of Divinity from Union Theological School in New York City. She was ordained as a United Church of Christ minister in 1974.

Rev. Suzedell was associate pastor at Christ Church in Bethlehem, PA, while serving as a part-time instructor in Christian Theology at Moravian Theological Seminary in Bethlehem. She was an Associate Conference Minister in Michigan for two years with primary responsibilities in administration and pastoral oversight for 57 congregations and over 100 clergy.

Between 1987 and 1989 Rev. Suzedell took course work in conflict resolution and intentional interim ministry. She was the associate conference minister of the United Church of Christ Massachusetts Conference and worked with the office for Church Life and Leadership.

Rev. Suzedell then moved into interim pastorates including the First Congregational Church in Hanover, Central Congregational Church in Newtonville, Payson Park Church in Belmont, and most recently at Hingham Congregational Church. She was interim area minister for the Connecticut Conference of the United Church of Christ between interim pastorates.

Rev. Suzedell has decided to become a full-time pastor.

Search Committee spokesman and member, Robert Gohl, said, "The timing of Rev. Suzedell's decision to return to parish ministry full time, her vast background, her enthusiasm for assisting people and solving their problems were all deciding factors in selecting her. Being a Quincy native, living on Summit Ave. and actually joining the church in the early 1980's all worked in favor of her selection. She was definitely the most qualified. She is an exceptional individual."

Rev. Suzedell enjoys flower and vegetable gardening and is very interested in utilizing the theater arts, music and television in her ministry.

Safe Seniors Program At Squantum Gardens Aug. 30

In response to the rapidly growing scams and violations against senior citizens, the Deware Funeral Homes and Quincy Council on Aging is introducing SCI Smart & Safe Seniors.

This unique and comprehensive senior safety program was created by nationally recognized personal safety expert Robert Stuber. Locally, it is presented by Scott Deware, program's New England coordinator.

Senior citizens and their families can learn critical safety information by attending a free, hour-long presentation Wednesday, Aug. 30 at 11:30 a.m. at The Squantum Gardens Community Center, 83 Saratoga St., Quincy.

Refreshments will be served following the presentation.

The program is designed to help prevent exploitation abuse, as well as address other problems faced by senior citizens by giving seniors a new way to think about their personal safety through decreasing or eliminating the opportunities often given to the criminal to commit a crime.

"The program is filled with valuable information on personal safety, safety at home and how to spot scams," Deware said. Sample lessons include home invasion prevention, safe use of ATM's and how to identify telephone fraud.

Research shows senior citizens are prime targets for crime and are frequent victims of assault and neglect.

For more information about the program, or to learn how your group or club can host a program, call Deware Funeral Home at 617-472-1137.

Neponset Nursing Center Seeking Volunteers

Neponset Circle Skilled Nursing and Rehabilitation Center of Dorchester, which is relocating to Marina Bay this fall, is creating an active volunteer program.

Volunteers are needed to: Assist with activity programs; transport residents to various functions within the facility; visit with residents on a one-to-one basis; sort and deliver resident mail; and college internships.

The Center is a 167-bed skilled nursing facility presently located in a residential neighborhood in Dorchester.

To volunteer, call Michael Roumbakis at 617-282-3600 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Free White Flowering Dogwood Trees

Ten free white flowering dogwood trees will be given to each person who joins The National Arbor Day Foundation during August.

The free trees are part of the non-profit Foundation's Trees for America campaign.

"The white flowering dogwoods will add year-round beauty to your home and neighborhood," John Rosenow, the Foundation's president, said. "Dogwoods have showy spring flowers, scarlet autumn foliage, and red berries which attract songbirds all winter."

The trees will be shipped postpaid at the right time for planting between Oct. 15 and Dec. 10 with enclosed planting instructions. The 6 to 12 inch trees are guaranteed to grow or they will be replaced free of charge.

Members also receive a subscription to the Foundation's colorful bi-monthly publication, Arbor Day, and The Tree Book with information about tree planting and care.

To receive the free trees, send a $10 membership contribution to Ten Dogwoods, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Ave., Nebraska City, NE 68410, by Aug. 31.

A graveside service for Morris Zucker, 92, of Quincy, a retired golf supply salesman, was held Tuesday at Pine Hill Cemetery.

He died Sunday at Quincy Medical Center.

Mr. Zucker owned several dental studios in New England. Born, raised and educated in Boston, he had lived in Quincy for the past 50 years.

There are no immediate survivors.

Arrangements were by Bolea Funeral Home, 116 Franklin St.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

When was the last time you took "time off" to do nothing but think - reflect? Nothing to do but let the mind roam, sometimes without conscious direction.

There is a story told about famous publisher of a well-known magazine. One of his junior editors had swung his office chair around, propped his heels on the window sill and was gazing out into space. The publisher stepped behind him, placed a hand on his shoulder and said quietly, "Don't let me disturb you. I just wanted to tell you that the most important thing you can do is just what you are doing now. Never forget the value of taking ten minutes out to think."

All of us are so pressed these days. Our days are filled with phones, meetings, chores to be done and responsibilities to be taken care of.

Our lives are so filled with doing things that too often we give immediate matters a shallow judgement and future problems little thought at all.

I'm all for taking a little "time off" ... Maybe we'd all be farther ahead if we took time off from getting ahead and gave more time to thinking ahead.

David Lubarsky, 90

Long-Time Grossmans Employee;
Patriot Ledger Sports Writer

Graveside services for David Lubarsky, 90, of Quincy, a former employee of Grossman's and a freelance sports writer for The Patriot Ledger, were held Wednesday at Quincy Hebrew Cemetery, Baker St., West Roxbury.

Mr. Lubarsky died Tuesday at the Quincy Nursing Home.

Mr. Lubarsky worked in the advertising department of Grossman's in Quincy and Braintree and retired after 47 years. He also worked for many years as a freelance sports writer for The Patriot Ledger, beginning under the tutelage of his older brother, Percy Lubarsky, who wrote under the byline Percy Lane.

A lifelong resident of Quincy, he was a graduate of the Hancock School and Quincy High School and was named "Class Wit" by his senior classmates.

He was born at 335 Water St., current site of the Lincoln-Hancock School, and lived there until the age of 13, when he moved to 363 Water St., where he lived for 70 years. For the past six years Mr. Lubarsky had lived at the Fenno House in Wollaston.

An avid sports fan and a coach of local youth teams, he covered mainly local high school sports for the Ledger.

A Sunbeams column in The Quincy Sun in 1997 noted that his knowledge and memory of sports facts — local and national — earned him the reputation as "a walking sports encyclopedia."

It said Mr. Lubarsky could "still rattle off the scores of all the Quincy-North football games and who scored the touchdowns."

And that he could also "tell you how many people were in the stands and what the temperature was."

He was featured in a 1927 Boston Herald Traveler article for forming a junior baseball league after scandals had wracked the sport and Babe Ruth had called for a clean-up of the game.

He was the brother of the late Percy Lane, Harry Lubar, Rebecca Lubarsky, Louis Lubarsky, and Anne Lubarsky.

He is survived by two nieces, Enid Lubarsky and Harriet Miller; and two nephews, Lewis and Edward Lubar.

Funeral arrangements were by Breznjak-Rodman Funeral Directors, 1251 Washington St., Newton.

Donations may be made to charity.

Social Security Testing Internet Technologies

By LAURIE ZASTROW

The Social Security Administration is partnering with CommerceNet, a nonprofit consortium, to test a variety of Internet technologies to determine if they can be used by the agency to enhance customer service.

Social Security envisions utilizing Internet services to allow customers to interact with an agency representative while they are online at Social Security's website.

The Internet has tremendous potential to expand and improve customer service at Social Security. But before we move forward, we must first test these technologies to determine if they are practicable and to ensure that they meet Social Security's strict standards for protecting customer privacy.

CommerceNet brings together a number of private companies to work with Social Security in a tightly controlled lab at the Social Security Administration. They will begin to integrate various methods of providing customer service such as the telephone and the Internet.

Some of the technologies to be tested include:

- Instant messaging which will allow the customer to type questions and receive an immediate response from a Social Security customer representative

- Secure email that will allow the customer to send and receive personal information from their Social Security records

- Voice over the Internet which will allow the customer to have a phone conversation with a Social Security representative while on the Social Security website

By working with CommerceNet, we can create a unique working environment to develop and test service options for our customers. We appreciate the opportunity to work with them and its member organizations and are looking forward to future public/private sector technological collaborations to improve public service.

(Laurie Zastrow is Social Security manager in Quincy.)

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be the Zodiac's Sheik of Sheep, but Cupid could soon turn you into a doting little Lamb who wants to be somebody's very special someone.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your gift for creating order out of chaos might be severely tested, as problems continue to arise. Be alert. Someone might be trying to undercut your efforts.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A romance that seemed to have a chance for a long run could be winding down instead. Take time to assess your true feelings before attempting to restart it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) More allies rally around as you deal with your workplace challenger. Things are much easier on the home front, where good news brings cheer to you and your kin.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) An unexpected complication might force you to change your usual travel plans. But instead of growling over the situation, see it as a chance for a new experience.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) That hazy atmosphere you've been living under is clearing up. Things become more defined and easier to deal with. Celebrate with that special person.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Expect to learn some surprising facts about some people in your life as you sort out a misunderstanding. Everyone benefits when the air is finally cleared.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your aspects are positive for new ventures. As usual, let your sharp insight guide you as you consider a new undertaking. Travel is also favored.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) If you've been planning a career change, you could soon get some exciting news. Positive developments are also favored on the home front.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A long-time relationship with a partner or spouse is put to a severe emotional test. Your strength and innate wisdom will help you get through the difficult times.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Continue to make the needs of your loved ones your priority, despite distractions. Once things are settled in your personal life, you can deal with other challenges.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Go with the flow and let this new relationship develop before you make a commitment. Things you might have missed will come to the surface with time.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You have a flair for the dramatic. You also have a hot temper, which you often struggle to keep under control so you can remain the Cool Cat that people admire.

Ayers Faults Cellucci For Not Signing Community Preservation Act

A group representing more than 50 organizations around the state gathered at the State House recently to denounce Governor Paul Cellucci's action to kill the Community Preservation Act (CPA) for this session.

The bill, which would protect open space, historical monuments, and create new affordable housing in Massachusetts, was sent back to the Legislature by the governor Aug. 4. Organizations from around the state, realtors, and even Environmental Affairs Secretary Robert Durand have all expressed their disappointment over the governor's decision.

Locally, State Rep. Bruce Ayers also reacted angrily to Cellucci's refusal to sign the CPA, which would help communities buy undeveloped land. "This bill would have significantly affected Quincy and the South Shore where rapid growth is cutting deeply into remaining undeveloped land. It has also concluded 13 years of efforts to protect the state's riverbanks, farmlands, open fields, and other green spaces," said Ayers.

The bill, Ayers said, was strongly supported by the Quincy Open Space Task Force, Quincy City Council, and Mayor James Sheets. It would have raised funds on transaction files registered with the Registry of Deeds and Land Court.

Ayers noted that the State Delegation and Senator Michael Morrissey had worked hard to support the bill and were disappointed by Cellucci's refusal to sign.

The protest rally at the State House was led by Marcia Molay, chairperson of the CPA Coalition which has worked for the last 15 years on passage of the bill. "This kind of surprise is no good for anybody," Molay said. "We are terribly disappointed and upset at the governor's not signing the bill as he had suggested he would."

Laura Johnson, president of the Massachusetts Audubon Society, encouraged Senate President Thomas Birmingham and Speaker of the House Thomas Finneran to resurrect the bill and send it to Cellucci's desk by January 10, 2001. "Massachusetts continues to lose 44 acres of open space to the bulldozer every day," Johnson said. "This pace of development threatens the survival of our Commonwealth's rarest natural treasures. Our communities need the Community Preservation Act now to ensure a vibrant, healthy landscape for years to come."

Molay and Johnson were joined in their criticism of the governor's action by: Chris Norris, assistant director of the Citizens Housing and Planning Association; Margaret Dyson, president of Historic Massachusetts, Inc.; and James Gomes, president of the Environmental League of Massachusetts.

"It appears that the governor does not want a substantive matching fund and that he would prefer to shift the burden for issues his administration should be addressing -- affordable housing, open space, and historic preservation -- onto cities and towns," said Norris. "The House, Senate, and supporters compromised to get this bill passed. If the governor wanted to implement the Community Preservation Act, he would have returned the bill to the Legislature promptly rather than waiting until after formal sessions ended."

Gomes added: "Signing the bill was a no-brainer, but he (Cellucci) blew it. It just shows the governor doesn't care much about open space or affordable housing."

Harbor Cruise To Save Lot 23 Set For Aug. 23

The Coalition To Save The Bird Sanctuary (Lot 23) is sponsoring The Great Open Space Harbor Cruise aboard the Boston Bell which departs Marina Bay Wednesday, Aug. 23, at 7 p.m. and returns at 10 p.m.

A $30 donation includes refreshments.

The coalition will provide the latest news on the ongoing effort to save the Bird Sanctuary and Quincy's other environmentally sensitive parcels.

Space is limited; RSVP date was Wednesday.

Checks should be made payable to "NEPRWA" and sent to: The Coalition To Save The Bird Sanctuary (Lot 23) c/o Neponset River Watershed Association, 490 Chapman St., Suite 1B, Canton 02021, (781) 575-0354.

Separate donations are also welcome.

The Marina Bay Bird Sanctuary, also known as Lot 23, is the former six-acre patch of marsh-edge woods next to the rotary at Marina Bay. A six-story, 136-unit luxury apartment building -- The Meadows at Marina Bay -- is proposed for the site but the permit is being challenged in the State Appeals Court.

SPARE CHANGE

During the downsizing era of the 1980s, many car manufacturers outfitted their vehicles with "mini spares" in the interest of conserving trunk space. These tires were never designed for sustained use, and many owners' manuals cautioned against driving them for more than 50 miles or at more than 50 miles per hour. Moreover, mini spares are less wide than original tires, which changes the handling characteristics of the car and increases braking distances. Fortunately, most car manufacturers have been equipping their vehicles with full-sized spare tires since the early 1990s. As many mini spares can still be found in older cars, owners of these vehicles are urged to purchase normal-sized wheels and tires for reasons of safety and convenience.

The safety of our customers and their families is very important to us here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO and we want you to be informed. We are small enough to provide friendly, personal service and large enough to have the latest, most modern equipment and outstanding ASE Certified technicians. You can trust your auto repairs to us at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Open: Mon-Fri 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." We're also your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: When purchasing a full-sized spare wheel and tire to replace a mini spare, consider a basic steel rim with the right size/load rating with the correct bolt pattern.

State Adds $4,762 To QCAP Head Start Funds

Rep. Stephen Tobin announces the Massachusetts Children's Trust Fund (CTF) will award $133,000 to community-based organizations throughout the Commonwealth to fund 29 programs that provide support and education to parents.

"These programs are necessary," said Tobin, "because they help parents learn to reduce family stress, develop stronger parenting skills, understand child development, learn behavior management techniques, and use community resources to break the isolation many families experience."

CTF will provide $4,762 to Quincy Community Action Head Start Program (QCAP Head Start) for their Parents Together workshop. The workshop will focus on the many challenges that and Weymouth. For more information regarding QCAP Head Start, contact Stephanie Veeder at (617) 479-8181x150.

"Our goal is to increase the number of easily accessible, high quality programs available to parents of young children," Suzin Bartley, CTF executive director, said.

Every year CTF hears from parents who explain that parenting programs help them become better at managing their children's behavior.

"Parents face many obstacles in raising their children, and all parents can benefit from this kind of support," said Bartley.

The Children's Trust Fund leads statewide efforts to strengthen and support parents.

For more information about the programs funded through CTF, or help parents and children in your community, call (888) 775-4KIDS or write the Children's Trust Fund, 294 Washington St., Suite 640, Boston, MA 02108.

Seek Deadline Extension For Faxon House

Clergy Rally Support For Detox Center

By CRAIG SALTERS

Clergy from across the city are uniting in support of the Faxon House Recovery Detoxification Center and will ask Quincy Medical Center to extend the Sept. 15 deadline for the center to move from its 120 Whitwell St. location.

This as the center makes preliminary inquiries into two very promising future sites: the former Resthaven Nursing Facility in East Braintree and the recently closed Robbin House Nursing Facility on the McGrath Highway, Quincy.

Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister of the United First Parish Church in Quincy Center and a leader in the Quincy Interfaith Council, is calling for a meeting of said council to draft and sign a letter requesting that QMC extend the moving date for Faxon House until it can find a new site.

"We want to work with the hospital in making sure that this important facility remains in or near Quincy for the sake of the community," Rev. Bennett said. "If it (Faxon House) closes, we'd lose 32 beds that serve Quincy. It would be a serious and unacceptable loss."

Bennett's concern was echoed by Rev. John Swanson, pastor of the Union Congregational Church and onetime chaplain at Faxon House, who helped bring the matter to the Interfaith Council's attention. Said Rev. Swanson:

"We fully respect the decision of the hospital and understand that Faxon House cannot be there indefinitely, but we'd like them to be able to stay until they can re-locate into one of these new sites. We all went to bat for Quincy Medical Center to keep them open and now Faxon House is in a similar position."

Rev. Swanson added that he expected a very positive response from the 49 or so clergy members involved in the Quincy Interfaith Council, noting that people of all religious faiths and backgrounds "understand the importance of this facility."

Faxon House, an inpatient alcohol and substance abuse treatment center, was established in 1972 and is the oldest such program in the state. It has provided treatment for over 50,000 clients and is the only treatment center of its kind between Plymouth and Boston.

The center was officially notified in May that QMC intended to raze the building to create more parking for the hospital. Since then, it has actively sought a new facility and has started a campaign to raise $100,000 to cover moving expenses.

Join Two Million Others At World Youth Day Mass Quincy Group Returns From Rome Pilgrimage

By CRAIG SALTERS

The Quincy Catholic Inter-Parish Pilgrimage, a group of 27 teens and young adults representing all nine Catholic parishes in the city, has returned from its journey to Rome Aug. 14-21 to take part in the World Youth Day Mass officiated by Pope John Paul II.

The group, led by Fr. Robert Monagle of St. Joseph's Church, took part in a Saturday night vigil and Sunday mass which drew an audience of over two million people, the largest gathering in the history of Rome or, for that matter, Europe.

"It was a unique experience for all of us," said Fr. Monagle after his return home from the Mass. "First of all, it was exciting for our kids to be in Rome and see the center of our Catholic church, but it was also great to see the flags of all the countries and realize that, despite our cultural differences, everyone in that field shared the same faith."

Youth making the Rome pilgrimage with Fr. Monagle were: Jennifer Kern and Kate Nutley, St. John's; Lisa Kelly, Kate Kelly, Emma March, Megan Hurley, Amy Mattulina, and Sarah Garber, St. Mary's; Nora Austin, St. Boniface; Sean Glennon, Sacred Heart; Kim Doyle, Luis Barerra, Eric DiPietro, and Andrea Belcastro, St. Jo-

Decision Up To City Council Residents Protest Proposed Gas Pumps

Roughly 30 to 40 protesters gathered outside the Stop & Shop on Newport Ave. Friday evening to protest the three-pump gas station now proposed for the supermarket's parking lot.

The planning board recently approved the plan, which would remove 30 of the store's 432 parking spaces and replace them with a self-service gas station approximately at the corner of Newport Ave. and Holbrook Rd.

The City Council, however, is scheduled to decide on the issue in September and Greg Newton, president of the Montclair and Wollaston Neighborhood Association and the man who organized the demonstration, wants city councillors and the mayor to know that residents are opposed.

"We mean business," Newton said. "We want people to know that we are opposed to this gas station and that we are asking for the council's support."

Newton cited traffic, parking, pollution, and aesthetic problems with the gas station and added that the area endangers a school crossing used by North Quincy High School, Atlantic Middle School, and the Sacred Heart School.

"There's the neighborhood, right there," said Newton, pointing to a long line of homes on Fayette St. arguing that neighborhoods were not so close where Stop & Shop has its other gas stations.

The protest took place during Friday rush hour traffic and many drivers honked in approval at signs that read: "Danger, School Crossing," "Noxious Fumes," "Less parking," and "More traffic."

"This is the busiest Stop & Shop in the country and that will make this (the proposed pumps) one of the busiest gas stations," Newton said. "The neighborhood just doesn't need it."

The original deadline for the City Council to hold a public hearing and vote on the P.U.D. amendment to allow the gas station was June 25. That deadline was extended to Sept. 25 after a request from Stop & Shop and 7-0 approval by the council.

Human Rights Commission To Meet

The Mayor's Commission on Human Rights will meet Tuesday, Aug. 29 at 5:30 p.m. in the City Hall second floor conference room. Chairman Nancy MacDonald said the commission is committed to involving the community in solving problems by establishing networks working together in each neighborhood to promote tolerance. It is also committed, she said, to establishing a strong communication mechanism to provide a channel of information to each group.

The public is invited to attend the commission meetings.

Stop & Shop Food Drive For Quincy Crisis Center

Quincy Crisis Center

The Stop & Shop supermarkets at Southern Artery and Newport Ave. are holding a food drive every day until Saturday for the Quincy Crisis Center, a program partner of the Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion.

Display bins are set up in each store for those who wish to donate food for the Crisis Center's "Food for Families" pantry.

Mr. Fissel-Bee and Happy Clowns will entertain at both stores Saturday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. to celebrate the event with face painting, balloon animals, and entertainment for the whole family.

Everyone is invited and all donations will benefit the Quincy Crisis Center.

We need you.

SENSATIONAL SEDONA

A trip to Sedona, Arizona is about breathtaking scenery and natural beauty. Red rock formations, for which the southwest is known, include the incredible Cathedral Rock and the Snoppy Rock, which looks strikingly like the cartoon beagle. Day trips to the Grand Canyon and the Meteor Crater - the country's largest - are feasible when staying in Sedona. Because the town sits on the mile-high Mogollon Rim of the Colorado plateau, the air is about 20 cooler than in Phoenix or Tucson. Sedona's jeep tours have become very popular, but you can also choose to ride in a hot-air balloon, helicopter, or bi-plane to see the sights. For more active participation, Sedona, enhancing its rich beauty.

Will Receive $300,000 In Disaster Prevention Funds City Signs On To FEMA's Project Impact Program

Quincy will receive $300,000 in disaster prevention funds from Project Impact, a grant program run by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA).

The funds, which have been matched with $100,000 from the city, are being used primarily to "flood-proof" residential and commercial property in the city. Preventive measures include elevating existing structures, production of an informational brochure with the help of Project Impact's many community partners, and the Global Information System (GIS) mapping of the city's floodplains, which should be completed by 2001 and will allow the city to pinpoint potential flood areas on a parcel by parcel basis.

Federal, state, and local

MAYOR JAMES SHEETS signs the Project Impact Partnership, which will bring $300,000 in FEMA funds to the city for the purposes of disaster prevention, mainly in the area of flooding.

officials, as well as many community partners, attended signing ceremonies Thursday.

Mayor James Sheets said it was "only appropriate" Quincy receive the funds for hazard mitigation, given the city's 27 miles of coastline and its long history of flood problems in many neighborhoods. He also said how proud he was that Quincy was only the second Massachusetts community accepted for the Project Impact grant program.

(Cont'd on page 28)

PROJECT IMPACT PARTNERS: Representing their respective agencies at recent Project Impact signing ceremonies were, from left: Richard Zingarelli, Flood Hazard Management Program, Department of Environmental Management; Walter White, director of Inspectional Services and co-chairman of the city's Project Impact efforts; Thomas Rodger, Area 2 director, Southeastern Massachusetts, Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency; and Kenneth Horak, deputy director, Region 1, Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Now, The Real Frank McCauley

Frank McCauley appears smitten with or bitten by the literary bug.

He just recently completed his first book, A Political History of Quincy, which is still at the printers and has already started a new one.

His autobiography.

"I've been fooling around with it," he says. "I have a couple of chapters done."

Will it be revealing?

"Yes," he insists. "It's about the real Frank McCauley. Very revealing."

Don't tell us that after all these years being known as the Jack Benny of Quincy politics for his natural talent for squeezing municipal -- and personal -- pennies he is going to turn out to be a Diamond Jim Brady!

You never can tell.

We'll just have to wait and see.

McCAULEY

MEANWHILE, there seems to be a lot of interest in McCauley's A Political History of Quincy.

A Sun reader and former Quincy resident, Jane Peppard who now lives in Georgetown, Tex. saw the recent column on the book and writes:

"Since I lived in Quincy for 22 years, I was most interested in obtaining a copy of A Political History of Quincy. An autographed one would be very welcome.

"How can I get one of them?"

We turned her letter over to McCauley who says: "I will take care of it. I will be glad to see that she gets a copy."

An autographed one, too.

ANOTHER SUN READER, Rt. Rev. Peter Hart, formerly of Blessed Sacrament Church, Houghs Neck, also saw the column and contacted McCauley directly to obtain a copy of the book.

Msgr. Hart, now retired, assists at St. Pious Church in Lynn and is a long-time friend of McCauley.

McCauley and Walter Hannon were altar boys at Blessed Sacrament Church when a young Fr. Hart was curate there in the mid 1930s-1940s.

Imagine two former altar boys at the same church going on to become mayor of Quincy?

McCauley will present Msgr. Hart with one of his personal copies.

AND, another Sun reader, former School Committeeman Charles Sweeny wants McCauley to set aside a copy for him.

"I want to be sure to get one before they are all sold out," he says.

That's how good he thinks the book is going to be, Frank.

There's been a slight delay in the binding of the book but McCauley says it should still be ready by the latter part of September.

The 350-page book ($19.95) covers 111 years of Quincy's political history from 1889 when Quincy changed from a town to a city government to Mayor James Sheets sixth term inauguration last Jan. 3.

One thousand hard-cover copies are being printed as the first edition.

McCauley wrote the book in long-hand and his wife, Sandra, typed the chapters on a word processor and helped edit it.

It was a two-year labor of love for both. They did it free -- no fee.

Sheets asked McCauley to write the book as part of the city's celebration of the millennium.

A signing event for the book is planned for late September -- or now, maybe, early October -- probably at the Quincy Historical Society.

WEDDING BELLS WILL ring next May 19 at St. Ann's Church for Ward 3 Councillor Pat McDermott and the girl of his dreams, Tracy Wilson.

Pat, a true romantic, popped the question on bended knee on Rowe's Wharf in Boston while on a date and slipped a handsome diamond on Tracy's finger.

Tracy and Pat met on the campaign trail in 1997 while he was running for the Ward 3 seat and she for school committee.

She is now an assistant district attorney in D.A. Bill Keating's office assigned to prosecuting cases in district courts and winning her share of them.

Pat graduated from Suffolk Law School this June and took the Massachusetts Bar Exam. He's waiting for the results due in November.

Tracy is a graduate of the Massachusetts School of Law and has already passed the bar.

So, they will not only be husband and wife, but husband and wife lawyers, too. Should make for some interesting advice around the house.

When Pat says "I do!" next May, it will reduce the bachelors to three in the City Council: Mike D'Amico, Paul Harold and Joseph Newton.

Meanwhile, congratulations and best wishes to a great young couple.

AN ARTICLE APPEARED recently in The Sun on the Derbes family being honored by the Friends of the Quincy High School Alumni Association.

The family was selected as the Quincy Alumni Family of the Month for its long-time community involvement and strong link to Quincy High School.

Nine members of the family including the five brothers who are the Derbes brothers contracting company are all graduates of QHS.

A reader, identifying himself or herself as a "Friend of the Family," writes:

"The article itself was wonderful mentioning the family's various accomplishments" but there was "virtually no acknowledgment" of one of the brothers, Toffee Derbes.

And adds: "He is missing from the picture yet only mentioned as a graduate of Quincy High School."

Somehow some of the material about Toffee didn't make it into print. He is a major figure in the Derbes Brothers company and was an outstanding football player at QHS where he graduated in 1959. In fact, he was so good, he was offered a full scholarship to West Point but did not implement it.

The other four brothers are Bob, Dick, Kim and Frank. Bob, Dick and Kim were also football standouts at Quincy with Toffee, and passed jersey No. 25 from one to the other as they graduated.

The company is both well respected and successful and the brothers give back to the community in many ways.

Incidentally, the reason Toffee was missing from the photo that accompanied the article was that he was home ill the day the photo was taken.

More Support For A Skate Park

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I am writing to join my voice with Jane Sullivan's for a skate park.

Quincy is way behind in its efforts to show these young athletes that we as a community support them. With the summer Olympics coming, as we show those athletes our support we shun our own future Olympians.

This sport will become an event in future Olympics and Quincy won't have a competitor because we don't care enough to build our kids a safe place to skate. Being in the service industry, I have had a chance to discuss this problem with some of our fine Quincy Police officers, who are fed-up with chasing these good kids out of public places, and for the most part feel bad doing so.

We would make their jobs easier by providing a safe place for these kids to skate! The real sadness here is the fact that Mrs. Sullivan's boys and my own son petitioned for and received a promise from our City Hall Fathers that they would indeed receive a skate park last year!

I guess this is just another hard lesson for our young sons to learn — that government can break their promises, but parents can not.

These kids have tried for three years to achieve this goal — and we have to assume its unattainable. Way to go, Quincy, and City Hall for proving to our kids that they don't matter.

He's With Buchanan

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

It is astonishing that an American candidate for president, who is far superior than all others, is reported to be the least popular. I am talking about Pat Buchanan.

There is no doubt in my mind that Pat Buchanan is set apart from all other presidential candidates. He is, unquestionably, by mind and character the very best presidential candidate not only this time around, but in the last 100 years; a patriot above party, a clergyman without ordination, a lover of mankind.

His political philosophy, domestic and foreign, could be capulated with the angelic hymn:

"Glory to God in the highest,

Peace on Earth,
Good will toward men."

That political philosophy is not only all-American, but also Pan-American and pan-human.

IRS Completes Successful Tax-Filing Season

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The Internal Revenue Service has just completed a very successful tax-filing season and I would like to thank you for your assistance. We couldn't have done it without you.

Your willingness to run IRS news releases over the past several months brought helpful information to your readers. This valuable information included how to take credit for higher education expenses, where to find free walk-in assistance, and how to file electronically.

Thanks to you, almost 708,000 Massachusetts taxpayers filed their 1999 Federal tax returns electronically. Your readers took advantage of filing more accurate returns and receiving faster refunds.

I appreciate the fact that you and your staff provided a generous amount of space for these important tax time messages. I hope we can count on you in the future to help us deliver this vital information to your readers.

Edgewater Beach Marine Biology Tour Sunday

The Environmental Treasures of Quincy program will sponsor an educational walking tour of Edgewater Drive Beach in Houghs Neck Sunday from 3 to 5 p.m.

The tour, free of charge and open to the public, will be led by Phil McLaren, Marine Biology professor from Eastern Nazarene College. McLaren also serves as a consultant to the New England Aquarium for Boston Harbor beaches.

The educational tour will explore the diverse salt water ecosystem of the bay, discovering a wide variety of plants and marine species. It will coincide with the lowest tide of the month, possibly allowing a walk out to Raccoon Island.

Edgewater Drive Beach is located at the eastern edge of Houghs Neck. For those who are traveling from points outside of Houghs Neck, take Sea St. down to Darrow St., bear right at Blessed Sacrament Church, and follow Darrow St. down to the beach.

The Environmental

PROFESSOR PHIL McLAREN will lead a marine biology tour at Edgewater Drive Beach

Treasures of Quincy program is sponsored by the Quincy Park Department. Every month an educational walking tour of an environmentally significant location in Quincy is led by a qualified expert.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Blight Celebrate 50th Anniversary

At a recent gathering held at the Common Market in Quincy, Celia and Duncan Blight of Wollaston celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary.

Fifty years ago, Mr. Blight met his future wife at the Kippawa Lodge in Maine, where they were both working, proposed to her in a row boat, and then married her in the living room of the farmhouse where she grew up in Monmouth, Maine.

The party was hosted by their four children: Irene Lipinski, Debbie Connell, Ralph Blight and Lucy Bean.

The Blights have lived in Quincy for more than 41 years. Mr. Blight is a retired custodian from City Hall and Mrs. Blight a retired bookbinder from Semline Inc.

They have six grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Clam Fritters

We might as well face it, summer is almost over--what summer you ask? And I've been in the kitchen more this summer than any that I can remember.

It was one of those days--drizzling and cool that I prepared clam fritters as an appetizer. So easy and tasty if you love clams as we do. I used fresh minced as they are the best for this particular recipe.

Clam Fritters

a container of fresh minced clamed (they usually come by the pound in a plastic container) about 3 tablespoons bisquick or flour

1 egg

1/4 cup grated cheese (either Romano or parmesan)

salt and pepper to taste

1 teaspoon fresh parsley (chopped)

optional

3 or 4 tablespoons vegetable oil for frying (or olive oil if you wish)

In a bowl, mix the egg, flour, grated cheese, salt and pepper, the parsley until it resembles pancake mix. Add the clams and the juice from the container and blend. If it seems too watery, add a bit more bisquick or flour.

In hot oil, drop by the tablespoons, turn and brown in each side, place on paper towel. Keep in a warming oven until ready to serve.

(P.S. If you don't like clams, I've used a frozen package of cauliflower with the same recipe except to add some water for thinning. After you cook the cauliflower, chop in small pieces. They are almost equally delicious!

THERE WAS GOOD reason for these smiles at Fr. Bill's sixth annual Food Fest and Auction which raised $160,000 for the homeless shelter sponsored by the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition. The smiles belong to, from the left: Food Fest Committee Chairman Jim Wells; Honorary Chairman Sean McDonough, Boston Red Sox sportscaster; Fr. William McCarthy after whom the shelter is named; and Executive Director John Yazwinski.

Food Fest And Auction Net $160,000 For Father Bill's Place

The sixth annual Food Fest and Auction for Father Bill's Place netted $160,000 for the homeless shelter with all proceeds directly benefiting the shelter's guests.

Over 700 people attended the Aug. 15 event, which was held at the Summer House located at Marina Bay. Meals were courtesy of 26 food vendors from the South Shore area.

"We received a tremendous outpouring of support for Father Bill's Place," said Fr. William McCarthy, founder and namesake of the organization. "We were helped not only by those who attended but by the business sponsors who allowed us to raise so much for the shelter. The people of Quincy certainly showed they have hearts filled with compassion."

According to John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Place, the shelter's two locations -- at the old registry building at 38 Broad St. and the former St. John's School on Phipps St. -- are filled to capacity, averaging 110 guests a night.

Sean McDonough, sportscaster for the Boston Red Sox, was the honorary chairman of this year's festivities.

Jim Wells, owner of Abbadessa's Ristorante in Hingham, was chairman of the Food Fest Committee. Co-chairmen of the Auction Committee were Joyce Lawless of Father Bill's Place and Kevin O'Brien of Roche Brothers Supermarkets.

Other committee members included: Fr. William McCarthy, John Yazwinski, Janice Whalen, Linda Carberry, Michael Cheney, Anne Annaccone, Michael Marshall, Beth Veneto, Kay Norton, Lisa Mula, U.S. Sam Rounseville, Jean Kenney, and Charlotte Flatley.

RAFFAEL'S RESTAURANT, North Quincy, was among the 26 food vendors donating to Fr. Bill's Place sixth annual Food Fest. Serving here are chef Joseph Bartuca and Ricco Ricci, co-owner of Raffael's.

Bridget Reaney Participates In Environmental Studies

Bridget Reaney of Quincy recently participated in the Environmental Studies Youth Institute at Hobart and William Smith Colleges in Geneva, N.Y.

The two-week college-level interdisciplinary program for high school students entering their junior or senior year is for the study of nature, and explores the scientific, social and humanistic perspectives of environmental issues.

Research trips include outdoor expeditions to quaking bogs, streams, lakes and mountains in the Adirondacks region.

Acceptance into the program was competitive. Bridget, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Reaney, joined 40 other students from 14 states. College credit was awarded upon completion of the program.

In Celebration Of National Park Service Founding

Free Admission Friday To Adams Historic Sites

It will be free admission Friday at the Adams Mansion and Presidents John and John Quincy Adams birthplaces.

The Adam National Historical Park is joining other National Parks around the country in celebrating the establishment of the National Park Service Aug. 25, 1916.

And, as part of the celebration, is suspending the usual $2 entrance fee for the entire day, Friday.

Tours of the site will be conducted every 30 minutes, on a first come, first serve basis. Tour times will be reserved for visitors at the National Park Service Visitor Center at 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Sq. A trolleybus shuttle service is available to transport visitors to the historic resources of the Adams National Historical Park free of charge.

The National Park Service was created as an agency within the Department of the Interior when President Woodrow Wilson signed an "organic act" Aug. 25, 1916. Originally charged with protecting, conserving, promoting and regulating the use of 40 National Parks in a way that left them "unimpaired for the enjoyment of future generations," the National Park Service today manages over 367 areas and over 80 million acres.

Adams National Historic

Park was established as a unit of the National Park Service Dec. 9, 1946 when by an act of Congress, the Secretary of the Interior accepted on behalf of the American people the "Old House," with all its furnishings and accompanying estate, through a deed of gift, from the Adams Memorial Society.

In 1979, the John Adams and John Quincy Adams Birthplaces, the oldest presidential birthplaces in the nation, were included within the park's boundaries.

In 1993, Adams National Historical Park opened a visitor center, and through a cooperative agreement with the United First Parish Church, began to offer interpretive tours of this structure and of the crypts of the Presidents and First Ladies located within it.

Adams National Historical Park commemorates the lives and achievements of the Adams Family which includes the second President John Adams and the sixth President John Quincy Adams and their descendants.

For more information about the day's activities call the National Park Service Visitor Center at (617) 770-1175.

MAAD Seeking Donations Of Unwanted Cars

Mothers Against Drunk Driving is seeking donations of unwanted cars.

The car campaign helps raise funds for MADD and is being conducted throughout the state. Anyone interested in donating a car is invited to call 1-800-720-6233.

MADD will tow most any car free of charge. Cars need to be intact and the Certificate of Title must be presented at the time of policy. Not only do Mothers Against Drunk Driving benefit from the sale of each vehicle, the person donating may also be able to claim a tax deduction if they itemize their taxes, however, the IRS requires the donor to determine the fair market value.

Two-thirds—67 percent—of homeowners are unhappy with their home decor, according to a survey of 1,000, conducted by the e-commerce web site, Furniture.com. Lack of time to shop is one culprit; the cost of home furnishings, another.

Photographs and prints are among the least expensive and most widely available home decorating tools. In fact, photographs are the most widely used wall art, according to a survey by 3M of 1,098 households, in which 89 percent have photographs on the wall; 68 percent, paintings; 61 percent, prints; 53 percent, posters; 50 percent, children's art; and 46 percent, wreaths.

Hanging photos is daunting to many. While interior designers say there are no hard-and-fast rules, they offer answers to common questions:

• How high? "The bottom of the frame should be between six to 12 inches above the top of a major furniture piece, such as a sofa," suggests Alecia D. Stevens of Alecia Stevens Interiors, Minneapolis, Minn.

• How do I group them?

"Treat the group as one print," says Kiki Kuthringshausen of Keekstudio, Kildeer, Ill. "Stack an even number of similar framed pieces together in rows. Try the arrangement out of the floor before hanging the elements," she says and also recommends adding something dimensional, such as a pair of sconces, wreaths or carved wood artifacts, on either side of the group.

• Fill all voids? No, according to Stevens. "Don't hang art exactly mid-way between two pieces of furniture. Relate it to one, creating an area of 'active' space and an area of 'quiet' space."

Richard, Carol Cahill Earn Trip To Florida

Quincy residents Richard and Carol Cahill of Jack Conway & Co. recently returned from an all-expenses paid trip to the Marriott Harbor Beach Resort in Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., as part of the realty firm's incentive program.

Richard Cahill is president of the company and Carol Cahill is a sales agent in the firm's Wollaston office.

Each year, the company hosts two educational seminars in tropical locations for its top-producing sales agents and managers. More than 45 Conway agents and their guests took part in this year's trip, which featured four days of sightseeing, golf and shopping, as well as workshops on zoning codes, technology trends and financing issues.

In January, 50 sales people and managers took part in another Conway-sponsored trip, the annual Seminar in the Sun, which was held in San Jose, Costa Rica.

"Our sales agents and managers are the most important part of the company, and this is our way to say 'thank you' for all they do every day in the field," said Chairman Jack Conway.

Founded in 1957, Norwell-based Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independently owned real estate company in Massachusetts, with more than 600 agents in 36 offices from Boston to Cape Cod.

Should I Have An Open House To Sell My Home?

Q: "Should I have an open house to sell my home?"

A: An open house can be an effective tool for marketing your home. Buyers and sellers alike find open houses to be a good way to learn market value and educate themselves about what is available.

Invite the neighbors to your open house. You never know, one of them might turn into a buyer. Also, your neighbors might recommend your house to people they know who may be in the market for a new home.

Plan on being away from home during the open house. In the presence of a seller, buyers are more reserved and may not stick around as long. If your attendees are uncomfortable, you may be less likely to find a buyer.

Back To School: Starting Your Child Off On The Right Foot

For most elementary school students, going back to school means an opportunity to learn new skills. No matter what subject -- from understanding the alphabet in kindergarten to memorizing multiplication tables in third grade -- children's minds develop at incredible rates. And, as most parents know, their feet seem to grow almost as quickly.

Although often overlooked, children's growing feet and the shoes they wear are important to their health. According to pediatrician Steven Parker, director of Behavioral and Developmental Pediatrics at Boston Medical Center and co-author of the current edition of Dr. Spock's Baby and Child Care, children who consistently wear shoes that provide a good fit are more likely to have healthy feet as adults.

"Nearly 75 percent of Americans will experience minor to serious foot problems during their lifetime," Dr. Parker said. "Children who wear supportive, properly fitting shoes may avoid becoming part of that statistic."

Most children are born with perfect feet, and childhood marks a critical phase in foot development. In the first two years, a child's foot changes dramatically and much of the permanent development occurs. By the time a child is 8 years old, the soft cartilage in the foot matures and the supporting elements are permanently set. By age 10, 85 percent of a child's foot size is developed.

Parents can ensure the entire process goes smoothly by working with their pediatrician and providing their child with properly fitting shoes. To ensure correct growth and development, Dr. Parker recommends parents have their children's feet examined at every wellness check-up. When shopping for their children, parents should pay attention to more than just the length of the shoe.

Dr. Parker recommends the following tips:

- Be sure shoes provide sufficient arch support for comfort and stability.
- Check for ample cushioning. Don't expect children to break in shoes. If your child feels some discomfort, the shoes are not properly fitted to your child's feet.
- Look for shoes that provide plenty of toe room. Allow an index finger's width from the end of the longest toe to the end of the shoe for growth.
- Ensure that the shoes are durable and flexible in the sole and ball of the foot.

Payless Shoe Source, Inc. has developed the Smart Fit™ line of children's shoes. Using patented technology, the shoes provide critical arch support, cushioning, extra toe room and flexibility in the sole and the ball of the foot. These affordable, quality, durable shoes are available in all the latest styles to appeal to children who have picked up a sense of fashion along with multiplication tables.

For more information about Smart Fit™ shoes or to locate the nearest Payless ShoeSource, visit www.payless.com.

Quincy Group Returns From Rome Pilgrimage

seph's; Sean Brennon; Most Blessed Sacrament; Erin Driscoll, Megan Driscoll, and Courtney Ward, Star of the Sea; and Nick Pulco, St. Ann's.

Matt Williams, a seminarian working at St. Joseph's, and adults Gail Mattulina of St. Mary's and Tim Lewis of Our Lady of Good Counsel, also attended the celebration. Sigrund Denny, Michael Collins, and Roland Borden -- all of the Quincy Young Adult Group -- made the pilgrimage as did Chris Sullivan of Peabody.

For many pilgrims, Fr. Monagle said, raising the roughly $2,500 for the trip was a two-year process involving bake sales, summer and after-school jobs, the selling of entertainment books, the production of "Godspell" recently at St. Mary's, and in some cases the donations of generous parishioners.

Fr. Monagle said the Quincy contingent, like the other two million or so pilgrims, endured the heat and the train ride and the four mile walk to the Mass site, camping overnight in the crowded but, he said, peaceful field. "It was great to see kids gathering for something good," Monagle said. "This was alcohol-free, drug-free. The kids listened to the Pope's message, which was not to be self-centered, to proclaim the gospel and be a witness to Christ, to love your neighbor. It was a very positive message."

Sacred Heart parishioner Sean Glennon, a graduate of North Quincy High School and currently a senior at Suffolk University, called the trip a "once in a lifetime opportunity" and said that, although he was there for only a week, so much was crammed into seven almost sleepless days and nights. "I bought a postcard with six images on it -- St. Peter's Basilica, St. Mary Major, and so on -- and it was amazing when I realized I'd seen every one in the first two days," said Glennon.

Glennon said he will cherish most of the memories from the trip but singled out climbing the dome of St. Peter's Basilica and looking out over the entire city of Rome as his favorite. "I was speechless," Glennon recalled.

Over 800 people from the Boston area attended the week long event, including Cardinal Bernard Law who, Fr. Monagle said, celebrated Mass for the group daily.

SUMMER CAR CARE

Auto Check-Up Eases Summer Driving Worries

A quick and easy automotive check-up can help prepare a vehicle for the stress of summer's high temperatures and increase reliability on long road trips, according to AAA Southern New England.

"The cold temperatures may be far behind us, but summer heat can be just as hard on automobiles as the fiercest winter weather," said John Paul, AAA's Car Doctor. "A few minutes spent checking your car's vital components can help you enjoy a summer of trouble-free driving."

To help prevent dangerous and inconvenient tire failure, examine tires for uneven or excessive tread wear.

Make sure all tires, including the spare, are inflated properly.

With the engine off, look for worn or cracked belts and damaged, blistered, or soft hoses. Inspect antifreeze/coolant level and condition, making certain the proper 50/50 mixture of water and coolant is present.

Check motor oil level and condition. If driving under extreme conditions — such as very hot temperatures or towing a heavy trailer — switch to a motor oil with a higher viscosity. Check the owner's manual for specific oil recommendations.

If you are not comfortable performing this inspection yourself, a qualified auto service facility, such as those recognized by AAA's Approved Auto Repair Program, can conduct a thorough examination.

Because even properly maintained vehicles can break down, AAA urges motorists to equip their vehicle with an emergency kit containing at least the following items: flashlight with extra batteries, warning devices such as flares or reflective triangles, jumper cables, and a first aid kit. A cellular phone provides an easy way to summon emergency assistance.

Repair 101:

Dealing With Today's Rolling Computers

Microprocessors. Sensors. Circuits. Stored data. Typical computer jargon, right? Surprisingly, these are also typical topics for today's automotive technicians.

Vehicles have grown more sophisticated over the past two decades. The wonderful options and systems we love — electronic seats, climate control, anti-lock braking systems, remote door unlock — require computer processing and monitoring. In order to meet changing customer expectations, automakers now must design sophisticated vehicles that are run by small but powerful computers. In fact, new vehicles have computing power sufficient to fly a 747 airplane.

And it's not just this year's models. Any vehicle manufactured since the 1980's has computerized components. Even "basic" models, without many options or extras, rely on computer circuits to operate efficiently.

An advantage to this new technology and engineering is that many of the maintenance and repair intervals have been extended. Increased quality and better-designed engine systems, combined with refined oils and lubricants, have reduced the recommended replacement schedule for engine coolant, transmission fluid, and engine oil. However, exceeding these intervals can result in premature failure and damage to very expensive parts, so it's more important than ever to follow the recommendations in your vehicle owner's manual.

However, the savings — money and time — of less frequent maintenance and repairs is offset by the cost of individual repairs. Automotive diagnosis, parts, and repair are now more costly.

So, how can you manage the costs and care for your rolling computer?

• Check technician certifications: With all this high-tech equipment under the hood, make sure you're working with a technician who is trained for today's vehicles. The two most common forms of technician certification come from the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE), which offers certification on 42 different automotive repairs. Technicians must re-certify every five years. Facilities usually post their technicians' ASE credentials, though it's always appropriate to ask if the shop is ASE-certified in your particular repair need.

• Know the habits of your vehicle: Think of your vehicle's problem as a mystery: what is wrong is the puzzle you and your technician must solve. You must piece together the details of when the problem occurred, if it is ongoing and under what circumstances, and any sounds, smells, and handling charges. Before you get to the repair facility, jot down everything you can think of to help the technician solve the problem.

• Is specialization better? Autos are so complex it can be difficult and expensive for a repair facility to stay on top of all types of repairs needed for all the vehicles on the road. That's why some shops specialize in one type of repair, such as transmissions or brakes. Generally, these facilities would be an excellent resource for the specific repair or maintenance need. However, if you aren't certain which repair your vehicle needs, a facility that covers all general repair needs would be a good first stop for diagnosis.

• Ask for an estimate: Facilities will gladly provide an estimate; however, the format may differ from your past experiences. For example, many repairs require more diagnostic time than actual repair time — testing computer wires to find a short circuit or corroded connection, for example. You'll also see some new charges, such as a computer diagnostic fee or hazardous materials charge. These are not unusual in today's high-tech automotive world.

• Look for the AAA sign: For 25 years, AAA has helped consumers with their repair needs by inspecting and certifying quality repair facilities. When you see the AAA sign, you know the repair shop has met AAA's strict standards for training, equipment, and customer service. AAA members also know that AAA-approved facilities agree to abide by AAA's decision in case of a dispute and they offer members special warranties and free safety inspections during scheduled service visits.

All-Stars Travel Road To Perfect 29-0 Season

Perfection.

The Quincy 10-year-old Travel "A" All-Star baseball team recently capped an impeccable season by defeating Hanover, 12-1, for the Suburban League Championship at Kelly Field in Norwood.

Quincy finished the season with a 29-0 record, including tournament wins in Westwood, Mansfield, Foxboro and Bourne.

In the Suburban championship, Quincy jumped out to a 6-0 first-inning lead against Hanover and cruised from there. Chris Boyd knocked in five runs to earn Player of the Game honors.

After knocking off Westwood, 10-2, in the quarterfinal match, Quincy stormed back from a 3-0 deficit to defeat solid-hitting Medfield, 6-3, in the semifinals. Steve Connolly, playing first base and then second base, was the defensive standout, turning two double plays and making a perfect relay throw to cut down a run at the plate.

Terrific 10-Year-Olds Win Suburban Title, 4 Other Tournaments

Here's a recap of the four tournaments:

In Westwood, Quincy beat the host team in consecutive games, 1-0 and 2-0, for the title. Tom Conley and Glen Misho turned in strong pitching performances. Andrew Restrepo knocked in a run with a sacrifice fly and Chris Maguire and Doug Meyers provided solid defensive support.

Quincy won the Mansfield Invitational Tournament with a 12-2 victory over Sharon. John Alexander smashed a two-run home run in the first inning. Brian Mahoney provided great defensive play at both shortstop and first base, and Dan Meyers caught everything in center field.

Later in the day, Quincy won the Rodman Classic Tournament in Foxboro with a 12-0 win over a scrappy Swansea team. In the semifinal, Kyle Tobin's base running led Quincy to a 5-4 win over Wrentham. Tobin scored the game-winner when he walked, stole second and then purposely got caught in a rundown between second and third, scoring on a wild throw.

In the final tournament of the summer at Bourne, Quincy crushed Falmouth, 8-1, for the championship. Hard-hitting third baseman Pat Totten earned team MVP honors. Joe Lousarian pitched Quincy to wins over both Yarmouth and Dennis to reach the semifinals against Bourne, which it beat, 6-4.

The Quincy travel all-star team is made up of all Quincy residents who have played in Quincy Youth Baseball's junior league from April

Granite Bow To Maine, 15-10

By CHRIS POISSON

Riding high on a four-game winning streak, the Quincy Granite received a "slap in the face" Saturday night that only the women on WWF Raw could've performed better.

With starting quarterback Mike Thomas on the sidelines with a minor elbow injury, Quincy's offense sputtered as it absorbed a 15-10 setback to the Maine Pride (4-2) at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

"Hopefully, this was an eye-opener," said offensive lineman David Harris. "It was a slap in the face. They came to play. We beat them, 27-0, a few weeks ago and they were upset from that game and had something out for us."

Quincy (4-2) has a bye this week and next Friday, Sept. 1, it will face Randolph (1-5) in what should become a heated rivalry. Randolph picked up its first win of the season Saturday with a 37-7 victory over Hyannis. Thomas will return for the game.

The Granite need to win one more game to make the playoffs. Marlboro and Middleboro, both 5-0, have already clinched spots in the postseason.

Dan Abraham, last year's fullback who rejoined the team a few weeks ago, started in place of Thomas and turned in a decent performance. It's just that the team dropped ball after ball.

"He played great," said coach Ken McPhee. "Obviously, he's not a quarterback, but he did a super job for us."

Quincy put together a solid drive on its first possession of the game, but it ended when Paul Doherty came up short on a 40-yard field goal attempt.

Maine went up 7-0 in the first quarter when Abraham fumbled and a Pride player scooped it up and returned it five yards for the touchdown.

Abraham recovered by tossing a 35-yard TD pass to wideout Bill MacDougall, cutting the lead to 7-6 as the extra point failed. It was MacDougall's sixth TD catch of the year. Quincy took an 8-7 lead at the half when defensive end Steve Jones recorded his second safety of the season.

Maine regained the lead in the fourth quarter with a touchdown as the Granite defense broke down for one play. Maine faked the extra point and converted a two-point conversion for a 15-8 advantage.

Once again, Quincy's defense was outstanding. Linebackers Ryan Craig and Sean Halpin each had interceptions and the unit also came up with two fumble recoveries. The offense, in the second half, just couldn't get going.

Quincy closed out the scoring with another safety when Maine snapped the ball out of the end zone on a punt attempt.

LOCKSTEPS

The antilock braking system (ABS) found in most cars today features a central control unit that monitors electronic impulses from sensors positioned at each wheel. If the control unit senses wheel lockup, it signals a valve to limit hydraulic pressure to the corresponding brake, thereby allowing the wheel to rotate. At the same time, the other brakes remain engaged. The ABS is designed to work with the foot firmly applied to the brake pedal. Any attempt to pulse the brake pedal with the foot will only defeat the system. The chattering the drivers sense while ABS is working is normal. Drivers shouldn't use ABS as an excuse to drive recklessly. It will not entirely eliminate the possibility of skidding.

Your safety is our concern. Here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO our ASE Certified professional technicians will service your car with the same level of attention that they would give their own. Six Youngsters Hot-Shot Champs

The Quincy Recreation Department recently crowned six youngsters as champions in the annual Hot Shot basketball tournament.

The event was conducted as part of the Quincy Recreation Playground program, which has 19 locations throughout the city.

The Hot Shot basketball competition is a one minute timed basketball shoot-off in which participants scored points by successfully making shots from five "hot spots" located at different spots on the court.

The winners, followed by runners-up, are:

Midget Boys: Mike Horgan (Mass Fields), Brian Sullivan (LaBrique).

Midget Girls: Brooke Lally (Faxon), Caitlyn Nelson and Tabitha Doolan (Fenno).

Junior Boys: Kyle Costa (Mass Fields), Paul Doolan (Fenno).

Junior Girls: Aileen Croke (Atlantic), Alison McDonough (Faxon).

Senior Boys: T.J. Pitts (Bradford), Mike Herrick (Bradford).

Senior Girls: Sarah Goreham (Montclair), Christina Connolly (Chapel).

79 Residents Walking For Jimmy Fund

Seventy-nine Quincy residents will participate in the 12th annual Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk Sunday, Sept. 24.

Walkers may choose the Boston Athletic Association's historic 26.2-mile route that begins in Hopkinton at 7 a.m., the half marathon (13.1 miles) that begins in Wellesley at 11 a.m., or the three-mile Patient/Family Walk that starts at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute at 2 p.m.

All walkers finish at Copley Square where they will be met with music, food and a post-walk program featuring speakers from Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Over its 11-year history, the walk has raised a total of $13.6 million for cancer care and research at world-renowned Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

"Almost everyone has been affected by cancer in one way or another," said Emily Swymer, director of the Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk. "Either they have fought it themselves or had a family member or friend stricken by it. We're encouraging people to fight back by joining with their friends and neighbors in this fun, but important fund-raising effort."

Last year, 79 Quincy residents took part in the walk, making Quincy a leading town in the effort to raise money for cancer research. With funding needs on the rise, the goal is for 8,000 walkers to raise more than $3.3 million this year.

Although individual walkers qualify by raising $100, walkers are being asked to "go the extra mile" to become a Pacesetter — a walker who raises $500 or more. Pacesetters receive special recognition at the finish line and they will also be invited to a reception held in their honor in the spring.

For more information on the walk or how to join the Pacesetters, call the walk organizers at (800) 632-3562 or visit www.jimmyfund.org.

The Quincy walkers are: David Ashmanskas, Elizabeth Beaton, Shannon Bemis, Paul Bergonzi, Kim Bialous, Sheila Buonaugurio, Walker Burgess Jr., Tina Cahill, John Cahill, Constance Cahill, Kelly Canniff, Kathryn Carl, Heather Chauncey, Karen Clasby, Patrick Clifford, David Connolly, Stephen Connolly, Elizabeth Crowley, Paula Devin, Patrick Donovan, Gerard Downey, Susan Farago, Lynda Feeney, Judy Ferreira, Lauren Flynn, Emily Foley, Edna Fox.

Patrick White On Fantasy Day At Fenway Team

The ninth annual John Hancock Fantasy Day at Fenway will be held Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. to benefit the Jimmy Fund.

More than 150 participants across the United States will step up to the plate at Fenway Park for a chance to hit one off the Green Monster and raise money for the cancer-fighting cause. Fantasy Day has raised over $2 million.

Thirty-three teams have signed up for the event, raising an initial $193,000. Patrick White, 9, of Quincy will be on one of the 25 teams, which are made up of nine children currently being treated at the Jimmy Fund Clinic at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

White was diagnosed with rhabdomyosarcoma, a soft tissue form of cancer, this past November.

John Hancock will contribute an extra $1,000 for every ball that hits the Green Monster, $2,000 for every home run, and $100 for every ball hit into the outfield by a woman or child under the age of 15.

Last year, participants raised $325,650, which included a total of 25 Green

Monster hits, four home runs and 95 balls hit into the outfield.

How Do You Become In Charge Of Your World?

Life Experience Adds Power To Girl Power Career Day

How do you become in charge of your world?

That was just one of the challenging questions Dr. Elaine Alpert asked the 25 or so "Power Girls" from the Germantown Neighborhood Center who gathered Friday to hear Dr. Alpert and others speak at Girl Power Career Day at City Hall.

The all-girl career day, designed to finish the two-week confidence and self-esteem building program run out of the center with the support of Manet Community Health Center, featured successful women of various backgrounds willing to share their life and work experiences with the fourth and fifth graders.

Dr. Alpert, an associate professor and assistant dean at Boston University Medical School and a pioneer in domestic violence prevention, was joined at the three-hour roundtable by: Kathy CHRISTINE SCHUSTER, CEO of Quincy Medical Center, answers a question during Girl Power Career Day as "Power Girl" Evie Ortiz and Jan D'Allessandro, RN at QMC and organizer of the two-week program, listen.

Yeager, former personnel director for the City of Quincy who now holds a similar position at a Boston law firm; Christine Schuster, CEO of Quincy Medical Center; Linda Stice, director of the Mayor's Commission on the Family and member of the School Committee; and Ellen Hafer, executive director of Manet Community Health Center.

The group raised some serious issues for the youngsters but also offered practical advice on how to deal with those issues and any others which may come along.

"Read your local newspaper," was Dr. Alpert's advice, telling the girls that was the best way to become more in charge of their world, whether that world be their bodies, their families, their churches, or their communities. "And you know what: don't listen to what the magazines and TV are telling you. Be a kid for as long as you can."

QMC's Schuster told the girls that success did indeed involve sacrifice but that "if you know what you're doing and you believe in yourself, it's not important whether you work with men or women. It's the results that count."

Stice, who noted that she was the 18th of only 20 women elected to office in

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

It's 12 Noon: Do You Know Where Your Toothbrush Is?

Brush in the morning and race out the door, another busy day in a very busy life.

Just a quick inventory before you lock the door... Do you have your briefcase? Your cell phone? Your lunch?

How about your toothbrush? If you're like most people, your toothbrush is probably at home waiting for your return from a long, busy day that included snacks, drinks and maybe even dinner on the run.

Today, people lead busy lives and while we know the importance of brushing and flossing regularly, a recent survey by the American Dental Association revealed that 20 percent brush just once per day.

Fortunately, there's now an easier, more convenient way to protect your teeth when you're on the go. SmithKline Beecham Consumer Healthcare is introducing new oral care products for a busy lifestyle, Aquafresh Dental Gum and Dental Lozenges; a complete line of dental care products that offer portable oral care solutions when brushing isn't an option.

Immediately after you eat, the naturally occurring bacteria and plaque in your mouth begin to "digest" the food you've just consumed, converting it to acid and causing the pH level to fall into the danger zone, where cavities can begin forming.

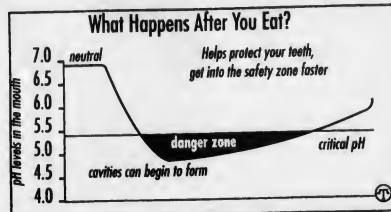

Dr. William van Dyk, associate professor at the University of Pacific School of Dentistry, says, "Many people mistakenly believe that only candy bars and sugary soft drinks promote tooth decay. The bacteria and plaque in your mouth very quickly begin to break down almost all foods, especially carbohydrates like bread and potatoes, into sugars as well."

Using Aquafresh Dental Gum and Dental Lozenges helps protect the teeth by raising pH levels and neutralizing plaque acids. Convenient and discreet, new Aquafresh Dental Gum is available in peppermint, extra fresh mint and whitening formula.

Aquafresh offers the only dental lozenge on the market. Aquafresh Dental Lozenges, in extra fresh mint flavor, help maintain healthy teeth and also neutralize plaque acids.

As people age, they tend to take more prescription medicines. Dr. van Dyk says, "One of the common side effects of some of some of these medicines is 'dry mouth,' or a decreased saliva flow. Without the normal amount of saliva in the mouth, the pH environment can become too acidic, paving the way for plaque and bacteria to start causing cavities." Aquafresh Dental Lozenges, as well as the Dental Gum, help stimulate saliva flow and neutralize plaque acids to help keep teeth healthy.

Just minutes after eating, you risk tooth decay because the pH level in your mouth drops and plaque acids begin to attack the teeth. Using Aquafresh Dental Gum and Dental Lozenges protects the teeth by raising pH levels and neutralizing the plaque acids quickly.

Aquafresh Whitening Dental Gum provides an added benefit of helping to prevent stains from building up to keep teeth whiter and contains the same whitening ingredient as Aquafresh Whitening Toothpaste--Triclene®.

Hearing aid "Tips from Tobias"

Do I need one or two hearing aids?

We have two ears for many reasons. If you are a candidate for both ears consider yourself fortunate, since some people are deaf on one side and cannot benefit from a hearing aid. The Better

Hearing Institute gives us fifteen reasons for wearing two hearing aids. In this column I can list only a few. 1. People wearing two aids understand speech and conversation better than those wearing one. 2. Better understanding in group and even noisy situations is possible with two aids. 3. People can better detect the source of sounds in every situation with binaural fittings. 4. With two hearing aids hearing range is 360 degrees- not just 180 degrees- and provides a better sense of both balance and sound quality. 5. There is less distortion and better reproduction of amplified sounds with two hearing aids that require less volume than one aid. 6. With two hearing aids people can hear sounds from a farther distance. 7. Sounds are more easily distinguishable with two hearing instruments. For the rest of these reasons call the Better Hearing Institute, check their web site or call me. Now you go and spread the news! Steve

A New Twist On A School Lunch Staple

There may be good news for the growing number of children who are allergic to a school lunch classic. While many of us grew up toting a PB & J -- that's peanut butter and jelly -- sandwich to school, times are changing.

Experts report the number of children with a potentially dangerous hazardous allergy to peanuts has increased significantly since 1981.

For some, an allergic reaction to peanuts can cause wheezing or hives. In very rare instances, it can even be life threatening.

Some parents have responded to this challenge by offering their children an alternate--a type of butter made from soynuts.

According to the Food and Drug Administration, increased intake of soy related products may be linked to a number of benefits, such as lowered cholesterol and increased prevention of diabetes.

Curtis Roettig, co-owner of the SoyNut Butter Company, believes their product--I.M. Healthy SoyNut Butter -- offers parents and children other benefits as well.

Says Roettig, "Soynut butter looks and tastes like regular peanut butter. In blind tastes tests, children usually prefer it over peanut butter. As a parent, you can help your food-allergic child feel less self-conscious."

For more information call 1-800-288-1012.

The school accepts children between the ages 2.9 through 5 years of age. School starts Sept. 11.

Safe Seniors Program Aug. 30

In response to the rapidly growing scams and violations against senior citizens, the Deware Funeral Homes and Quincy Council on Aging is introducing SCI Smart & Safe Seniors.

This unique and comprehensive senior safety program was created by nationally recognized personal safety expert Robert Stuber. Locally, it is presented by Scott Deware, program's New England coordinator.

Senior citizens and their families can learn critical safety information by attending a free, hour-long presentation Wednesday, Aug. 30 at 11:30 a.m. at The Quantum Gardens Community Center, 83 Saratoga St., Quincy.

Refreshments will be served following the presentation.

The program is designed to help prevent exploitation abuse, as well as address other problems faced by senior citizens by giving seniors a new way to think about their personal safety through decreasing or eliminating the opportunities often given to the criminal to commit a crime.

For more information about the program, call Deware Funeral Home at 617-472-1137.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

The man who brings his compact to a garage expects the same "service" as the Cadillac owner whose vehicle is already on the rack... even though there will be a difference in the ultimate bills presented. And he will get it, if the dealer is a sensible businessman. In our profession, equality of service is even more important, for we are dealing with a much more sensitive area of human relationships than economics. We have always believed that the funeral of every person, no matter how humble was his state of life, is just as meaningful and necessary to his survivors as the funeral of a well-known personage is to his bereaved.

We also believe what we do is important to every family and how we do it is important to us... Every detail of a funeral service is important to us...

To Those We Serve We Pledge: confidential business and professional relationships; cooperation with customs of all religions and creeds; observance of all respect due the deceased; the highest standards of competence and dignity in the conduct of all services; truthful representation of all services and merchandising.

Quincy August Moon Festival Sept. 9

The Quincy Asian American Association will host an August Moon Festival on Saturday, Sept. 9 from 3 to 5 p.m. at the Welcome Young Playground, North Quincy (behind North Quincy High School, on Sagamore St.)

The festival will feature live cultural performances honoring many of the Chinese traditional dances and songs including the Lion Dance and martial arts demonstrations. Children will enjoy games and activities while adults may visit various booths representing organizations and companies serving the Asian community.

The August Moon Festival has been celebrated for thousands of years in countries around Asia as a way of honoring the annual harvest and celebrating the family unity. Thousands of paper lanterns are lighted during the evening and happy children enjoy the fun of playing with them.

Festival food, including moon cake and Chinese grape, are enjoyed by the whole family. Festival activities originated from ancient myth/legend are carried out throughout the day. This year the official August Moon Festival, which is based on the lunar calendar, lays on the day of Sept. 12.

To commemorate the tradition of paper lanterns in August Moon Festival, the association will distribute free paper lanterns to this year's festival goers as a souvenir.

Admission is free. The festival is a short walk from the North Quincy MBTA station.

For more information, contact the co-chairmen of this year's planning committee, Jonathan Yip at (617) 376-1515 office hours or Peter Jae at 617-471-7192 after 6 p.m.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) An associate might try to short-circuit one of your new projects. Stay with it, but be on guard for possible delaying tactics. A close friend offers good advice.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Single Bovines could find Cupid moving at a faster pace this week. That new romance seems to be turning more serious much sooner than you both expected.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A long-standing situation appears to be changing quickly, and you might feel that you need more time to adjust. Stay cool and deal with each development as it occurs.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Give your self-esteem the boost it needs. Instead of reciting all those "I-should-have-dones," remind yourself of all the good things you HAVE done.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Love is the "mane" attraction this week. Single Lions can anticipate warm signals from Libras. Attached Leos and Leonas can expect heightened harmony in the den.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your recent problems will soon be happily resolved. Family and friends continue to walk with you as you move toward that long-awaited light at the end of the tunnel.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) New factors could complicate your handling of that relationship problem. Don't be distracted. Your original decision is still the best course to take, so stick with it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A sense of well-being replaces that nagging anxiety. Keep focusing on the positive, and you'll find it easier to deal with any lingering uneasiness.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your new career move takes on some unexpected developments. Ask for explanations about these changes now so that you can avoid future misunderstandings.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Making the first move to resolve a tense and troubled situation is the right thing to do. Change will come, although not as quickly as you hoped. Be patient.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Someone who abused your kindness before returns with another request that could cost you both time and money. If you feel uneasy about this, say no and mean it!

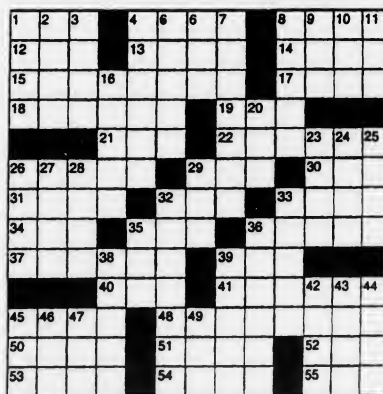

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your artistic talents can help in planning a career move. Design an eye-catching package to go with your resume. In your personal life, a Taurus wants to catch your eye.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You can sometimes be a little judgmental, but people forgive you for it because they know you have a kind, caring heart.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message designed to spell out your future. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your future. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

the entire history of Quincy, detailed for the audience what she termed her "crooked path" to success and told the girls to never stop trying or taking chances.

Hafer encouraged the Power Girls to volunteer in areas that interested them and follow career paths that most closely mirrored their hobbies or interests. Hafer also told the girls that "confidence isn't thinking that you know the answer. It means that you're not afraid for things to change."

Former Personnel Director Yeager recalled being one of the city's first female department heads but said she concentrated on doing a good job rather than on any slights or prejudices. "Stand your ground and be confident and the respect will come around," Yeager promised the Germantown campers.

The Power Girls were not without questions of their own, peppering the guest speakers with queries about education, family, income, and how to handle themselves in a world traditionally controlled by men.

Kathy Quigley, director of the Germantown Neighborhood Center, said the Girl Power Camp started last year as a one-week program and was extended to two weeks this year. In the program, girls learn such skills as role modeling, anger management, conflict resolution, and setting goals.

A good deal of the success of the program, Quigley said, was made possible by Jan D'Allessandro, RN, a psychiatric nurse at QMC and a domestic violence counselor at Manet CHC. "She's amazing," Quigley said, noting that D'Allessandro volunteered countless hours to the program while getting nothing in return.

Dr. Alpert agreed. "Jan is the real angel here," she said. "She is just devoted to the Germantown Neighborhood Center. She needs to be cloned."

For her part, D'Allessandro deflected the praise given her but gave a clear reason for her involvement with the Girl Power Program. "It's simple: I want these kids to have a better life," D'Allessandro said.

director of Faxon House, said that $5,000 had been raised throughout the South Shore, including two $1,000 donations from individuals. Sheehan thanked donors, as well as the Interfaith Council, for "standing behind the Faxon House."

Both the Resthaven and Robbin sites, Sheehan said, have been inspected by the bank and were confirmed as promising locations.

What's needed now, said Carol Hoban, director of the Faxon House, is more time. "It isn't like we don't have a place to go," Hoban said. "We will get into one of those two locations. It will simply take longer than Sept. 15."

To underscore Faxon House's important role in the community, Rev. Bennett recalled being chairman of the Mayor's Special Hearing on Alcohol Abuse which, in 1996, identified "an increase in detoxification treatment slots available in the city for all persons" as one method for treating alcohol abuse in the city.

"Faxon House is an important and necessary step in the recovery process," Rev. Bennett said. "We're concerned and we want Quincy Medical Center to extend the deadline."

CITY OF QUINCY, MASSACHUSETTS PURCHASING DEPARTMENT
1305 HANCOCK ST., QUINCY, MA 02169

Invites sealed bids/proposals for furnishing and delivering to the City of Quincy:

S.C.C.D.A. LEASE OF CLASSROOM & OFFICE SPACE

SEPTEMBER 26, 2000 @ 10:30 A.M.

The South Coastal Career Development Administration is seeking office and classroom space in Quincy for use as a Career Center. All sites must meet specifications. Proposed space has to be handicapped accessible in all areas of ADA compliance in accordance with the ADA of 1990 (P.L. 101-336). The proposed space may be between 10,000 and 13,000 square feet.

Detailed specifications are on file at the office of the Purchasing Agent, Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, Massachusetts, 02169, between the hours of 8:30 am to 4:30 pm. To receive RFP contact Kim Trillcott, Assistant Contract Coordinator, Purchasing Dept. @ 617-376-1062.

TECHNICAL PROPOSAL must be in a sealed envelope (which is supplied), and price proposals must be in a separate sealed envelope (which is also supplied). The outside of the sealed envelopes are to be clearly marked "RFP - TECHNICAL PROPOSAL ENCLOSED" with time/date of RFP and "RFP - PRICE PROPOSAL ENCLOSED" with time/date of RFP.

Bids/Proposals will be received at the office of the Purchasing Agent until the time and date stated above, at which time and date they will be publicly opened and registered. Late Bids/Proposals, delivered by mail or in person, will be rejected.

If applicable, Bids/Proposals shall be in accordance with Chapter 149 of the M.G.L. as amended, M.G.L., Chapter 30B, Chapter 39, section 39A, 39B and 39F-R M.G.L. Chapter 149, Section 26, 27, 29, 35 and 44A-44M.

The right is reserved to reject any or all RFPs or to accept any part of an RFP or the one deemed best for the City, and waive any informalities in the bidding, if it is in the best interest of the City to do so.

City Signs On To FEMA's Project Impact Program

(Cont'd from page 3)

Marshfield being the other.

Walter White, director of Inspectional Services, and Richard Meade, planning director, are co-chairmen of Project Impact in Quincy.

Richard Zingarelli of the Department of Environmental Management noted that Quincy has long made good use of its FEMA hazard mitigation funds and was a very deserving recipient of Project Impact funding. "We're recognizing the success stories that Quincy has had in the area of hazard mitigation," Zingarelli said.

Along with the mayor, White, and Zingarelli, others who made remarks during the ceremonies included: Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond; Kenneth Horak, deputy director, FEMA Region 1; Thomas Rodger, Massachusetts Emergency Management PROJECT IMPACT, a program of the Federal Emergency Management Association (FEMA) whose goal is to make communities more disaster resistant, held signing ceremonies recently at City Council Chambers to mark Quincy's inclusion into the program and its $300,000 grant. Seated from left are: James McLean, vice president, Dan Flynn Real Estate; Walter White, director of Inspectional Services and co-chairman of the city's Project Impact efforts; Maralin Manning, executive director, QCBPA; and Sean Curry, Curry Hardware. Standing from left are: Daniel Condon, representative of Congressman William Delahunt's Office; Maryrose Mirick, executive director of the QMC Foundation; Gary Keith, NFPA; Richard Zingarelli, Department of Environmental Management; Jackie Gardner, Red Cross; Kenneth Horak, FEMA; Thomas Rodger, Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA); Paul McEachern, Stop & Shop; Jerry Dacey, Colonial Federal Savings Bank; Patricia Deyton, Red Cross; Anthony Agnitti, Agnitti Insurance; Angelito Santos, principal planner; and Fred Mirza, city engineer.

Agency (MEMA); Fred Mirza, city engineer, DPW; Patricia Deyton, American Red Cross; and Anthony Agnitti, Agnitti Insurance.

"The QCBPA and the QBC are 100 percent behind this program," said Agnitti, who is president of the Quincy Business Council. "It's good business and it's good for the community."

Community partners signing the agreement included: Mass Electric, Boston Gas, Marina Bay, Stop & Shop, Quincy Fire Department, Quincy Police Department, Quincy Medical Center, The National Fire Protection Association, Dan Flynn Real Estate, Colonial Federal Savings Bank, the American Red Cross, and Curry Hardware.

Project Impact began in 1997 as a FEMA initiative recognizing that pro-active, preventive measures were superior to FEMA's traditional policy of rebuilding after a disaster had already struck. It is estimated that for every $1 FEMA spends in disaster resistance, $2 is saved in future disaster relief.

Quincy's selection as a Project Impact pilot program, White said, means that the best ideas from Quincy will be used, along with other pilot programs, to build a national model.

Quincy becomes one of only 20 communities in New England and roughly 200 nationally to become a Project Impact pilot program.

High School Classes Begin Sept. 7 Back To School Sept. 6 For Grades 1-9

School bells will ring for Quincy Public School students in grades 1-9 on Wednesday, Sept. 6, as the 2000-2001 school year opens with a full day of classes.

Sophomores, juniors, and seniors at Quincy High School and North Quincy High School will return to school Thursday, Sept. 7.

Freshmen orientation for North Quincy and Quincy High Schools will be Wednesday, Sept. 6. Grade 9 students from both schools should report at 7:45 a.m.

Kindergarten orientation days will be held Wednesday, Sept. 6 through Friday, Sept. 8. Kindergarten classes will start Wednesday, Sept. 13.

School hours for the city's 11 elementary schools are divided into two tiers:

The first tier is 7:45 a.m. to 2 p.m. for the following elementary schools: Atherton Hough, Charles A. Bernazzani, Lincoln Hancock, Merrymount, and Wollaston Schools.

The second tier is 8:15 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. for the following elementary schools: Beechwood Knoll, Montclair, Francis W. Parker, Snug Harbor, Squantum, and Clifford H. Marshall Schools.

School hours at the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center will be 7:35 a.m. to 1:50 p.m.

Middle school students (grades 6 through 8) will attend classes from 8:15 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at Atlantic, Broad Meadows, Central, Point Webster, and Sterling Middle Schools.

School hours at Quincy

High School and North Quincy High School are 7:45 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Other information about school hours, including morning and afternoon kindergarten sessions, accompanies this story.

Thursday, Sept. 7 will be a full day for all Quincy public school students in grades 1 through 12.

A reminder: starting this September the Clifford Marshall Elementary school will become an early childhood to Grade 4 facility and the Point Webster Middle School will handle Grades 5-8. The change, the result of space considerations, is permanent and will affect

Optimistic On Detox Center Fate Clergy To Meet With QMC, Faxon House

By CRAIG SALTERS

Following an hour-long meeting Tuesday, the Quincy Interfaith Association is cautiously optimistic about working with Quincy Medical Center to resolve the fate of Faxon House Recovery Detoxification Center.

Members of the organization, which represents 40 congregations of different faiths across the city as well as several social service agencies, met Tuesday morning at First Parish Church and decided to revise earlier plans for a signed letter to the hospital given what they perceived as a new spirit of cooperation from QMC.

"We are encouraged by the apparent willingness of the Quincy Medical Center to work constructively with Faxon House and the larger community to assure that Quincy and the South Shore do not lose these essential and critical beds," said Rev. Sheldon Bennett, Minister of First Parish Church and a leader of the Quincy Interfaith Association.

Instead of a petition, Quincy Interfaith appointed

Following Thanksgiving Fire Businesses Celebrate Re-opening At Central Building

By PAUL D. HAROLD
One of the city's most important yet least known historic landmarks, damaged by a fire last Thanksgiving, was rededicated last week as the four businesses located there celebrated their grand re-opening.

The Central Building at 1359-1363 Hancock St., Quincy Center, houses four businesses familiar to Quincy shoppers: Photo Quick, J.B. Optical, Phase II Jewelry and The College Bookstore.

But, despite a commemorative plaque on the building, few passersby realize that before its use as a commercial building, it was the seat of town government for Quincy, serving as both the second town hall and the second school.

The rededication and re-opening ceremony last Wednesday, organized by the four businesses with the assistance of Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association, highlighted the recent work done to the building's facade and the re-opening of the bookstore.

The fire virtually gutted the College Bookstore and caused smoke damage to the other three businesses, and offices on the second floor. Damage at the time was estimated at over $200,000 including the bookstore's inventory. The bookstore was the last to re-open.

When Quincy separated from Braintree to form a new town, it built a combined town hall-school house building in 1796 adjacent to the Hancock Cemetery, at a cost of $1,000. That building burned down in 1815 and was replaced a year later with the present building.

In 1842 it was moved to the site of the Coddington School and moved back to its present location in 1856. Its use as town hall ended in 1844 with the construction of the granite building, the current James McIntyre Government Center building, old city hall.

One reason the building is difficult to visualize as the town hall-school is the fact that the building you see today at street level is actually three buildings pushed together, with a uniform facade. An inspection of the roof, however, clearly shows the dimensions of the original three buildings. As you face the modern day

THE HISTORIC CENTRAL Building, 1359-1363 Hancock St., Quincy Center, was re-dedicated and the four businesses located there celebrated their grand re-opening last week following a fire last Thanksgiving. Acting Mayor-City Council President Paul Harold (fourth from left) cut the commemorative ribbon. Participating from the left, Councillors Patrick McDermott, Frank McCauley and Dan Raymond, Richard Gormley of Sovereign Bank, president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association; Deanna Gazarian, owner Phase II Jewelry; Barry Bornstein, owner J.B. Optical; James Peters, manager The College Bookstore and former Councillor Leo Kelly.

Central Building, the portion on the right, occupied by the College Bookstore, is the town hall structure.

In addition to its municipal uses, the building is also historic because it housed the first East Norfolk District (Quincy) Court in 1872 and served as headquarters for the city's first YMCA.

In recent years the building was the house of the Burgin Platner Insurance Company. It was sold to Peter O'Connell, who installed the historic plaque that can be seen today, outlining the importance of the building to the city's history. It was later sold back to Burgin Platner.

On hand for the ribbon cutting ceremonies were Acting Mayor-City Council President Paul Harold; Richard Gormley of the Sovereign Bank, president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association; Deanna Gazarian, owner Phase II Jewelry; Barry Bornstein, owner J.B. Optical; James Peters, manager The College Bookstore; Councillor Patrick McDermott, chairman of the Council's Business and Development Committee; Councillors Daniel Raymond, Frank McCauley and Tim Cahill and former Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly.

Sheets To Update Issues At Quincy Point Meeting

Mayor James Sheets will be guest speaker at the Quincy Point Business and Professional meeting Thursday, Sept. 7 at 8:15 p.m. in the GTN Center at St. Joseph's Church, Washington St.

Sheets will update those attending on issues such as the Fore River Bridge, Fore River shipyard, the Washington St. development and Traffic and construction management.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymond will also provide updates on issues affecting the Quincy Point area.

A question and answer period will follow. There will also be committee reports.

Fogging To Continue At Request Catch Basin Mosquito Control Project Completed

The City of Quincy announced Monday that it has completed the catch basin treatment for the control of mosquito breeding.

As a proactive measure in light of the potential for the West Nile Virus outbreak, the city had 10 Sewer, Water, and Drain personnel professionally trained and licensed in the application of larvicide briquettes.

Nearly 3,000 catch basins have been treated over the past two weeks with the 30-day larvicide briquettes. The city targeted areas which are in close proximity to schools and elderly residential complexes as well as areas abutting wetlands and marshes. It has coordinated these efforts with the Nor-

A CLOSE-UP view of the mosquito traps being used in the Quincy area to trap mosquitoes and test for the West Nile Virus. The traps are baited so as to lure only specific breeds of mosquitoes, in this case the carrier of the West Nile Virus.

West Nile Virus Precautions

There is no vaccine for the West Nile Virus but the Massachusetts Department of Health urges residents to take the following precautions:

- Avoid outdoor activities between dusk and dawn, if possible, since this is the time when mosquitoes are most active.
- If you must be outdoors when mosquitoes are active, wear a long-sleeved shirt and long pants.
- Use a mosquito repellent that contains DEET (the chemical N-N-diethyl-meta-toluamide) and follow the directions on the label. DEET can be toxic if overused. Never use DEET on infants. Avoid using repellents with DEET concentrations above 10-15 percent for children and with concentrations above 30-35 percent for adults. Cream, lotion, or stick formulas are best. Avoid products with high amounts of alcohol.
- Most mosquito repellents will remain effective for many hours, so it is not necessary to reapply the repellent. Once inside, wash off insect repellents thoroughly with soap and water.
- Take special care to cover up the arms and legs of children playing outdoors. When you bring a baby outdoors, cover the baby's carriage or playpen with mosquito netting.
- Fix any holes in your screens and make sure they are tightly attached to all your doors and windows.

folk County Mosquito Control Project which will treat the remainder of the accessible catch basins within the city.

The larvicide which is used attacks the developing mosquito and prevents the completion of the life cycle from the pupae stage to the adult.

Norfolk County Mosquito Control has also announced it has been able to respond to all Quincy requests for fogging, which controls adult mosquitoes.

The fogging is performed during the early morning hours each Thursday, weather permitting, and will continue through mid-September. As a result of the requests, nearly all areas of the city have been treated to control adult flying mosquitoes within the past few weeks.

For more information, contact the Norfolk County Mosquito Control Project at (781) 762-1273.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

On Sept. 2, 1666, the Great Fire of London began when Thomas Farnin, baker to King Charles II, neglected to turn off his oven inside his home. Strong winds spread the flames across the city, and when the fire finally burned out three days later, over 10,000 buildings were destroyed and six people were dead. ... On Sept. 3, 1783, the American Revolution came to an official end with the signing of the Treaty of Paris by representatives of the United States, Great Britain, Spain and France. American independence was recognized by the British, and the boundaries of the new republic were agreed upon. ... On Aug. 28, 1879, King Cetshwayo, the last great ruler of Zululand, was captured by the British following his defeat in the British-Zulu War. He was subsequently sent into exile. ... On Aug. 31, 1888, prostitute Mary Ann Nichols, the first victim of London serial killer "Jack the Ripper," was found murdered and mutilated in Whitechapel's Buck's Row. ... On Aug. 30, 1918, after speaking at a factory in Moscow, Soviet leader Vladimir Lenin was shot by Fanya Kaplan, a member of the Social Revolutionary party. Lenin was only wounded. ... On Aug. 29, 1949, the USSR successfully detonated its first atomic bomb, code-named "First Lightning," at a remote test site at Semipalatinsk in Kazakhstan. ... On Aug. 29, 1968, in Chicago, the Democratic National Convention nominated Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey for the presidency, bringing to a close the most violent political convention in U.S. history. ... On Sept. 1, 1985, a joint U.S.-French expedition located the wreck of the R.M.S. Titanic 400 miles off the coast of Newfoundland, Canada, 73 years after it sunk to the North Atlantic ocean floor.

Sorry, we can't show it to you.
The photo has never appeared in a newspaper, magazine or on the Internet but it has become a "must have" collector's item.

Quincy photographer Harry Brett, known for his magic with a camera, took it 17 years ago.

The subjects: Ted Williams and Frank Sinatra who at times during their careers, weren't overly fond of having their picture taken.

But there they are in Brett's rare photo. Rare, indeed.

There's Williams wearing a string tie -- something to behold in itself, the way he hated ties and still does.

And, Sinatra with a Red Sox jacket draped over his shoulder and Williams presenting him with a Sox cap. The occasion was a 1983 benefit at Symphony Hall, Boston for Red Sox hometown favorite Tony Conigliaro whose promising career -- and life -- were never the same after being hit in the head by a Jack Hamilton fastball in 1967.

BRETT

After a successful comeback and lapsing into a long coma, he died Feb. 24, 1990 at age 45.

Williams, Sinatra, Diane Warwick and other celebrities were participating in the 1983 benefit performance.

Brett recalls moving around with his camera when Sinatra spotted him and kiddingly asked: "So, are you going to take any pictures?"

Harry aimed, fired and had it.

"Sinatra was very friendly," he says. "So was Williams. They were both loose. There was no problem taking their picture."

Harry, who owns Image Photo in West Quincy, has never allowed the photo to be published.

But he donates copyrighted prints to certain worthy causes to help raise needed funds.

Like Father Bill's Place, the interfaith shelter for the homeless here in Quincy.

He donated a 16-by-20 print for the shelter's recent Food Fest and Auction at the Summer House at Marina Bay that together netted $160,000.

The Williams-Sinatra photo, which Uncle Sam Rounseville, a long-time supporter of Father Bill's Place had framed, was a hot auction item that night.

After some spirited bidding, Richard Evans of Hingham, president of Birchcraft Studios in Rockland, landed the prize at $2,200.

"I would have paid anything for it," said Evans. "They were my idols."

Rounseville, seeing the tremendous interest in the photo, got a quick idea to keep a good thing going.

He told Chairman Jim Wells and honorary chairman Sean McDonough, Boston Red Sox broadcaster, that he would get another print from Brett (a long-time friend) if someone would match Evans's $2,200 bid for the first one.

Jeffrey Sweeney of the Sweeney Brothers Funeral Home in Quincy, who had been in the bidding battle earlier, jumped at the second chance.

He, too, has been a fan of Williams and Sinatra.

"And I'll get a frame for it," promised Rounseville.

So, the two prints raised $4,400 for the homeless and became a treasure for two happy as-kids collectors.

Brett says people are surprised when they see the photo.

"They're surprised that Williams and Sinatra ever met," he explains.

He has donated prints to a half-dozen or so charitable causes. "I pick and choose," he notes.

"I don't have a lot of money to give," he says. "But I give the photo which helps raise money. I get satisfaction out of that."

We made a pitch for permission to use it in The Sun. But no go.

Harry says he will never allow the photo to be published.

"It would take away the surprise element," he explains.

Another auction item that helped the cause that night was an offer from Rounseville: dinner for two with Uncle Sam and his wife, Jean, "anywhere in Massachusetts."

It was won by a friend, Arthur Connolly, CEO of South Shore Savings Bank with a bid of $1,100.

"It includes not only dinner," says Rounseville, "but airplane transportation if necessary."

"Like to the islands -- Martha's Vineyard or Nantucket."

"Or, we could get a box lunch and row out to Gallops, George's or Peddock's." (He's only kidding, Arthur.)

Before being elected president, Woodrow Wilson taught history. After the election, he made history.

The first President to hold an airline pilot's license was Dwight David Eisenhower.

The HOPE Grant And Skate Parks

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
Two recent news items that directly affect the livability of the City of Quincy caught my attention.

The first concerned the failure of the Quincy Housing Authority to get that HOPE grant for Germantown. Headlines stated that Germantown has failed to get the federal cash but in reality Germantown hasn't "failed" because of the obvious renewed commitment on the part of the QHA and City Hall to make the Germantown community and public housing in general work better for those who call public housing home.

I did not support the move to get the HOPE grant because I thought the best hope Germantown residents could use was moving day dreams when they exit public housing forever. Public housing has never really worked because those who created it never had to live in it. We segregated the poor on the poor side of town.

As long as people need public housing it ought to be good and decent housing but public housing should never be a life sentence or a generational thing. We ought to be about empowering folks to get out from behind those project "walls." Some of that is already happening in Quincy with programs that empower people to become homeowners. More of this needs to be done. A better project, a better Germantown should be the empowerment of people to work their way out of the place. That is real hope, isn't it?

The second item is about kids and skate parks. Out in California, the state is helping to build skate parks all across the Golden State. Many Bay State communities are also finding sites for these parks. Here in Quincy, we've apparently met a roadblock.

There was supposed to be a skate park over near the Town Brook but reportedly an environmentalist thinks it would endanger the environment. So there's an appeal to the state Dept. of Environmental Affairs and a possible court case coming as well which leaves Quincy kids without a skate park.

Monroe Park, the proposed site for the skate park and now caught in this legal web, is a treeless park near many parked automobiles. The only wildlife going on is probably between customers and salesmen.

Jane Sullivan wrote a great letter to The Quincy Sun. She has two skateboarding kids. She's got a personal stake in this controversy. She's doing it for her sons and for the children of Quincy. I have nothing against well-meaning environmentalists, but I think the only ones being hurt are the kids who are still waiting for their skate park. Things are going so slowly by the time this issue gets resolved most of the these kids could be collecting their Social Security checks.

Faxon House Detox Needs Long Extension

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
Being a substance and alcohol counselor, the need to keep the Faxon Detox open until February, 2001 is very important. The holidays will be here in December and January. Where will the patients go to receive care? The Faxon House Detox is the only one in Quincy. The other detoxes nearest to Quincy are Brockton or Jamaica Plain.

The Faxon House opened in 1972 and at the time it was a struggle because nobody wanted this detox in the city because alcohol was not recognized as a disease. Today it is. The Faxon House has saved many lives. It has saved teenagers, working people as well as professional people.

We the people of Quincy have to protect the teens as well as the elderly that have a problem with drugs or alcohol. The elderly fought to keep Quincy Medical Center open. Why at this time can't the hospital have more input in giving more time to the Faxon House to stay open and help them keep open until February, 2001.

People have to realize what an asset the Faxon House is to Quincy. Today, it is not just alcohol that is the problem but also drugs.

I have worked at Long Island as a counselor and also at the Andrew House. The problem with drugs and alcohol are not getting any better. If the people have a voice it should be now before it is too late.

Parents as well as the elderly should know the detox saves lives. To support, call your Senators, Ted Kennedy, John Kerry, Congressman Bill Delahunt in keeping the Faxon House Detox open until February, 2001 or until we find a new location.

Quincy's Yesterdays Third Bond Drive Launched

By PAUL HAROLD

The Third War Bond drive was launched this week in which Quincy was assigned an $8 million quota.

Funds raised would allow for the purchase and naming of 10 fighter planes and four bomber planes. For each $75,000 quota reached, a fighter would be named for neighborhoods of the city: Atlantic, Montclair, Squantum, Wollaston, Quincy Point, West Quincy, Quincy Adams and Houghs Neck.

Quotas of $500,000 would allow for the name of Quincy to be given to four bomber planes.

SIXTH ROTARIAN TO ENLIST GIVEN SEND-OFF

Frank Rogers, the sixth member of the Quincy Rotary Club to enlist in the armed forces, was given a send-off at this week's Rotary luncheon.

Rotarian and World War I veteran George Bonsall presented Rogers with a leather wallet as a farewell gift. Rogers would report to Ft. Devens for induction into the Army.

Other Rotarians who enlisted to date were: Rev. Stuart Haskins, Navy chaplain; Lt. Milton Grant, Navy; Lt. Col. Theodore Baker, Army air corps; Capt. Richard Ketchum, Army and Pcf. John Norton, Army.

PERMITS SOUGHT TO CONVERT HOUSING

E.J. MacEwan, secretary of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, called on the War Production Board to re-schedule Quincy with a quota to allow for the conversion of single family homes to multi-family.

MacEwan noted without the new quota conversions could take place only if the total cost of the work exceeded $200. Meanwhile, the city's housing shortage was being considered by the National Housing Administration.

Quincy Residents Dance In Chinatown Festival

Quincy residents Nicole Chan and Maureen Aiello, both entering high school this year, recently performed extensive dances at the annual 2000 Chinatown Festival in downtown Boston.

Both girls have been students for more than 10 years at Atlantic Studios of Dance Education located in North Quincy and Milton. In addition, they have successfully auditioned for and performed in Ballet Theatre of Boston's "Nutcracker" for several seasons and are advanced in tap and jazz dance as well as ballet.

The Chinatown festival provided these dedicated students with an opportunity to demonstrate their own style and choreography while gaining confidence and poise.

Atlantic Studios of Dance, entering its 21st year, is accepting registrations for the 2000-2001 season which begins the third week in September.

Formal registration and dancewear nights are Monday, Aug. 28 from 5:30 to

Labor Day Block Party This Sunday At Shipyard

Mayor James Sheets invites residents to the third annual Family Labor Day Block Party Sunday at the Fore River Shipyard from noon to 7 p.m.

The non-alcoholic party will feature entertainment, favorite picnic foods, music, games and a mini midway. Roving clowns, magicians, and pony rides will be offered throughout the day and children will have an opportunity to travel aboard a miniature trackless train.

Entertainment center-stage kicks off at noon with the Tanglewood Marionettes' presentation of "The Fairy Circus." After a brief demonstration of the art of puppetry, over 20 hand-crafted marionettes will dance, play instruments, juggle, contort, transform, and fly through the air, all to the music of favorite composers, in a showcase of turn-of-the-century style trick puppetry.

The Big Nazo Band -- an international performance group of visual artists, puppet performers, and masked musicians -- takes the stage at 3 p.m. and offers a bizarre mix of music and comic theatrical scenarios. Quasimodo -- the big, green-nosed leader of the band -- and his puppet-like musicians incorporate audience participation into their musical revue of blues, 1960's rock and roll, and vaudeville performances.

Headlining the Labor Day Family Block Party will be Beatle Juice, a tribute band playing exclusively Beatles songs, which will perform from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. The band is comprised of many talented and well-known musicians, the most notable being Brad Delp, former lead singer with the 1970's supergroup Boston.

As an added bonus, at 4:30 p.m. audience members will get a chance to meet an "Austin Powers" look-alike who will mix and mingle with the crowd.

Tours of the USS Salem will also be available as well as a sneak preview of the "Haunted Ship Adventure" planned for later on in the year.

For boating enthusiasts,

Harbor Express will offer short cruises every half hour from noon until 2:30 p.m. for a special holiday fee. Boats depart from the nearby Harbor Express dock.

A mini midway will be in operation to provide a variety of rides for young and old alike. The food court will be open the entire day.

Children under 12 are admitted free all day with a $2 donation asked of adults.

Residents of neighboring communities are also extended an invitation to the party.

This year's celebration is made possible with major sponsorship from The Stop & Shop Supermarkets and additional sponsorships from Twin Rivers Technologies, Aslanis Seafood, Coca Cola, and The Patriot Ledger.

In the event of rain, festivities will be re-scheduled for Monday (Labor Day), Sept. 4. For more information, contact the City of Quincy Events Office at (617) 376-1296.

Esther Sanger Center Presents Special Awards At Dinner

The Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion recently held its fifth annual Awards Dinner at Lombardo's in Randolph.

The yearly event recognizes the commitment of volunteers and organizations who help the agency meet the needs of residents in Quincy and the South Shore through the Sanger Center's two programs: the Quincy Crisis Center and the Mary-Martha Learning Center.

Mary Hinkley of Quincy was honored as Quincy Crisis Center Volunteer of the Year. Lois Arnold of Norwell was named Mary-Martha Learning Center Volunteer of the Year.

Wollaston Church of the Nazarene and United First Parish Church (Church of the Presidents) shared Servant Church of the Year honors.

South Shore Habitat for Humanity, located in Braintree, received the Leadership in Compassion Award.

Guest speakers for the event were Hingham's Anne and John Murphy of Humor Talks.

Esther R. Sanger founded the Quincy Crisis Center 20 years ago in response to seeing many who were in need in Quincy and the South Shore. Today it continues those same programs: a weekday feeding program held at United First Parish Church, a 24-hour crisis hotline, and the Food for Families "food pantry on wheels."

The Mary-Martha Learning Center, established in 1986 and located in Hingham, is a shelter and educational center for women with young children.

JOHN SEAVEY, board member of the Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion, presents the Leadership in Compassion Award to Mary Pottle, board member, South Shore Habitat for Humanity. South Shore Habitat for Humanity, located in Braintree, received the award at the Sanger Center's recent awards dinner at Lombardo's in Randolph.

Board Suspends WYC License Three Days

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Wollaston Yacht Club was given a three day liquor license suspension by the License Board Tuesday for serving alcohol after 1 a.m.

The period of the suspension will be determined by Board Chairman Joseph Shea.

The motion to suspend was made by Police Chief Thomas Frane after hearing complaints from Capt. Robert Crowley. It was seconded by Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue and voted unanimously by the board. Fire Chief Thomas Gorman was not in attendance.

Frane said it was clear to home that a violation did occur under Chapter 138, Section 12.

In addressing the board, Crowley, who was the detail supervisor on the night of July 22 said he drove by the yacht club at 1:35 a.m. and there were about 30 cars still parked in front. He phoned a sergeant and they both went back to the club at 1:40 a.m.

There, Crowley said, they observed nine persons sitting at the bar, and some open beers with bartender Joe Gallagher still behind the bar, while others sat drinking out of plastic cups in the lounge and the patio area.

Crowley told the board that at that moment he told the patrons to "put down their drinks, the bar is closed."

Shea said the license board has a policy that 12:45 p.m. is last call; no liquor served after 1 a.m.; at 1:15 a.m. all drinks off the bar and tables, and at 1:30 a.m. all customers off the premises.

Shea said that if anyone has to be there after 2 a.m. they must notify the police department. He asked manager Pat McKenna if there is a gate that separates the bar and lounge area.

McKenna said he had the gate half-way up because he was stocking and rotating stock at the bar that night. McKenna said there were 45 persons at the club that night at a Luau and that he encourages patrons to finish their drinks before they go out to their boats. Some, he said stay overnight on their boats.

McKenna said he calls the police department each week and tells them what events and activities will take place at the club.

McKenna said there are 65 members at the club and they each have keys so it's hard to keep track of everyone 24 hours a day.

Although admitting that they have had no "previous problems", Crowley reiterated his earlier statements and told the board that there were "open beers, and drinks were in plastic cups on the patio and lounge". He also disclaimed the fact that patrons went to the boats, but instead all left by the front door.

Crowley stated that the gates were not down that night.

Shea read a letter from Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton praising the club for its being a "good neighbor" and for its many community activities.

Shea said the club has 10 days in which to appeal to the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission.

THE QUINCY SUN was recently recognized by the Beechwood Community Life Center for "outstanding service to Quincy seniors." Beechwood Executive Director Sharron Beals is shown presenting the Appreciation Award to Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth (left) and Editor Robert Bosworth. "The Sun consistently strives to inform Quincy seniors, promotes senior services, activities and events and regularly acknowledges the value and contributions of our city's elders," Beals said.

Quincy AARP Meeting Sept. 6

The Quincy City of Presidents' Chapter AARP #4097 will hold its opening meeting Wednesday, Sept. 6 at 125 Granite St.

President Normand Goyette will preside.

Quincy's popular pharmacist, Bonnie Seeley, will be the speaker and will give members and guests an opportunity to ask questions.

Members are asked not to park in the 125 Granite St. parking lot, but management has given permission to park in the front lot of 99 Granite St.

Ruth and John Dobbie and Anna and Bob Shea will serve refreshments.

Board Grants License For New Chinese Restaurant

There will be a new Chinese restaurant known as the International Buffet at the former Michael's Frames at President's Plaza on 237 Quincy Ave.

It was approved at Tuesday's License Board meeting which gave a common victualer license to new owner Li Zi Feng. He told the board that the restaurant will seat about 360 persons and open on Sept. 8.

Board Chairman Joseph Shea who said he and Fire Chief Thomas Gorman had visited the site this past week said the restaurant, which is off the street has a "ton of parking spaces" He said there are almost 100 parking spaces available.

Shea said the restaurant is about 90 percent completed and said he was "impressed by the size and the amount of equipment."

The restaurant will feature various Chinese entrees in buffet style and will also offer take out. It will be open seven days a week from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Potato Pancakes

It seems at our house we either have 10 pounds of potatoes or only 3 potatoes.

On this particular day we had three potatoes and a couple of children coming for dinner. Since they love potatoes, I felt compelled to prepare some kind. You'd be surprised how many potato pancakes I made with only three potatoes.

Potato Pancakes

3 potatoes (shredded)

2 eggs

Bisquick (I didn't measure, but just enough to resemble pancake mixture) salt and pepper to taste

1/4 cup parmesan grated cheese
1 tablespoon chopped onion (optional)
3 tablespoons either vegetable oil or olive oil (I use both)

Mix potato, eggs, Bisquick salt, pepper and onion if you use it, and grated cheese until well blended.

In hot oil, drop by tablespoons full and turn until brown on each side. Drain on paper towel and keep in warming oven until ready to eat. They come out so crispy, you will love them! (P.S. You can also use egg beaters (egg substitute) in place of eggs.)

Spaghetti Dinner Friday For Snug Harbor Playground

A spaghetti dinner fundraiser will be held tomorrow (Friday) from 6:30 p.m. to 11 p.m. at the St. Boniface Church Hall, Palmer and Shed Sts., to benefit construction of a new playground at the Snug Harbor Community School.

Admission is $5 per adult and $2 per child and can be paid the night of the event or mailed to: Germantown Neighborhood Council/Kaboom Playground, 15 Howe St., Quincy 02169.

The Germantown community, organized through the parents of Snug Harbor Community School and the Germantown Neighborhood Center, must raise $15,000 as their share of the $35,000 community-built playground.

The main corporate sponsor of the playground is CNA Insurance who, along with their monetary gift, will participate on the "build day" with 100 of their employees.

The goal of the Fundraising Committee, which is led by Chairwoman Lisa Hajjar and Chairman and Ward 1 Councillor Gregory Hanley, is to raise the necessary funds by the barn raising event on Sept. 30.

For more information, contact Lisa Hajjar at (617) 770-9930.

South Shore Habitat For Humanity Seeks Volunteers

South Shore Habitat for Humanity has been awarded positions by the American Corps VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America) program.

SSHH is looking for four people to work in its Braintree office beginning at the end of August in these positions:

Public Relations Coordinator is needed to address SSHH's publicity need. Requirements: strong written and oral communication skills, ability to work with a diverse group of people, strong organizational and creative problem solving skills, and computer literacy; multi-media skills a plus.

Community Organizer to build support around various church and community groups on the South Shore and to increase awareness of the work of SSHH. Candidates should have strong written and oral communication skills, be able to work with a diverse group of people, and be well organized and comfortable with networking.

Resource Development Team Coordinator to assist with current fundraising activities and help develop additional sources of revenue through corporate sponsorship and grants. Candidates should be computer literate and have strong written and oral communication skills. Experience in grant writing a plus.

Volunteer Coordinator to respond to inquiries, schedule individuals and groups of volunteers, coordinate training, and conduct follow-up evaluations. Candidates should be well organized, computer literate, and enjoy working with people.

VISTA provides full-time volunteers to thousands of low-income communities and non-profit organizations across the nation to address a multitude of problems. VISTA volunteers serve a one-year term in return for the experience learned and a small living allowance paid by the government.

Applications are now being accepted. Interviews will be conducted through early July. Candidates will be selected by the middle of July and must attend a three-day training session from Aug. 21-23 to start their year of service.

For more information about these positions, call Rita Newcomb at the Habitat office at (781) 843-9080 or contact us by e-mail at SSHFH@aol.com.

PRIME TRAVELER
by George P. Murphy

As heard on WJDA Radio, 1300 AM every Thursday at 11:00am!

JET LAG

More than 90 percent of travelers and flight staff suffer from jet lag after a long trip. Common complaints include fatigue, insomnia and poor concentration. Many people say they feel exhausted but cannot sleep. Jet lag typically occurs when flights cross three or more time zones. Other contributing factors may include dry, stale air; cabin pressure; drinking alcoholic and/or caffeinated beverages; feeling tired or stressed before the flight and lack of exercise while traveling. For those who have traveled west, complete recovery takes as long as a week, while eastbound travelers need up to two weeks to completely recover. Exposure to natural daylight - afternoon light for westbound travelers and morning light for eastbound travelers - may help ease jet lag.

Although we can't totally eliminate jet lag from your travels (we can only suggest ways to deal with it), we can help you save time, money and energy when you let a professional travel agent help you plan your trip. You've got enough to think about without having to deal with the sometimes confusing details of successful travel. At PRIME TRAVEL, our computers give us quick and easy access to availability, lowest airfares and hotel accommodations, even car rentals. Let us play our part in making this one of the most memorable trips of your life. Stop by and see us at 500 Victory Road, Marina Bay, PH: 617-472-3697.

P.S. Many travelers believe that daytime flights cause less severe jet lag than night flights.

Multifamily Home Sales Down During First Half Of This Year

Sales of two-, three- and four-family homes declined 6.5 percent across Massachusetts, from 3,508 units closed in the first six months of 1999 to 3,279 in the same period this year, according to a Massachusetts Association of Realtors® (MAR) report.

The decrease in sales activity follows 18 consecutive quarters of year-to-year sales increases between the second quarter of 1995 and the fourth quarter of 1999, and reflects a general easing in housing demand due to higher mortgage rates, volatility in the financial markets and limited inventory levels in many communities, industry officials said.

Across the Bay State, sales of two- to four-family homes slipped 5.1 percent in the first quarter, from 1,496 units in 1999 to 1,419 in the comparable period this year, and fell 7.6 percent in the second quarter, from 2,012 units a year ago to 1,860 in the same three-month period of 2000. Much of the decrease in sales activity was limited to the Greater Boston area, where the multifamily housing supply is most depleted.

In fact, sales of multifamily homes remained strong in several regions during the first six months of the year, the MAR report shows.

Healthy sales gains occurred in both the Central (Worcester County) and West regions, where sales rose 13.3 percent and 12 percent, respectively, in the first half of 2000 over the same period last year.

In addition, two- to four-family home sales increased a modest 0.8 percent in the Northeast region during the period, while sales were essentially stable both on Cape Cod, where sales dipped by one unit, and the South Shore, where units sold declined three units from one year ago.

Notably, despite the slower statewide sale pace, the total dollar volume for multifamily home sales increased 28.1 percent during the first half of the year, an indication that demand for multifamily properties remains quite strong despite higher prices. Total dollar volume for two-, three- and four-family properties increased from $567,603,960 in the first six months last year to $727,175,386 from January-June 2000, raising the average value of multifamily homes to $221,767.

"In many areas of the state, duplexes and other small, multifamily properties have become an affordable alternative to the higher priced single-family market," said MAR President Fred Meyer. "The strong rental market across the state should stimulate purchases and keep multifamily home sales fairly strong for many months to come."

'Mortgage Sense' By Carol Bulman New Mortgage Book Hailed

Conway Financial Services President Carol Bulman signed copies of the second edition of her book, "Mortgage Sense," at a recent reception at the Jack Conway & Co. headquarters in Norwell.

Several dozen CFS personnel, Conway agents, banking executives and mortgage industry representatives marked the book's release and received advance copies of the consumer manual.

James Dougherty, president of the Massachusetts Mortgage Association, praised the updated and expanded volume, which now has 10,000 copies in print. Other attendees included George DeMello of Plymouth Mortgage, Cheryl Webb of the Mortgage Guaranty Insurance Corporation and several local attorneys.

Bulman, who is the incoming chairwoman of the MMA, said, "Mortgage Sense" provides information on calculating affordability, new construction loans, low-downpayment and government programs (including Veterans Administration mortgages), renovation financing and options for first-time buyers.

Other chapters of the book explain the differences between fixed- and adjustable-rate loans, the purpose of title insurance, how much information you need to apply for a loan and a typical loan's closing costs.

Chairman Jack Conway said each of the real estate firm's sales offices has a supply of the books available for customers. He said he agreed with the assessment of syndicated real estate columnist Ken Harney, who called Bulman's book "the best and most understandable book on mortgages I've ever read."

"This is a fabulous source of information," Conway said, "and we encourage anyone who has questions about the process of financing a house to read it."

For more information or to request a copy of the book, call CFS at (888) 831-1181.

Final Curtain Call At Woodward School Diane Purdy's Children's Theatre Workshop Searching For New Home

By CRAIG SALTERS

After 20 years of performances at the site, Diane Purdy's Children's Theatre Workshop made its final curtain call at The Woodward School in Quincy Center.

Now, the goal is to make sure the curtain goes up somewhere else.

"Camp Chippewa Does 'By Any Other Name,'" a play within a play written, like all CTW productions, by Purdy herself, became CTW's final Woodward stage performance after the school decided to raise rent to fair-market value, which Purdy said effectively ended the decades-old partnership between the two.

"The relationship (between CTW and Woodward) has worked out well for both of us," Purdy explained. "But, as a non-profit, the decision to raise rent would have priced us out of the tuition market. We offer many of our students partial or full scholarships and that would have been impossible with the rent increase."

Now, the search is on for a new home for the organization, which began in Weymouth in 1970 and is dedicated to developing the acting abilities of children of various ages, backgrounds, and ability levels.

There are no leads for a new location yet, Purdy said, although a letter of appeal has been sent to individuals and organizations and Mayor James Sheets has expressed his support in finding the CTW a new home. "Naturally, we would love a place with stage and storage but we're realistic," Purdy said. "Right now we're just concerned with physical space."

That rehearsal space, enough for 15 to 25 CTW students, would be needed Wednesdays, 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.; Thursdays, 5 p.m. to 7:15 p.m.; and Saturdays 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Class registration is tentatively scheduled for Sept. 9 but Purdy admits that too much is still

"up in the air" and that "if we don't find something ASAP for classes scheduled in September, the fall semester will be a wipeout."

With years of experience putting on performances in the area, Purdy is more confident about renting a local stage for the school's actual performances, which are scheduled for the last two weeks in January.

Purdy, who was born and raised in Quincy and caught the acting bug while a member of the Quincy High School Class of 1951 -- "I was the only gum-chewing Carmen" jokes Purdy of her first role for the school's film club -- said the idea for the CTW came from her youngest daughter, Jodi, who was intrigued by acting while watching her mother's involvement with the Curtain Call Theater of Braintree.

And what began as a way to train her child in all aspects of the theater became a school which has taught over 3,000 students from across the South Shore, seeing many alumni go on to local and national stage, movies, commercials, and even one appearing on the cover of TV Guide. "At any given moment there are usually three of my former students at Emerson, my alma mater," Purdy said, noting that passing on a love of the theater at any level is really what motivates her.

In addition to her degree from Emerson College in English and Drama, Purdy received teaching certificates in English and Theater Arts from the University of Massachusetts at Boston. She has also established herself as an award winning playwright, director, and actress.

Purdy's style of teaching theater to children is as simple as it is effective: drama by doing. "My theory is to learn how to be in a play, you should be in a play," Purdy said, adding that writing her own scripts is a plus because it allows her to tailor characters and dialogue to challenge the individual student at his or her own ability level.

Purdy called the last CTW show at Woodward a success and recalled a bittersweet memory of the performance involving Robert Johnston, the former headmaster of the Woodward School who died in 1998 after a battle with Lou Gehrig's Disease. Said Purdy: "We were just about to turn off the radio (before the show) and 'Impossible Dream' by Jack Jones came on. That was Robert Johnston's theme song because he always thought of himself as a sort of Don Quixote. The song just came on, out of the blue, and the staff was convinced that was his way of being at the last show."

It was Johnston, Purdy said, who first recruited her to set up a theater program at the Woodward School in 1980, beginning what she called "a symbiotic relationship" whereby the CTW got a home and she helped stage over 30 Woodward theatrical productions throughout her tenure.

Purdy is proud of her relationship with Woodward and now wants to create that same type of relationship somewhere else. "The Children's Theatre Workshop brings many people in and out, so there's a high degree of visibility," Purdy said. "We'd love to reach out with our visibility to some organization who might be willing to help us."

Clergy To Meet With QMC, Faxon House

(Cont'd from page 1)

A delegation to meet with Faxon House and Quincy Medical Center management "in the next few days or an update on the situation and to confirm details of commitments being made."

The delegation includes: Rev. Bennet; Rev. Jack D'Brien, Sacred Heart Church; Mary Ann Walsh, Interfaith Social Services, and Rev. Adolph Wismar, Wollaston Lutheran Church.

And, although he warned that matters were still in the preliminary stages, Rev. Bennet struck a hopeful note. "We feel that there's a constructive basis for discussion here," Rev. Bennet said. "We're willing to work with Faxon House, Quincy Medical Center officials, and the city. We're hearing some positives but now we're going to learn the details."

Citing concerns of building safety, Quincy Medical Center formally requested in May that the 32-bed alcohol and substance abuse treatment center vacate its 120 Whitwell St. location by Sept. 15. That deadline has since been postponed until Sept. 30 and QMC representatives have said that they will keep "an open mind" concerning the situation.

Since the notice, said Shawn Sheehan, executive director of Faxon House, the detox has been actively seeking a new location and has discovered two promising locations: the former Robbin House Nursing Facility in Quincy and the former Resthaven Nursing Facility in East Braintree.

But time, as well as raising the necessary $100,000 to cover moving expenses, is crucial to the future of the only treatment program of its kind between Boston and Plymouth. And more time is what Faxon House and the Quincy Interfaith Association is looking for.

John Keenan, executive secretary to Mayor James Sheets, also attended the Quincy Interfaith meeting. Speaking Tuesday afternoon on the subject, Sheets confirmed that his office was "very much concerned about the future of the Faxon House" and called it "a very critical part of the city's program of dealing with alcohol addiction."

The mayor emphasized that the future of the site was very much in the hands of the now private Quincy Medical Center, adding that it was obvious to him that the building's condition offered absolutely no chance of long-term sustainability. However, Sheets added that Quincy Medical Center was in "the compassion business" and was committed to treating illnesses of all kinds, including addiction. "I'm sure that Quincy Medical Center will be cooperative within reason, meaning that they will expect real, genuine progress in terms of relocation."

A few years ago, Sheets explained, the city developed a "wet shelter" program with Father Bill's Place where intoxicated residents could spend the night at the shelter with proper attention rather than in a jail cell. After that initial night's stay, Sheets said, offenders were urged to make a stay at Faxon House for continued treatment. Said Sheets:

"Take away the Faxon House and what do you do? The program doesn't work anymore. We need to find a new location that's acceptable to the neighborhood, business or residential, and is affordable. We need to preserve those beds."

"As a city, we feel a sense of responsibility to do everything humanly possible to relocate Faxon House and continue with this program. As a city, we're measured by how we treat the most needy in our midst."

BACK-TO-SCHOOL

A Message From Superintendent

New School Year A New Beginning

Dear Parents and Guardians of Quincy Public School Students:

One of the great joys for students and teacher alike is that each September brings about a new beginning.

New beginnings by their very nature are filled with excitement, joy and anticipation. And so it is with all of us associated with the Quincy Public Schools, we look upon the new school year as that golden opportunity to help your child to grow, to change, and to become a self-fulfilling citizen.

I anticipate the new school year to be memorable and challenging.

I encourage you to join in the full life of your school. Get to know your principal and your child's teacher. Participate in school events, PTO functions, celebrations, festivals and sport activities. Your involvement in your child's school is a clear statement to your child that you value education.

Please let me close by wishing you, your child, and family my very best wishes for a happy and successful new school year.

As always, do not hesitate to contact me at the Superintendent's office if you feel the need of my assistance.

Sincerely,
EUGENE W. CREEDON
Superintendent

Basic Back-To-School Safety Rules

By ROBERT HANNA
Crime Prevention Officer
Quincy Police Department

It's that time of year again, youngsters will be leaving their homes, some for the first time, and going off to school. The following are some basic rules that parents should teach their children before school starts.

- Make sure that your children are taking the safest route to school. The best way to do this is to walk that route with your children. Show them where they can go in case of an emergency. Tell them to avoid alleys, construction areas and wooded areas.

- Check your neighborhood for areas that threaten children's safety, like brush in wooded areas, overgrown shrubbery, abandoned buildings, bad lighting, no sidewalk or bike paths next to busy streets.

- Encourage your children to walk with friends and to stay in open areas where others can see them.

- Talk to your children about strangers. Explain that a stranger is someone they don't know well. A stranger can be a man or a woman, well-dressed or shabby, kind or threatening, pretty or ugly. If a stranger tries to follow them or grab them, they should run away, scream and make lots of noise. Tell them to run to the nearest place where there are people and to shout "This person is trying to hurt me" or "Stay away from me" instead of a simple "Help."

ROBERT HANNA

- Make sure that your children never take money, rides or candy from someone they don't know well.

- Rehearse with children their full name, address and phone number (include area code), and how to make emergency phone calls from public phones. Discuss 911 with your children and how to use it.

- Teach children to go to a store clerk, teacher, police officer or security guard and ask for help if they feel threatened.

- Don't hang a house key around your child's neck. It's a telltale sign that you won't be home when your child returns from school. Put the key inside a pocket or sock.

- Encourage your children to look out for each other's safety and report anything suspicious to a teacher, police officer or other responsible adults.

At Home Alone

Often children are home alone for a short period of time after school. The following rules should be discussed with your children.

- Make sure your children can reach you by telephone at work. Post your work number, along with numbers for neighbors, the police and fire department, near all of your phones at home.

- Have your children check in with you at work or with a neighbor when they get home. Agree on rules for having friends over and going to someone else's house when no adult is present.

- Work out an escape plan in case of fire.

- Tell your children never to open the door to a stranger when they are alone in the house or apartment. Caution them about answering the phone and accidentally letting a stranger know they are alone. Kids can always say their parents are busy and take a message for the parent.

These are some basic safety rules for your children. Discuss them with your children in a non-lecturing way, and chances are your children will remember them in an emergency.

8 Ways To Help Kids Start The School Year Off Right

Does your child say that school is stupid, boring and difficult?

Phillip Mountrose, veteran educator and author of the "Getting Thru to Kids" communication series, offers advice on how to help your child have a positive attitude about school. Consider the following:

1. Concentrate on what your child likes about school. Likes can include recess, P.E., and other kids. Find ways to value whatever your child likes. Build on the positives.

2. Listen carefully to what your child says about school. Even if he or she views school negatively, you can be supportive by using your listening skills. Empathize and validate what your child says, even if you disagree. This promotes understanding.

3. Don't try to fix it. By handling the problem for your child, you keep him or her from learning how to handle it. Be a resource and, at times, a guide, not a savior.

4. Help your child develop positive beliefs about school. Instead of the limiting belief that "school is hard," suggest the positive belief, "I can improve"; or "I can get help."

5. Identify resources your child can use. To encourage your child's "I can get help" belief, explore people, books, materials, and computers that will assist learning.

6. Share your experiences and outlook on school. Offer examples of your successes and failures in school. Be candid without going into the lecturing mode. Relate your experience to your child's, being sensitive to your child's strengths and weaknesses.

7. Help your child schedule time for activi- ties. Buy an organizer notebook for school assignments. Set a homework and bedtime schedule to allow time for work and play.

8. Find ways to appreciate your child, regardless of school performance. School competence is only one aspect of life. And as you see your whole child, more of his or her competence can be valued, perhaps in unrecognized and subtle ways.

Phillip Mountrose is the author of the award-winning book "Getting Thru to Kids: Problem Solving with Children Ages 6 to 18." The newest book in his communication series is "Tips and Tools for Getting Thru to Kids." He has been an educator for 20 years, teaching children of all ages. He is also the creator of the most widely-used work social skills video program in the country.

Massachusetts AFL-CIO Endorses Morrissey

The Massachusetts AFL-CIO has endorsed Sen. Michael W. Morrissey for reelection.

Morrissey represents the Norfolk and Plymouth District, which includes Quincy, Braintree, Norwell, Rockland, Holbrook and Abington.

The endorsement noted that Morrissey, first elected to the Senate in 1992, "has consistently cast his vote for working men and women whether the issue involved health care, public education, fair wage laws or a host of other issues affecting working families.

"In particular, Senator Morrissey has been recognized for his successful efforts to ensure that workers' rights were protected when the Legislature passed legislation in 1997 to deregulate the electric utility industry."

"I have always supported organized labor because unions fight to provide their members with better wages, better benefits and stronger job security," Morrissey said. "My father and many other family members of mine belong to unions and have had a better standard of living because of it."

"Last year, unions experienced their greatest growth in membership of the last 20 years. This reflects a growing recognition in this country of the benefits to working families that union membership brings and I'm extremely proud to be endorsed by the Massachusetts AFL-CIO and to be included in that movement."

Harold Endorsed By Tunnel Workers, Telephone Workers.

Paul Harold, candidate for Norfolk County Register of Deeds, has been endorsed by Quincy-based Tunnel Workers, Local 88 and the Norwood-based Telephone Workers, Local 2325.

Scott Boidi, president of Local 88, said the endorsement was based on Harold's "constant support in the past of labor issues as a member of the Quincy City Council."

Timothy Flynn, C.O.P.E. chairman for Local 2325, said Harold was a friend of labor and his past efforts were appreciated. Flynn noted that the C.O.P.E. committee (Committee on Political Education) met in the middle of telephone strike to insure that Harold had the endorsement in time for the Sept. 19th primary.

Harold said that the union endorsements were key because they will help generate a larger voter turn-out. In most communities in Norfolk County, the only contest on the ballot is for Register of Deeds.

Harold is City Council President and is a member of the Democratic State Committee.

SPOTLIGHT ON HEALTH & FITNESS

Dana-Farber To Establish Leukemia Research Center

A Specialized Center of Research in Myeloid Leukemia has been established at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and three affiliates as the result of a five-year, $7.5 million grant from the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society.

It is one of only three such "SCOR" grants bestowed by the organization this year -- the largest single awards for research in the Society's history.

The center, led by James Griffin, M.D., of Dana-Farber's Department of Adult Oncology, is bringing a new, collaborative approach to the study and treatment of myeloid leukemia, which affects the blood-making cells of the bone marrow. Ten researchers at Dana-Farber, Brigham and Women's Hospital, Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, and the Center for Blood Research at Harvard Medical School will attempt to identify the genes that cause leukemia and use those discoveries to develop more effective, targeted treatments for the disease.

"Although we've learned a great deal about the genetic events that lead up to myeloid leukemia, it remains one of the most difficult cancers to treat," Griffin said. More than 15,000 Americans develop the disease every year, and more than half die from it within a few years.

"The new center operates on the idea that if we bring together scientists who take different approaches to leukemia research, and it we explore the basic genetic cause of the disease, we can generate some creative approaches to treating it," Griffin said.

The center will encompass five projects -- four that focus on the genes involved in leukemia and one that seeks to translate the results of the other four into new therapies, including vaccines.

New Hope For Patients Diagnosed With Early Breast Cancer

Now more than ever, women acting on expert advice to have a yearly mammogram starting at age 40. As a result, 40,000 women each year are diagnosed with early forms of breast cancer that in the past, without mammography, would not have been diagnosed.

Very early breast cancer that is contained in the milk ducts of the breast is called ductal carcinoma in situ (DCIS). DCIS is very common, representing 20 percent of all newly diagnosed breast cancer. Despite this, a recent study found that only six percent of women have ever heard of DCIS.

Ellen Soren Beda, 54, had surgery to remove her DCIS and was treated with Nolvadex®, also called tamoxifen citrate, by her doctor. Nolvadex, made by Astra-Zeneca, is the first FDA approved medication shown to reduce the risk of invasive breast cancer in women diagnosed with DCIS. The medication is prescribed after breast surgery and radiation therapy.

"I was scared to learn from my doctor that I had DCIS, because I had never heard of it before and it sounded serious," Beda said. "Now I know that is a survivable type to breast cancer and there are treatment options available to help make sure that the cancer does not come back."

Physicians regard DCIS as a "clinical marker" indicating that changes occurring in the breast could lead to invasive cancer—but may not. Should an invasive cancer develop, treatment could include additional surgery and possible chemotherapy.

Even though a significant percentage of women are affected each year by this condition, there are limited options available to treat DCIS. Up until the 1980's DCIS was commonly treated with mastectomy. Current options also include lumpectomy, or lumpectomy plus radiation therapy.

Nolvadex has been used for over 20 years to treat breast cancer and is also available by prescription to women at high risk for breast cancer. Nolvadex is now available for the management of DCIS. In clinical trials with Nolvadex therapy, the risk of endometrial cancer and blood clots in the lung and legs increased approximately two or three times compared with placebo, although each even occurred in less than one percent of women. More common side effects are vaginal discharge and hot flashes.

For more information about Nolvadex go to www.nolvadex.com.

Hearing aid "Tips from Tobias"

Why do my hearing aids whistle?

This is probably the most frequently asked question about hearing aids.

The most common reason is that the aid is a bit loose in your ear, allowing the sound to leak out of your ear and re-enter into its own microphone, hence the term "feedback".

Solution: If the aid is under warranty have it recased; if not have it coated with Ultra Violet plastics (preferred material) or something comparable in order to tighten the fit.

The other reasons for "feedback" are a malfunction in the aid itself or the ear may be impacted with wax. Remember this, your hearing aid should not whistle at your comfortable listening level unless you cover it, make exaggerated jaw motions or have a profound loss. Have a Board Certified Hearing Instrument Specialist take care of it, because when it whistles you are losing out on what you want to hear!

Wainwright Family In 24-Member Team For Jimmy Fund Walk

In Memory of Jonathan Wainwright

On Sunday, Sept. 24, three generations of the Wainwright family will be taking part in the 12th annual Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk.

The family, along with friends, will form a 24-member team that is walking in memory of Jonathan Wainwright, who died at the age of 46 from a rare fast-spreading cancer last October.

Laurel Wainwright, Jonathan's sister, rounded up family and friends to participate in the event and she'll serve as the team captain.

"Dr. Trudi Feinstein [a friend] asked me if I'd do it this year with her and I said, 'sure,'" Laurel said. "I thought it would be a good family thing to do."

From 86-year-old Ruth, Jonathan's mother, to 10-year-old Eric, his nephew, the crew will be walking to raise money for cancer care and research at world renowned Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

Members of the team have been walking, running, hiking, swimming, biking, rollerblading and dancing this summer to prepare for the 26.2-mile trek. Laurel has been walking seven miles every day since the spring. On Sundays, Eric joins her on her walk that takes her along Wollaston Beach.

"Everyone has been doing their own exercising," Laurel said.

Over its 11-year history, the walk has raised a total of $13.6 million, and, with funding needs on the rise, the goal is for 8,000 walkers to raise more than 3.3 million this year. Although individual walkers qualify by raising $100, they are being asked to take the next step to become a Pacesetter—a walker who raises $500 or more. Pacesetter receive special recognition at the finish line and they'll also be invited to reception held in their honor in the spring.

There are six Pacesetters on the Wainwright team: Laurel, Dr. Feinstein, Ruth, Jonathan's father Dick, and Dr. Peter V. Corea and Rev.

M. Alicia Corea, both of whom have been ministers for more than 50 years at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, the team's major sponsor.

Rev. M. Alicia Corea will actually be attending a convention in Omaha, Neb., the day of the event, but will walk three miles at the same time as the others back in Massachusetts.

In addition to sponsor Houghs Neck Congregational Church, Laurel, who was Jonathan's caretaker, would also like to thank those who made it possible for Jonathan to stay at home while he was ailing.

"With the support from the South Shore Hospice, family and friends, Jonathan was able to remain at home during his illness," she said.

Not everyone will be walking the historic Boston Marathon route. Those that will leave Hopkinton at 7 a.m.

are Laurel, his brothers David, Paul and Stephen, his niece Kristen, and his nephews Pete, Steve, Rich, Greg and Eric.

His sister-in-law Carol and niece Jessica will be walking 13.1 miles from Wellesley. His sister Holly, his sisters-in-laws Debbie and Denise, Dr. Feinstein, Michelle Paul, a member of Houghs Neck Congregational, friend Kathleen Gomez and her granddaughters Melissa Gomez and Chelsea Brooks will do the three-mile walk that starts at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. Dick, Ruth and Dr. Peter V. Corea will join them along the route as they cross the finish line as a team at Copley Square.

St. John's Baseball Registration Sept. 12, 19

St. John's baseball registration for the 2001 season will be held Tuesday, Sept. 12 and Tuesday, Sept. 19 at St. John's Lower Church from 6 to 8 p.m. for girls and boys between the ages of 7-12.

The fee is $48 per child for Farm League (ages 7-9) and $53 for Little League (ages 10-12). All children who participate in the leagues are required to wear gray baseball pants. The charge will be an extra $8.

In order to be in the leagues, the child must be 7 years old on or before April 1 and a child can't turn 13 before April 1.

Are You Ready For Some Football? Quincy, North Open On Road Sept. 15

By CHRIS POISSON

The high school football season is about two weeks away, so it's time to take a look at the 2000 schedules for Quincy and North Quincy.

Both schools will play 10 regular season games, five home and five away, with North Quincy serving as host of this year's 68th annual Thanksgiving Day game.

Quincy will kick off its season Friday, Sept. 15 at Randolph and the following week, Saturday, Sept. 23, it opens up at home against Catholic Memorial at 7 p.m., both non-league games.

Last season, the Randolph game led a list of heartbreakers Quincy suffered over the course of the year. To refresh your memories, Quincy carried a 21-6 lead into the fourth quarter, only to lose, 23-21, on a field goal with five seconds left in the game.

After a home game against Bridgewater-Raynham to close out September, Quincy hits a tough part of its schedule in October with three of four away from Veterans Memorial Stadium. In November, the Presidents return home to face Silver Lake Regional and Barnstable.

Quincy finished 1-10 last year with its only win coming against North Quincy in a memorable Thanksgiving Day game.

North Quincy opens its season Friday, Sept. 15 at Stoughton and the following week, Friday, Sept. 22, it plays its home opener against Whitman-Hanson Regional at 7 p.m., both non-league games.

Last year, those two teams beat North Quincy by a combined score of 53-0. In the Stoughton game, running back Ryan LaCasse, who returns for his senior year, shredded the defense apart like a kid opening Christmas presents, totaling 192 yards on 17 carries.

The Red Raiders close out September at Falmouth, which it beat, 14-7, in overtime last season for its first win. In October, unlike Quincy, they hit a favorable part of their schedule with three of four games at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The first game of that stretch should be a huge game for North Quincy as Barnstable comes to town. Last year, the Red Raiders of the Cape routed them as running back Stefan Gomes torched them for five touchdowns.

In November, North Quincy travels to Bridgewater-Raynham and Canton before the annual holiday game with its rival. Last year, it finished with a 2-8-1 record.

Degan Memorial Road Race Sept. 10

The eighth annual William F. Degan Memorial Road Race will be held Sunday, Sept. 10 at 10 a.m. at Veteran Memorial Stadium.

This 10k and 5k road race is being held in honor of Bill Degan (Deputy, U.S. Federal Marshal Service; Lieutenant Colonel, U.S. Marine Corps), who was killed in the line of duty in Ruby Ridge, Idaho, Aug. 21, 1992 while working for the Marshal Service.

Degan felt strongly about drug abuse, education, sports and the community. The Memorial Committee hopes, through annual scholarships and grants to different youth organizations, Degan will be remembered for the "Hero" he was, and some good may come from a terrible tragedy.

The beneficiaries of this year's event will be organizations that Degan would have supported.

John Gilpatrick, a former Suffolk University hockey player who became a quadriplegic when injured in a game several years ago and who recently made news by walking again, will speak and help child diabetic Caitlyn Peters start the race.

Last year's event had over 1,900 registered runners and the Degan Memorial Committee anticipates over 2,800 this year. Participants include many law enforcement agencies and military personnel from different parts of the country.

Cost is $12 by Sept. 1 and $15 after Sept. 1.

A CLEAN SWEEP

Few things are as annoying to drivers as faulty wiper blades. Smearing or streaking across the windshield may be due to dirt buildup on the windshield or rubber edge, a worn or damaged element, or improper installation of the refill blade. When banding occurs across the wiping area, it is likely due to incorrect wiper arm pressure, damage to the blade assembly, or wrong refill installation. Beading, a collection of fine water droplets that stick to the windshield, is most often caused by contamination by wax and silicone on the windshield or rubber element. Chatter or other noise occurs when the blade moves irregularly across the glass surface. It is usually caused by worn rubber or wiper arm damage.

You can count on us for most all types of service, from replacing your wiper blades to major repairs. Our customers continue to tell us they find our ASE Certified professional service staff to be superior. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO also uses the AllData CD-ROM based system for the very latest in maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. We are located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." We're your local source for propane for grills, motor homes and converted vehicles.

HINT: Windlift, which is evidenced by unwiped areas of windshield caused by wind lifting the blade, should prompt a search for a more aerodynamic wiper.

Senior, Junior Girls Travel Softball Win Titles

The Quincy Senior and Junior 14 and under girls travel softball teams recently brought South Suburban League championships to the city.

The Senior girls edged the three-time defending champion Randolph Devils, 4-3, for the title. Lisa Schifone scored the go-ahead run in the sixth inning when she stole home. Rachel Sorensen picked up her second win in as many days, scattering four singles while striking out six.

Rebekah Sorensen and Marilyn Power made strong defensive plays in the seventh to seal the win. Beth Goodrich scored the first run when she stole home. Ashley Nee and Schifone provided the power at the plate.

In the semifinals, they knocked off a tough Notre Dame Cougars squad led by the pitching of Rebekah and Rachel Sorensen. Rachel fanned 10, walked none and yielded six hits in the win.

Goodrich scored the first run when she stole home, and Sheila Lynch, May Ho, Kristin Grazioso and Rachel also crossed the plate. Joni Ranstrom, Nee, Schifone, Grazioso and Goodrich, who threw out three Randolph base runners, held the team together defensively.

The coaches would like to thank the rest of team, Caitlyn Sampson, Korey Verhault and Rose Devlin, for their contribution throughout the season, and Steven Verhault and S.P.V. Remodeling for sponsoring.

The Junior girls mixed a powerful offense with a tough defense to defeat a veteran Hull team for the crown.

Kelly Bardon paced the offense by smashing a grand slam, while Rose Bell clouted two homers and Kim LeBel one. Outstanding base running by Caitlyn Miller, Casey Hannon, Kaitlyn Fish, Kaitlyn Keeley, LeBel and Bell were also important in the win.

Julianne Eagles and Molly Mansfield shined on the mound. Bell and LeBel were strong at catcher and in the outfield, respectively. At first base, Fish and Keeley shared the duties. Second baseman Miller and shortstop Hannon formed a strong duo up the middle, and Carolyn Gillis and Bardon held their own at third. Kaitlyn Quinn, Marybeth Torpey and Erin Connolly flashed leather in the outfield.

Bell, Goodrich, Hannon, Ho, LeBel, Lynch, Miller, Nee, Schifone and Rachel and Rebekah Sorensen were all selected to represent Quincy in the league All-Star game.

Granite Return To Gridiron Friday At Randolph

The Quincy Granite return to the gridiron Friday night when they tackle Randolph at 8 p.m. at Randolph High School.

Quincy (4-2) is coming off a bye week, while the Oilers (2-5) have won their last two games with defensive backs coach Tom McLaughlin as the quarterback. McLaughlin, a former QB and retired Oiler veteran, is filling in for injured starter Tony Gaucher.

The Granite need to win one of their remaining four games to clinch a playoff spot.

SUMMER CAR CARE

Share The Road Safely With Trucks

Motorists traveling this summer should remember that special precautions are needed to safely share the road with large trucks that also use the nation's highways, according to AAA Southern New England.

There are more than 250,000 crashes annually involving at least one passenger vehicle and one large truck. In more than 70 percent of all fatal crashes involving autos and big trucks, police report that the auto driver contributed to the crash.

"While truck operators have an important obligation to operate their vehicle in a safe manner, passenger car drivers are often in a position to avoid dangerous situations," said John Paul, AAA's manager of Traffic Safety. "It's in everyone's interest for motorists to share the road safely."

One key to driving safely near large trucks is to avoid the "No-Zones" — areas around trucks and buses where crashes are more likely to occur. Some No-Zones are blind spots or areas around trucks and buses where your car "disappears" from the view of the drivers. There are No-Zones to the side, rear, and the front of trucks.

To avoid danger in the rear No-Zone, don't tailgate. Always travel several car lengths behind a truck. To stay out of a truck's large blind spots, make sure you can see the truck driver's face in the side mirrors. If you can't see his face, he can't see you.

Exercise extreme caution when passing a truck. Trucks take twice as long as cars to stop. When passing a truck, don't get back into the truck's lane until you can see the whole cab of the truck in your rear view mirror.

Trucks also sometimes need to swing wide to the right to safely make a right turn. Never cut between a turning truck and the right curb or shoulder.

Communication Promotes Quality Auto Repair

Even if you don't know the difference between a fuel injector and an oxygen sensor, there are still things you can do to help your auto repair technician properly service your vehicle, according to AAA Southern New England.

"Consumers can help by accurately describing the problem and by asking questions until they understand the work being done on their car," said AAA manager of Approved Auto Repair Alfred Ruggerio. "Accurate communication between the repair shop and the customer is one of the most important contributors to trouble-free auto service."

The first step is to make an appointment for repairs whenever possible. If the shop management knows you are coming and has an idea of the problem, they can assign the right person to the job and allow enough time to get it done properly.

When you arrive at the shop, don't tell the service advisor what you think needs to be fixed or replaced unless it's obvious. Instead, describe the problem and its symptoms. Let the technician determine what needs to be fixed.

To avoid misunderstandings, always get an estimate in writing. Oral estimates can be disputed or forgotten. Most written estimates contain a clause allowing the actual cost to exceed the estimate by a certain percentage, such as 10 percent.

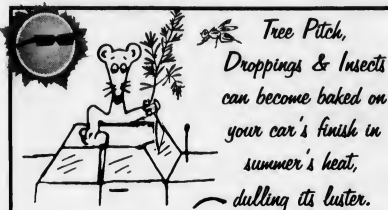

Carefully read the work order before you leave your vehicle at the shop. Be wary of broad statements such as "check and correct transmission noise" or "repair engine." You could wind up with a new transmission or engine and a bill higher than you expected. Also, never sign a blank work order and never tell the shop personnel to "do what's necessary" or "just fix it," unless the problem will clearly be covered under warranty.

Make sure you understand the shop's warranty. It should be printed on the bill. If not, ask for it in writing.

Finally, take a test drive. If the car isn't running right, don't take it home. If you discover that the problem is not solved after you leave the shop, make an appointment to bring the car back as soon as possible.

To further ensure quality auto repair, AAA recommends motorists take their vehicles to shops recognized by AAA's Approved Auto Repair program. These shops have met AAA's rigorous standards for technician standards for technician competence and customer satisfaction. AAA-approved shops are also equipped with the sophisticated equipment needed to service today's high-tech vehicles.

Don't Get Burned By Summer Heat

AAA reminds motorists that summer weather can cause temperatures inside a parked vehicle to reach levels that can be dangerous or even fatal, especially to children and pets.

"Temperatures inside a parked car can quickly soar to near 200 degrees," said John Paul, AAA's Car Doctor. "Don't leave children or animals unattended in a car, not even for a short time."

Before entering a vehicle that has parked in high temperatures, AAA says motorists should open the vehicle's doors and let the interior cool for a few minutes. A sun shield can be used to cover the windshield to minimize heat build-up and to help protect the car's interior. Cover metal and plastic parts on safety belts and child safety seats to prevent burns.

Some motorists opt to leave a window partially open to keep their vehicle cool. This may be appropriate in some circumstances, but it could make your vehicle "hot" by being an easy target for car thieves.

A properly working air conditioning system will also help motorists keep their cool in summer heat. If needed, have the air conditioning serviced by a qualified technician, using the refrigerant R-12 in older systems or R-134a in new or modified air conditioners.

Do not use non-approved substitute for refrigerants.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

On Labor Day, let us pay tribute to the workers of America: the men and women whose love and labor have made our country great. Let us remember those who brought it from a wilderness to a land of plenty with opportunity for all. Let us take time to reflect upon the dignity and the privilege of productive labor. Let us honor those craftsmen who have taken the brainchildren of scientist, engineer and inventor and turned them into products of mass production. This melting pot of talent has resulted in a better life for all Americans.

Yes, strong backs, hands and hearts mined the gold in our west, laid the railroad tracks across our country and put America on wheels in Detroit.

On this Labor Day, let us remember that even with the automation in industry today, the strength of America still lies in the strength of its work force.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A relationship with a family member needs attention. Try to be less demanding and more accommodating. A kind approach encourages openness and honesty.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Sometimes Cupid doesn't score a perfect "Bull's-Eye" for romantic Bovines. But don't give up; he's got another arrow pointed in your direction, and this time he won't miss.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Being cool is still the right way to handle a heated situation. Deal with things as they occur. Becoming agitated over problems that might not happen just drains your energy. Be positive.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) This is a good time to restart those workplace projects you've put off for too long. Then make plans to spark up your love life with a romantic weekend getaway.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A jealous co-worker might try to goad you into losing your temper. But instead of reacting with an angry roar, just purr happily away as if nothing is bothering you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Resist the impulse to confide secrets in people you don't know too well. What you said in confidence could soon come back to haunt you. Be careful.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A family member calls from a far-off place to give you some startling information. What you do with this news could lead to some changes in your life.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You're beginning to feel more confident about making decisions than you have for some time. But you still need to know the facts before making a move.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Some surprises this week are fun, and some are upsetting. Enjoy the fun and handle the rest by getting all the facts before deciding how to react.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your belief in traditional values might be tested by a loved one's startling revelation. Expect to do some deep soul-searching before finding your answer.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You usually prefer to let unpleasant things work themselves out, but this time you might want to confront the situation and take action to deal with it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You will soon mark an important milestone in your life. The event reunites you with people from your past, including someone you thought you'd never see again.

YOU WERE BORN THIS WEEK: You have a natural gift for bringing people together and creating wonderful, loving friendships.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Sparks Fly At Meeting On Hat Rack Bar

D'Amico and a group of residents who said that, after 10 years of incidents at the bar, including a police raid Aug. 11 which resulted in 11 arrests on drug and gambling charges, the time had come for the License Board to revoke the Hat Rack's liquor license at its Sept. 19 meeting. They also brought up issues such as the danger to Lincoln-Hancock Elementary and Sterling Middle School students, broken beer bottles on the sidewalk, and safety fears among longtime residents.

On the other side were patrons of the bar and friends of the owners -- James and Donna Hatfield of Pembroke -- who argued that the Hat Rack was being singled out among all the bars in Quincy and that the guilty parties, and not the owners of the bar, should be responsible for the illegal activities that night. Several speakers also commented on the Hatfield's charitable and community work, which they contended was being ignored.

"The bar room was clearly here and it made for an uneasy situation," D'Amico conceded after the meeting, which was held at the Ward 4 Community Center on Brooks Avenue. However, D'Amico noted that over 50 people had signed on to his campaign to lobby the License Board to revoke the Hat Rack's liquor license.

During the meeting D'Amico said that he had received many calls that day from residents expressing support for his stand but saying that they would not attend the meeting for fear of "repercussions."

One resident who did speak out against the Hat Rack was Martha Robinson of Garfield St. Born and raised in the area, Robinson said that "every corner" of the neighborhood had been safe at one time but that that was no longer the case. She also took issue with a Hat Rack proponent, a friend of the owners, who hailed from Bridgewater. "Surely there's got to be something better between here and Bridgewater?" Robinson asked the young man.

D'Amico, who would not comment on some matters because of the pending criminal investigation but has come out quite clearly against the bar, took exception to his opponents' arguments that the Hat Rack was being singled out and that almost every Quincy bar had some form of drugs or gaming. Said D'Amico:

"If every bar in the City of Quincy had a track record like the Hat Rack, we'd be living in a war zone. No matter what bar it is, if drugs are found there, it should be closed.

"It (a liquor license) is a privilege and not a right," D'Amico continued. "And we will not give in to the hollow argument that it happens everywhere."

D'Amico's words were met with applause, but just as often they were met with counter-arguments and expressions of disapproval. At times the meeting gave off more heat than light, degenerating into shouting matches and name calling on both sides.

Bar patron and Willard St. resident David Wilkins called accusations that all Hat Rack clients were involved with drugs "outrageous" and emphasized that "most of the people who go in there are good people, taxpayers who contribute a lot to this community."

Several other bar patrons, who added that they too were parents and members of the community, wanted to know just what the Hat Rack owners, or any bar owner, could do to keep drugs from coming into a bar. "What are you going to do, strip search everyone who comes in?" asked John Brody of Quincy.

State Representative Bruce Ayers and Councilor-at-Large Frank

McCauley also attended the meeting and addressed the audience of over 100 people. Ayers said that he intended to gather as much information as possible and give his opinion at the Sept. 19 meeting, but he also recalled problems with the Sagamore Grille in Ward 6 and said that the removal of that bar "has made a big difference in the neighborhood."

McCauley also recalled past Quincy bars -- Almost Joey's and the Palmer Pub -- and said what the License Board had to determine was whether the Hat Rack was a "good" or "bad" bar. "Let's face it," McCauley said. "Those two bars were constant problems and eventually the political establishment shut them down. It's an extreme thing to do ... but it's been done before."

D'Amico is urging his fifty volunteers to call, write, and talk to their neighbors, especially West Quincy residents who live or work near Brewers Corner, and said he expects about 200 residents for the Sept. 19 License Board meeting.

Robert Hanna Wins 4 BC High Arts Awards

Robert Hanna of Quincy, a senior at Boston College High School, recently won four Fine Arts Awards at the annual Boston College High School Arts Awards Dinner.

Hanna's awards were for his outstanding performances in chorus, drama, concert band, and big jazz band.

Each year the Parents' Association for the Performing Arts holds a dinner to recognize all B.C. High students who elect the Fine and Performing Arts in Drama, Music, and Art. The co-chairmen of this year's event were Mrs. Adrienne Hefler and Mr. Daniel Dechichio, parents of Performing Arts students.

Guest speaker for the event was Brother Richard Curry, S.J., the founder and artistic director of America's premier school for disabled artists, the National Theatre Workshop of the Handicapped in New York City. A Jesuit Brother, he began his work in the theater in 1977 and has since gained international renown for his capacity to inspire disabled people to strive for excellence in the performing and fine arts.

Each year The Parents' Association selects a faculty/staff member who has supported the arts in a special way. The 2000 Faculty/Staff Appreciation Award went to Mr. Gary Hansen of the custodial staff.

Chef Jack Torchetti Offers Food Tips To Atlantic House

Quincy resident Jack Torchetti, executive chef of Hilltop Marketplace and Restaurant in Braintree, gave a free cooking demonstration recently to the community members of Atlantic House, 338 Washington St., Quincy.

Torchetti provided instruction on the cooking, handling, and storing of meats and other foods. He also discussed such topics as kitchen safety, proper meat temperature, and what to look for when shopping.

After detailing his own experience in the food service industry and explaining entry-level jobs such as dish washer, prep cook, and line cook, Torchetti gave Atlantic House members an idea of what it takes to become a cook or chef.

The demonstration ended with Torchetti preparing lunch for his audience.

Hilltop has been a supporting partner of Atlantic House since May of 1993, providing donations at holidays and job opportunities for the South Shore mental health consumers that go to Atlantic House to receive vocational training and housing supports.

Hilltop has hired 43 Atlantic House members in the areas of food prep, grocery bagging, and carriage handling during the seven-year partnership.

N.Q. Alumni Theatre Second Audition Sept. 5

The North Quincy Alumni Theatre will hold a second audition for its fall opener, "On Golden Pond" by Ernest Thompson and directed by Miki Joseph to be performed in October.

The entire cast has been placed except for one male roll. All men between the ages of 35 to 55 are welcome to audition for the role Tuesday, Sept. 5 at 6:30 p.m. at St. Chrysostom's Church in Wollaston. No experience is necessary, but training is a plus.

For directions and for more information, contact Cathy Jordan at 617-328-7159.

License Board Briefs

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

U.S. Navy Band Performs At Hancock Park

Mayor James Sheets and Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott recently joined residents of Hancock Park Rehabilitation and Nursing Center and Allerton House at Hancock Park Assisted Living Residence at a performance by the U.S. Navy Band held at the outdoor pavilion.

The concert was part of the summer-long Concerts on the Plaza concert series sponsored by Hancock Park. Many residents of the Quincy community also enjoyed the music on the beautiful, late-summer evening.

"We have a terrific setting for an outdoor concert, and we are happy that so many people from the community could join us for this wonderful summer event," said Betsy Flynn, executive director at Hancock Park.

Hancock Park is a 142-bed skilled rehabilitation and nursing center that also provides sub-acute care, specialized Alzheimer's programs, Adult Day Health, and assisted living residences. It is owned and managed by Norwell-based Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group.

Welch Healthcare is a founding member of AURUM, a post-acute network of senior care services.

Residents Assist Adults With Physical Disabilities On Tall Ships Outing

Quincy residents from The Boston Home in Dorchester--Mary Ann Fennessey and Kevin Buckley--recently joined residents of The Boston Home in visiting two Tall Ships during Sail Boston 2000.

The Boston Home is a not-for-profit, long-term facility for adults with physical disabilities--primarily multiple sclerosis and related neurological diseases.

During the two-day outing, residents visited the Lord Nelson, the British Ship specially equipped for people with physical disabilities, and The United States Aircraft Carrier John F. Kennedy.

"It was particularly meaningful for our residents to see first hand the accommodations for sailors with disabilities," said Marva Serotkin, CEO of The Boston Home.

The Boston Home encourages independence and supports participation in activities outside its facility.

Marshall Fifth Graders Going To Point Webster

Starting this September, Quincy Point fifth graders will attend the Point Webster Middle School instead of the Clifford H. Marshall Elementary School.

The permanent change alters the traditional breakdown of Quincy Public Schools, transforming the Marshall School into an early childhood to Grade 4 facility while Point Webster becomes a school for Grades 5 through 8.

This year, said QPS Superintendent Eugene Creodon, the change will affect approximately 100 students who will begin the school year Wednesday, Sept. 6.

Creodon said the movement of Grade 5 from Marshall to Point Webster was caused by space concerns at the elementary school. "We have need of space at the Marshall School," Creodon said, noting that Marshall was the most rapidly growing school in the system and that last year's enrollment was 650 students.

By contrast, Creodon said, the Lincoln-Hancock Elementary School had 654 students but roughly 300 of those students were located at the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center. "It's considerably larger," Creodon said of the Marshall enrollment.

According to the superintendent, the 100 additional students at Point Webster Middle School will bring the enrollment to around 330 students. Since that school was recently renovated to accommodate 600 students, Creodon said that there was "more than adequate room at Point Webster."

Creodon added that the only other non-traditional school alignment was in South and West Quincy, where the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center would handle early childhood to Grade 1, the Lincoln Hancock School would handle Grades 2 through 5, and the Sterling Middle School would handle Grades 6 through 8.

Traditionally, the breakdown of schools is: early childhood (or kindergarten) to Grade 5 for elementary; Grades 6-8 for middle school; and Grades 9-12 for high school.

roughly 100 new fifth graders who will now attend school at Point Webster.

The state mandates 180 school days. The last day of classes for Quincy Public Schools is tentatively scheduled for Friday, June 15. Five make-up days (if school is postponed due to inclement weather, for example) are listed on the school calendar: June 19, June 20, June 21, June 22, and June 25.

Graduation ceremonies are slated for Monday, June 4 for North Quincy High School; and Tuesday, June 5 for Quincy High School and the Center for Technical Education.

FENCE FEUD -- Braintree is again attempting to get this gate on Independence Ave. open for access to the Quincy Adams MBTA station. Quincy officials are again fighting the move.

Braintree In New Access Attempt City Fighting Move To Open T Gate On Independence Ave.

Quincy is fighting off a new Braintree attempt to have the MBTA gate on Independence Ave. opened for pedestrian and possibly vehicular access to the Quincy Adams station.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi and Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, whose wards are affected, teamed up to co-sponsor a resolve at Tuesday night's council meeting opposing the opening which has been an on-and-off dispute between Quincy and Braintree for some 20 years.

The resolve cited past and present strong opposition that opening the gate would create serious traffic, parking and public safety problems in the neighborhood area.

And it called on MBTA officials to continue honoring their promise to keep the gate closed, a promise made when Braintree opposed having the station located in North Braintree and Quincy finally agreed to allow it in South Quincy.

Raymondi, speaking for both himself and D'Amico, said:

"If the MBTA opens this gate then, literally, the floodgates will be opened in terms of traffic congestion, decreased property values, and parking problems. People will use the neighborhood streets to park and walk to the station, creating a traffic nightmare for this residential community.

"There's just no need for it and, if Braintree had wanted the convenience, they could have had the station."

Raymondi and D'Amico said they were seeking Tuesday night to have council colleagues approve their resolve to show united opposition before a meeting planned for today (Thursday).

Rep. Joseph Sullivan of Braintree, chairman of the House Transportation Committee and co-chairman of the House-Senate Transportation Committee, is spearheading a move to get the Independence Ave. gate opened. It would give Braintree residents and Abp. Williams High School students access to the South Quincy station at this point.

A meeting is scheduled for 9 a.m. today at City Hall with Sullivan or a representative to discuss the controversial issue.

Among city officials expected to attend are Mayor James Sheets, Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon, Quincy Police Captain Allen Gillen, Raymondi and D'Amico, all opposed, and a representative from the MBTA.

The Raymondi-D'Amico resolve calls for the City Council to:

- Strongly oppose the opening of the gate at Independence Ave. to local pedestrian and vehicular traffic.

- Call upon state Reps. Bruce Ayers, Ron Mariano and Stephen Tobin and state

Creedon: No Alarm Here On School Bus Warning

A faulty brake system, which could affect up to 6,000 "Thomas-Built" school buses nationwide, will have no impact on Quincy's fleet, said Quincy Public Schools Superintendent Eugene Creedon.

"We have no 'Thomas Built' buses," Creedon assured residents, referring to the company, a division of Freightliner Corp. of Portland, OR, which issued the brake warning. "Our buses are ready to roll."

Classes for Quincy Public Schools began Wednesday.

Creedon said the city's fleet of 23 to 24 school buses is maintained five days a week by mechanics who checked for any problems as soon as the warning was issued. "They were up on it," Creedon noted.

The brakes in question were manufactured by Bendix, a brake manufacturer located in Elyria, OH. The anti-lock brake system, first produced in 1998, has a defect which, under rare circumstances, could cause a vehicle to lose braking power at very slow speeds, roughly 20 miles per hour or less.

A Bendix spokesman said that no accidents have been directly linked to the defect but that an incident in San Francisco, where a bus driver was unable to stop the vehicle for a few seconds, prompted an investigation and discovery of the defect.

Major Changes Due In Food Code For Restaurants, Others

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board heard Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue's report Tuesday regarding major changes in food codes which will affect restaurants and other establishments selling and preparing food for the public.

The important changes include rectifying the problem of grease build-up of fans and equipment, and a potential of what can happen according to Gallahue.

She said the Massachusetts State Dept. of Public Health will be adopting the Federal Food Code and make changes to its existing code.

The following changes will be discussed in detail at a meeting Oct. 2.

- There must be a person-in-charge at the food establishment during all hours of operation. This person will be responsible for the daily operation of the establishment and thus have knowledge of food safety and operating procedures. The person can be the owner, manager, or another assigned employee with the authority to make decisions and initiate corrective actions.

Each restaurant must have at least one full time person who has passed a Food Protection Management Exam.

Those exempt from taking the exam are non-profit temporary food establishments; daycare operations which serve only snacks; satellite feeding sites which receive prepared meals for immediate service; and establishments selling prepackaged food or very limited non-potentially hazardous foods.

Expanded Irish Festival Raises Parking, Traffic Concerns

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Even though the second Annual Irish Festival is being held again by "popular demand" said Peter Kerr, owner of Bud Abbotts, the License Board expressed concern over the traffic and parking.

Kerr said the tented event, held in the Hancock Parking lot was so successful last year, that this year he's expanded it to Saturday Sept. 23 and Sunday Sept. 24. Last year it was held on a Sunday.

In addition to concerns expressed by Chairman Joseph Shea, Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association said she wondered if there would be "enough parking for total retail business," and said she feared it might be a "disastrous" situation.

Noting that the National Fence Company is routing the area off, Police Chief Thomas Frane said he hoped the "limited area left doesn't affect the businesses."

Calling it a "worthwhile event" Shea said he plans meetings with City Engineer Jack Gillon and the police department and will give results to the board. Shea said they will "monitor other retail businesses and see how it goes."

The festival will feature acoustical music, kids rides, gift tables and food vendors. The hours will be Saturday and Sunday from 12 noon to 9 p.m.

The vote will be taken at the Sept. 12 meeting.

Free Health Screening Sept. 13 At Newport Ave. Stop & Shop

The Visiting Nurse Association of Boston will offer a free health screening Wednesday, Sept. 13 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Stop & Shop Superstore, 141 New-

Tall Ship Makes Quincy Visit

THE TALL SHIP "Californian," a 145-foot, two-masted schooner which serves as a goodwill ambassador for the state of California, made her first visit to New England recently when she docked beside the USS Salem. After a series of youth sails, evening sunset sails, and a training cruise among the Boston Harbor Islands, this replica of the 1850's Revenue Service cutter "C.W. Lawrence" headed for the Gloucester Schooner Race held over Labor Day weekend.

Medicare Reimbursement Still A Concern For QMC

As the private, for-profit Quincy Medical Center nears its one-year anniversary, the amount of Medicare reimbursement the hospital receives is still an issue.

And Mayor James Sheets believes it will become more of an issue in the coming months as QMC continues its transition from public to private institution.

"Quincy Medical Center has been very busy the last eight months," Sheets explained. "They've been going through the transition process and really haven't fully addressed issues like that (Medicare Reimbursement). But I expect to be involved as talks intensify in the next few months."

The mayor said he has been following QMC's lead now that the hospital is a private entity but that efforts have already shown an increase in Medicare reimbursements, although just how much is difficult to calculate.

The former Quincy Hospital became a private hospital affiliated with Boston Medical Center in October after months of both financial and political negotiations. The affiliation was made possible by a combined city, state, and federal bailout of $33 million, $12.1 million, and $23 million, respectively.

The federal money, not part of the formal affiliation agreement, was in the form of Medicare Reimbursement.

In October of 1999 Senator Edward Kennedy attended affiliation signing ceremonies for Quincy Medical Center and attributed much of the hospital's financial crisis, as well as those of hospitals across the country, to the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 which caused drastic budget cuts in Medicare Reimbursement.

Sen. Kennedy praised the act itself as a cause of the country's "economic boom" but said the slowed rate of Medicare growth had caused deeper cuts than expected, a problem Congress, he said, was working to remedy.

At one point, Sen. Kennedy noted, 60 percent of Quincy Hospital's income came from Medicare Reimbursement.

MEDICAL ASSISTING PROGRAM students from the QHS Center For Technical Education (CTE) were invited by Quincy Medical Center Pathology Technician Larry Crosby (center) to take an orientation tour of QMC's Pathology Department. CTE Medical Assisting students include, from left: Nichole Leone, Kiev Bui, Tosin Adebisi, Kerri Coyne, Kalleena Chase, Colleen Urbanus, and Charise Hardy. Thank-you letter appears on pg. 5.

Snug Harbor Playground Efforts Help Bind A Community

By CRAIG SALTERS

The residents of Germantown are working hard to build a new playground at the Snug Harbor Community School and, in the process, are strengthening the very community the new playground will serve.

"Quite frankly, it's not just about a playground anymore," said Ward 1 Councillor Gregory Hanley, who serves as co-chairman of the Fundraising Committee along with Co-chairwoman Lisa Hajjar. "This project has fostered a community spirit and civic pride that's been wonderful to see. In the end, we're the biggest winners in this effort."

The effort Hanley refers to is a community-wide drive, organized through the parents of the Snug Harbor School and the Germantown Neighborhood Center, to raise a minimum of $15,000 and recruit 150 neighborhood volunteers before the "build day" of Saturday, Sept. 30, which will be in the spirit of an old-fashioned barn raising.

The funds and the volunteers will represent Germantown's commitment to a $35,000 playground made possible by corporate sponsor CNA Insurance and KaBoom, a national non-profit dedicated to the building of playgrounds across the country.

So far, $5,500 has been raised through a series of efforts, including: the purchase of memorial bricks at $75 apiece which will adorn the new playground; a $200 penny drive by students of a Snug Harbor School summer program; an informational booth at the annual

Inspectional Services Dept. To Be Open Saturdays

The Quincy Inspectional Services Department announces that, beginning Saturday, Sept. 9, the Building Department offices will be open from 8 a.m. to 12 noon.

The Saturday office hours will continue as follows:

Sept. 16, Sept. 23, Sept. 30, Oct. 7, Oct. 14, Oct. 21, and Oct. 28.

Building inspectors will be available to process permit applications and answer questions relative to proposed projects.

Construction activity continues to set records in the city. The Saturday hours are part of an ongoing effort to keep up with the volume of permit applications, said Director Walter White.

The idea was tested in the spring and early summer and was well received, particularly by homeowners, he said. The department will continue to try to offer more convenient hours to homeowners to assist them in obtaining permits, he said.

Regular office hours are 7 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The office is located on the third floor of 1585 Hancock St., the Quincy Fair Building. The elevator is located next to the Registry of Motor Vehicles at the Ross Parkingway entrance to the building.

Roy Lind Calling It A Career

Roy Lind, a long-time South Shore radio favorite, will soon be leaving his WJDA microphone.

The affable Lind, whose audience-pleasing career at the Quincy station spans four decades, has decided to retire.

His last "Breakfast With JDA" and "Party Line" shows are scheduled for Friday, Nov. 3. He will turn 68 two days later.

In addition to hosting those two popular shows, he is also the station's program director.

Lind, who was born and grew up in Quincy, has mixed emotions about stepping down.

"I'm looking forward to it," he says. "And then ... I'm not looking forward to it. You know ..."

He volunteers he's getting tired of rolling out of bed at 4 a.m. at his Scituate home to get to WJDA in Quincy by 5 a.m. to crank things up.

"And with the thought of another winter coming, it just seemed like a good time to go," he muses.

Lind started at WJDA in October, 1959 as a control engineer. He was hired by the station's late founder, James D. Asher whose initials became WJDA's call letters when the station went on the air Sept. 13, 1947.

Lind later became a news announcer and even did some play-by-play football. "I got to do just about everything but sell commercials," he says.

He left WJDA in 1969 to try his hand at public relations in Rhode Island but returned in 1971.

He took over the morning breakfast show from Win Bettinson in 1977 and succeeded Bettinson as program director when the latter retired in 1983. He has been host of Party Line since 1987.

Lind is an easy-going low-key person and doesn't seem to let things rattle him.

But has he ever hung up on anyone on Party Line?

"There was this woman," he recalls, "who called in one morning complaining about the treatment she got at Quincy Hospital for a bloody nose.

"She went on and on and kept repeating how they put sticks up her nose. A little too graphic. I said, 'that's it' and hung up."

That won him a letter from a listener who called him the "Ayatollah of Quincy" for hanging up on the woman.

"He said he was going to call up all our advertisers and ask them to stop advertising on the station."

Lind also cut off an anti-Semite.

"But I generally let people vent their feelings," he says. "You have a call-in show and invite people to call in and express their opinions. Most of them are polite, pleasant and make sense. Now and then you get one of the others."

Lind has been off on assignments, too.

He and Jim Asher were at the Republican National Convention at Miami Beach in 1972 that renominated Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew. He has also covered the America's Cup and the Tall Ships visits.

He has won several awards including a prestigious UPI National Award for his documentary on the Scituate homecoming of Dave Silk, a member of the famed U.S. Olympic hockey team that won the Gold Medal and the hearts of America in 1980.

He was honored as the Quincy Jewish War Veterans

"Citizen of the Year" in 1997.

He is past president of the Scituate Rotary Club and both he and his wife, Joan, a retired nurse, are recipients of the Rotary's Paul Harris Fellow Award.

Incidentally, he has promised Joan he will stay out from under her feet but says he might try his hand at a little cooking.

"I already know how to boil an egg," he boasts.

She has a better idea. A little traveling. And maybe a cruise.

ROY LIND behind the mike.

If there's one regret in Roy's noteworthy radio career it's probably the Blizzard of '78.

WJDA's coverage of that historic storm which buried the area under 27 inches of snow and brought everything to a standstill, is remembered by many as the station's "finest hour."

WJDA, then a sunrise-to-sunset station, remained on the air around the clock for two days and nights keeping vital information flowing to snowed-in and/or flooded out listeners throughout the South Shore.

And broadcasting appeals for equipment such as snowmobiles and four-wheel drive vehicles desperately needed by Civil Defense and other emergency crews.

Teaming up to get all that important information out to listeners were Jay Asher, who succeeded his father as station owner, and staffers Win Bettinson, Ken Fallon, Herb Fontaine, John Nicolson, Charlie Ross and Don Baird.

But no Roy Lind.

"I missed all the action," he laments. "Coming up from Scituate I got as far as the Back River Bridge in Hingham and that was it. Couldn't move another inch."

He abandoned the car, hiked back to the Red Coach Grille, hitched rides on snowplows and four-wheel drive vehicles to Cohasset and trudged the last four miles on foot to his Scituate home.

"I didn't make it to WJDA until three days later," he says.

The blizzard reminds him that retiring before winter isn't a bad idea.

"It seems like a good time to go," he says. "But I know I'm going to miss it."

And his WJDA following will miss him and that friendly voice.

To which we would like to add:

We've said it here before and we'll say it again.

Roy comes through on and off the air as someone you'd like to have as a next door neighbor.

Happy retirement. Gonna miss ya!

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1912 postcard view of the Boston Gear Works building at 14 Hayward Street in Norfolk Downs. The saw tooth roof was popular on factories at the time, it featured windows for letting in light and providing ventilation. The first Boston Gear building on this site was built in 1906 but it was destroyed by fire in 1909 and this building replaced it. The portion of the building to the left of the flagpole was demolished in 1977, but the remainder is part of the present Boston Gear office and headquarters. The company is the oldest Quincy business still in operation at its original address.

Quincy's Yesterdays 600 Inspect New Synagogue

By PAUL HAROLD

Six hundred family and friends of Congregation Adas Shalom previewed the new synagogue on Adams St., inspecting the building's progress.

Building committee chairman Arnold Kaplan said that the construction was on schedule and the building would be ready for the High Holy Days on Sept. 28.

Members of the preview reception committee included Mrs. Paul Bailey, Mrs. Benjamin Shulman, Mrs. Max Goldstein and Mrs. Arnold Sprince.

CITY'S DUMP BURNING CITED BY STATE

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa met in Boston with state health department officials to explain the city's open dump burning, in violation of the state's air pollution laws. The city had been warned numerous times its burning was illegal.

The burning at Hardwick Quarry off Quarry St. was done under the supervision of the Forestry department. The materials burned were Elm trees diseased with Dutch Elm that had been removed from locations across the city.

In defense of the city, DPW Commissioner Charles Herbert said that there were no alternatives for disposing of the trees.

HORN SQUARE DEDICATED IN THE POINT

The intersection of Washington and River Streets was dedicated in the memory of Pfc. Kenneth Horn, with 250 people in attendance. Horn was killed in Korea in 1952.

The plaque designating the square was unveiled by his mother. Among those speaking were Sheriff Charles Hedges and Ward 2 Councillor Joseph LaRaia, a life-long friend of Horn's. The ceremonies was sponsored by the Quincy AMVETS Post and the Quincy Veterans Council.

READERS FORUM

Democratic Convention Was Disheartening

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

What was so disheartening about the recent Democratic National Convention was the not-so-subtle promotion of abortion. The message was threaded through the speeches of several of the guests.

Caroline Kennedy referred to women's reproductive rights, and the vice president's daughter, Karenna, spoke of a woman's right to control her own body. Mr. Gore himself let it be known that under his presidency no justices of the Supreme Court would overturn Roe v. Wade, and that he would protect a woman's right to choose. Sadly, the convention delegates seemed to agree with his message; the applause was thunderous.

It is hard to believe that candidate Gore was once pro life. Perhaps his almost eight years of association with our now impeached pro-abortion president has put him firmly in the anti-life camp. All the while the vice president keeps reminding us that he will protect the children and that no child will be left behind. Surely, he must know that every day in this country over 4,000 little victims of abortion are being left without protection.

Thank You, Quincy Medical Center

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As the Medical Assistant instructor at Quincy High School's Center for Technical Education, I would like to say thank you to so many employees at Quincy Medical Center who took the time to mentor my students. The Medical Assisting program could not survive without you.

Thank you, first, to Betty Cifuni who has graciously coordinated our schedule for many years. Also, I am thankful to those people who spent countless hours with my students, guiding them with patience and humor. Those people are: Deborah, Billing; Joyce, Cashier; Liz, Medical Records; Suzanne, Occupational Health; Tamara, Public Relations; Jean, Foundation; Linda, Radiology; and Sandy and Sherry, Rehab.

A special thank you to Kim in Security who works diligently to insure our transportation. Students enjoyed wonderful new experiences this year with Traci on A-6; Larry Crosby in Pathology; and Kathy Rice in Casting.

Thank you, and we look forward to returning in the fall.

Jerry Lewis MDA Telethon: A Special Occasion

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Labor Day weekend is an occasion with special meaning for me. You see, more than 20 years ago I agreed to help the Muscular Dystrophy Association by reading a message for the Jerry Lewis MDA Telethon from a father dying from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS or Lou Gehrig's disease). His amazing expression of courage brought me to tears, and became a personal source of inspiration that prompted me to again appear on the Telethon in 1987.

Many of you saw me in last year's ABC-TV movie "Tuesdays With Morrie" in which I played Morrie Schwartz, another brave man dying from ALS. An incredible educator, Morrie's indomitable spirit has transcended death by serving as a catalyst for living — even when one is being ravaged by disease. I'm proud that the movie, and the best seller by Mitch Albom on which it was based, have helped so many families. But Labor Day reminds me that we can't stop with Morrie's important lessons. We must find a way to stop ALS, an insidious disease affecting some 35,000 Americans.

Nearly a million volunteers worked Labor Day weekend to help families affected by ALS and other muscle-wasting diseases. Like me, they want to accelerate worldwide research seeking treatments and cures and help MDA maintain its network of 230 clinics offering families unparalleled medical services without direct charge. I hope you'll try to make a difference, too.

Third Annual Quincy ArtsFest Sept. 16-17

The third annual Quincy ArtsFest will be held Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 16-17, on the lawn of the Richard J. Koch Family Park & Recreation Complex, One Merrymount Parkway.

The show will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free.

The ArtsFest features a juried art show, a juried photography show, a Quincy Art Association member's show and a young artists' show. More than 300 works of art and photography have been entered in this year's show from artists and photographers throughout Greater Boston and the South Shore.

"In just three years, the Quincy ArtsFest has become a signature event for the Quincy Art Association," said Anet Paglierani. "It is great to see this community appreciate its many talented artists and photographers."

In addition to the art show, there will be live entertainment all weekend long. Acts such as Made in the Shade Dixieland Band, Riverside Theater Works, the Forbes School of Irish Step-Dance, the Christine Bonoli Band, Joe Lundbohm, and Brenda the Magician will be featured on the main stage.

Thomas P. Koch, Executive Director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments said:

"The Quincy Park Department is happy to co-sponsor one of the finest, family-oriented events on the South Shore. At the Quincy ArtsFest, you will find interesting displays, activities and entertainment for your whole family. I strongly encourage you to join us for a great weekend in the park and enjoy some of the finest artistic talents on the South Shore."

Demonstrations and activities for children will occur all weekend, including rock-painting, cookie decorating, mini-sailboat decorating and much more.

The Quincy ArtsFest is sponsored by the Quincy Art Association, Best Western-Adams Inn and the Quincy Park and Recreation Departments.

"The Quincy ArtsFest continues to build upon its success from year to year," said Recreation Director Barry Welch. "The talents of the artists of all ages are to be admired and appreciated in our unique park setting. I expect that this year will be our best ever."

For more information, call the Park Department at (617) 376-1254.

He is enrolled in a criminal justice master program and is captain of the hockey team.

FOR SENTIMENTAL REASONS, a musical entourage featuring nostalgic songs of the 1940's and 1950's, will make a return engagement aboard the USS Salem Sunday, Sept. 10 at 2 p.m.

1940's Musical Group Returns To USS Salem Sunday

For Sentimental Reasons, a musical entourage consisting of six singers and three musicians, will return to the decks of the USS Salem to once again recreate the music of The Andrews Sisters and other great acts of the 1940's and 1950's with a concert Sunday, Sept. 10 at 2 p.m.

The nostalgic show, which features costume changes, impersonations, and music from a bygone era, has toured the country for years and recently attracted well over 350 people to the Salem this past Memorial Day.

Tickets are priced at $6 for adults and $4 for children and seniors. Ticket prices include the show and a tour of the Salem and can be purchased at the door. Refreshments will also be available. Ticket buyers are welcome to bring their own folding chairs if desired.

The USS Salem, a 17,000 ton heavy cruiser, was the 717-ft. flagship of the US Navy's Sixth Fleet. The ship is located just off Rte. 3A next to the Fore River Bridge. Use the main entrance off the bridge rotary near the Harbor Express.

South Quincy Italian Festival Set For Saturday

The South Quincy Italian Festival will be held Saturday from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Predictions are for good weather, if not, the event will be held Sunday.

The festival, held on Liberty Street for more than 15 years, will feature live entertainment, rides for the children, and many craft tables and games.

The street is always buzzing with the sound of music, the roar of the crowd, the aroma of all the different foods, and the display of balloons and colorful gifts from vendors.

The food ranging from pizza to gourmet rice cakes, also includes fried dough and calimari, calzones, sausage subs, Italian pastries, various drinks, plus many other delicacies.

Committee members include Steve Maze, Richy Speranzo and Harry Bertoni.

Maze said the festival, although held for a "gathering of old friends", its main purpose is that all of the money raised benefits a scholarship fund.

Maze said each year, there are six scholarships given to students from Quincy and North Quincy High School.

Will Receive Maria Droste Award Sun To Be Honored For Family Values, Community Service

The Quincy Sun will be honored for its commitment to family values and community service by the Good Shepherd's Maria Droste Services of Quincy.

The Sun will receive the special honor at a brunch Sunday, Sept. 24 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Tirrell Room at the Quincy Lodge of Elks, 254 Quarry St.

The Maria Droste Services, 1354 Hancock St., Quincy Center, unanimously selected The Sun Family — publisher Henry Bosworth, editor Robert Bosworth and staff — as the second annual recipients.

Mayor and Mrs. James Sheets and family were honored last year as the first recipients.

The focus of the Maria Droste agency is directed toward restoring dignity to persons who would otherwise not be able to afford the special type of counseling the agency offers.

Sister Joanne Westwater, found and director of the agency said:

"Henry Bosworth and his family-style staff have, for over 30 years, kept Quincy well informed about what is current and the past.

"Performing with a strong sense of community service and dedication, The Sun has been a special glue that holds many Quincy families together by keeping them aware and interested in what is happening in the community."

She said Bosworth has been "a friend to the city at large, a good neighbor to the Maria Droste staff and a strong supporter of the agency's mission."

Advance tickets are required and cost $30. Tickets or more information may be obtained by calling Sister Lorraine Bernier at (617) 471-5686 or by contacting members of the committee.

All proceeds will go to the Maria Droste Services to help those in need of counseling.

The committee is chaired by former City Council President Peter Kolson and his wife, Judy.

The committee includes: Maria Droste Advisory Board members Karen Donnellan, Ellen Hafer, Ann Howley, Maralin Manning, Gloria Noble, and Richard Welch.

The supplemental committee includes:

Senator Edward Kennedy, Congressman William Delahunt, state Senator Michael Morrissey, state Representatives Bruce Ayers, Ronald Mariano, and Stephen Tobin, Sheriff Michael Bellotti, Mayor James Sheets, City Council President Paul Harold, City Councillors Timothy Cahill, Michael D'Amico, Stephen Durkin, Gregory Hanley, Francis McCauley, Patrick McDermott, Joseph Newton, Daniel Raymond, City Clerk Joseph Shea.

Also Joyce Baker, president of the Quincy Historical Society; Jerry Dacey, Colonial Federal Savings Bank; George Burke, Quincy attorney and former district attorney; Thomas Koch, executive director Park-Forest-Cemetery Departments; Charles Phelan, director Quincy Data Processing; Robert Curry, chairman Quincy Medical Center Board of Trustees; Peter O'Connell, Robert Derbes, Joanne Condon-Walsh, former city councillor and executive director USS Salem and Naval Shipbuilding Museum; Maryrose Mirick, executive director Quincy Medical Center Foundation; Taki Chan, Tiffanie Williams, Sister Lorraine Bernier and Sister Joanne Westwater.

Shea To Speak At Montclair/Wollaston Meeting

City Clerk Joseph Shea will be guest speaker tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. at the meeting of the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association in the Community Room of Work Incorporated, corner of Arlington and West Squantum Sts.

The clerk's office is responsible for recording births, deaths, and marriages. Also, it is responsible for recording the census and registering voters. The city clerk holds the additional positions of chairman of the License Board and member of the Board of Registrars which oversees the voting process during elections.

Shea is very involved in many aspects of the city and will be available to answer questions dealing with city and local events.

Association President Greg Newton will conduct the business meeting.

The Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association invites and encourages all residents to attend.

South Shore Camera Club Open House

South Shore Camera Club will hold an Open House-Newcomers Night Tuesday, Sept. 12 at 7:30 p.m. at Quincy Point Congregational Church, corner of Southern Artery and Washington St.

Admission is free. For more information, call (781) 337-7143 or (781) 878-0939.

August Moon Festival Saturday At Welcome Young Park

The Quincy Asian American Association will host its August Moon Festival Saturday from 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. at the Welcome Young Playground, North Quincy (behind North Quincy High School, on Sagamore St.)

The festival will feature live cultural performances honoring many of the Chinese traditional dances and songs including the Lion Dance and martial arts demonstrations. Children will enjoy games and activities while adults may visit various booths representing organizations and companies serving the Asian community.

The August Moon Festival has been celebrated for thousands of years in countries around Asia as a way of honoring the annual harvest and celebrating family unity. Thousands of paper lanterns are lighted during the evening and children enjoy the fun of playing with them.

Festival food, including moon cake and Chinese grape, are enjoyed by the whole family.

The martial arts demonstration and lion dance will be performed by the Wong Keung Art & Lion Dance Association, a Boston-based organization with strong ties to the Wong Keung Martial Arts School in Hong Kong and the Chinese martial art "Gung Fu," which originated in the Siu Lin Temple more than 1000 years ago.

Festival activities, which originated from ancient myths and legends, are carried out throughout the day. This year the official August Moon Festival, which is based on the lunar calendar, falls on the day of Sept. 12.

To commemorate the tradition of paper lanterns in the August Moon Festival, the association will distribute free paper lanterns to this year's festival-goers as souvenirs.

Admission is free. The festival is a short walk from the North Quincy MBTA station.

For more information, contact the co-chairmen of this year's planning committee: Jonathan Yip at (617) 376-1515 during office hours or Peter Jae at (617) 471-7192 after 6 p.m.

Christmas Parade Float Building Seminar Sept. 13

The Christmas Festival Committee will hold its annual float building seminar Wednesday, Sept. 13 at 7 p.m.

It will be held at the Koch Park and Recreation Complex, one Merrymount Parkway, next to Adams Field.

This year's parade theme is "Old Memories — New Dreams."

For more information contact Paul Kennedy, Float Activity Coordinator, at (617) 328-1059.

Auditions At Raffael's For 'A Grand Night For Singing'

Quincy's JM Productions and Raffael's restaurant dinner theatre, located in the State Street Complex in North Quincy, are seeking performers for their upcoming musical review "A Grand Night For Singing."

Auditions were scheduled to take place Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the restaurant.

Singers should prepare an "up-tempo" and a ballad of Rodgers and Hammerstein music. These are paid positions and the performances will be in October.

For more information or for an appointment, contact JM Productions at (617) 786-SHOW or Raffael's Restaurant at (617) 328-1600.

Handwashing Best Way To Stop The Spread Of Infection

A Simple Act Can Make A Big Difference

School is back in session, and along with the books, homework assignments, and cooler weather comes the increased incidence of school-year colds, flu, and other illnesses. Much of these maladies can be prevented by the simple — but too-frequently overlooked — act of washing one's hands.

In fact, most experts agree that the single most effective practice for preventing the spread of germs in any setting where there are kids is for youngsters and adults alike to wash their hands frequently and properly.

Handwashing is especially important because the number one way that a host of diseases spread among children is through personal contact.

"Washing hands breaks the chain of transmission of many diseases," such as influenza, the common cold, gastroenteritis, and eye infections," said Bela Matyas, M.D., who heads up the division of epidemiology for the Massachusetts Department of Public Health. Dr. Matyas is also active with the Massachusetts Medical Society's program to educate schoolchildren about the importance of handwashing.

According to the state Department of Public Health each year at least a million Massachusetts residents, including children, suffer gastrointestinal illness related in part to poor handwashing. Our hands have an almost unlimited capacity to carry and transport germs from an unlimited number of sources to an unlimited number of destinations.

Children should be especially mindful of the need to wash their hands when they're in school, in any childcare setting, or anyplace else that brings them into contact with other children, according to Dr. Matyas.

Kids should be certain to wash their hands:

- Before eating
- Before preparing food
- After using the bathroom
- When they sneeze, blow their nose, or cough
- After handling garbage
- After playing with or touching pets, particularly reptiles or exotic pets, or the pets' toys or cages
- Whenever their hands look, feel or smell dirty
- Before leaving school or child care or any group of activities for home

It's important also that children know how to wash their hands properly. They should use plenty of soap and warm water and use good friction to make a soapy lather. They should be sure to scrub between fingers, under fingernails, and around the tops and palms of their hands, and to do this long enough to sing "Happy Birthday" twice all the way through. Then they should rinse their hands well in warm running water.

"The purpose of washing our hands is to clean them of the debris containing germs," Dr. Matyas said. For this reason, he says any hand soap works as well as antibacterial soaps on the market. The new waterless antiseptic soaps, he adds, are useful in instances where no running water is available, but they are not a substitute for washing hands, with soap, in clean running water.

The same handwashing regimen should be practiced by grown ups as well, to both serve as role models for young people and participate in this simple and effective approach to prevent the transmission of communicable disease.

For more information, contact the Medical Society's Department of Public Health and Education at 800-322-2302, ext. 7373.

City Fighting Move To Open T Gate On Independence Ave.

Senator Michael Morrissey to join in opposing the opening of the gate.

• Petition the MBTA and General Manager Robert Prince to honor their commitments, promises and agreements to the city of Quincy and abandon any and all plans to open the gate at Independence Ave.

Raymondi and D'Amico note that after Braintree succeeded in blocking the proposed North Braintree station, the MBTA focused on Quincy Adams as the alternative site.

That ran into strong opposition in Quincy that it would create serious traffic, parking and public safety problems.

The gate at Independence

Ave. was "the most controversial aspect of the proposed Quincy Adams station and opposition to the gate a serious threat to the station," according to Raymondi and D'Amico.

An agreement they said, was ultimately reached between the MBTA and Quincy paving the way for construction of the Quincy Adams station subject to the following conditions:

- The Quincy Adams station would be a "highway based station."
- Access to the station would be directly from the highway and not through neighborhood streets.
- The gate at Independence Ave. would be for emergency use only and the gate would never be opened for local pedestrian and vehicular traffic.

• Fifty parking spaces would be constructed on Burgin Parkway for local use.

The Raymondi-D'Amico resolve also says that MBTA spokesman Brian Pedro stated in a recent article that "the T will leave it up to Quincy to decide whether to open the gate."

They say that is the way it should be.

Quincy's decision, they say, has been and will continue to be: Keep It Closed.

Major Changes Due In Food Code For Restaurants, Others

In order to become certified, Gallahue said the person must pass an accredited exam which are given at the end of a one or two day food safety training. Exams may be re-taken until a passing score is achieved.

Gallahue said the city has arranged for a training and certification course to be held Nov. 13 in the 2nd floor conference room at City Hall.

Chairman Joseph Shea noted there are 316 restaurants in the City of Quincy which need to be revisited.

Some have a "high, medium or low volume use of fans and other equipment", he said.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman was absent at Tuesday's meeting, but Gallahue said he and building inspector Walter White's will both speak at the Oct. 2 meeting.

Other speakers include, Gallahue, Drew Scheele, food/health inspector for the Quincy Health Department; Phil Ventresca and Al Scoglio, ESI Quality International, Stoughton.

Gallahue said enforcement of all violators is Oct. 1, 2001.

First-Time Homebuyers Seminar Tonight At City Hall

Tiger Home Inspection and Panther Lead Paint, in conjunction with Quincy Community Action, will offer a "First Time Buyers" seminar Thursday, Sept. 7, at Quincy City Hall.

The seminar is scheduled for 7:15 p.m. A question-and-answer session will follow the seminar presentation. There is no cost to attend the seminar. However, space is limited and on a first-come, first-serve basis. To reserve a seat, call (617) 479-8181, ext. 115.

The seminar is designed to help first-time homebuyers understand what to look for when purchasing a home.

Topics to be covered include (1) average life expectancy of major components in a home, including refrigerator, furnace, gutters; (2) what a home inspection will tell about the condition of the property you are buying; (3) buyers' and sellers' responsibilities during a transaction; (4) common household repairs and (5) what to look for in lead paint inspection.

"Buying a house is an expensive investment," said Joseph Rizzo, CEO of Tiger Home Inspection. "A home inspection provides an accurate, realistic assessment of that property's condition so that the homebuyer can make an informed decision. We don't advise clients as to whether they should purchase a property, but we do provide them with a report that helps them make an informed decision."

"We are finding that both first-time and repeat homebuyers are opting for home inspections in order to get a complete, clear picture of the status of the property they are thinking of purchasing," he added.

Tiger Home Inspection provides a full range of inspections including VA and FHA. For more information on services provided by Tiger Home Inspection, call 1-800-628-4437.

DANIEL J. FLYNN & Co., Inc., CEO and founder Daniel J. Flynn III recently brokered the transaction of 72-86 Liberty St., Quincy, a deal worth $500,000. The property, an 11,000-plus square foot light industrial building, was sold from CGD Realty Trust to Liberty Street Realty Trust. Flynn & Co. will now serve as the exclusive leasing agent for the available commercial/light industrial space. "We are very pleased to have an opportunity to sell, and now lease, this building," said Flynn & Co. President Paul Talkowski. "With its close proximity to Burgin Parkway, immediate highway and public transportation access, the facility is at a prime location for operating a business," Talkowski said.

Housing Services First-Time Homebuyers Workshop Oct. 7

Quincy, from 9 a.m. until 3:30 p.m.

Attendance at the one-day workshop is mandatory to receive a homebuying certificate which is mandatory by most lenders to qualify for the many different mortgage options such as the Mass Housing Finance Agency, Soft Second Programs, down payment and closing costs grants and other special first time homebuyer financing options.

Neighborhood Housing Services is non-profit organization dedicated to assisting first-time homebuyers through the homebuying process. The staff at NHS is unique in their approach to obtaining down payment and closing costs assistance as well as rehab grants for their clients, which are available through the entire South Shore area.

Agenda will be comprehensive and individualized. Focus will be on the many changing aspects of homebuying, including how to locate a property within budget, how to make an offer, determining the best mortgage program for individual needs.

Advance registration is required and space is limited. A $10 refundable registration fee is required.

For more information and to register for the workshop, contact Debbie Kidd at (617) 770-2387.

SUMMER CAR CARE

Maintenance The Best Form Of Driving Vacation Insurance

Planning a successful summer driving vacation involves more than arranging overnight stays or knowing how many states will be visited on the journey. Attention to the details, including preventive automobile maintenance, is the key to a stress-free driving vacation.

Before taking a trip, have your car inspected by a certified automotive technician. Things can go wrong no matter how well you prepare, so it's a good idea to carry emergency supplies. If you expect to be traveling at odd hours or off the beaten path, consider carrying a cellular phone for summoning help, if needed.

Don't overload your vehicle with luggage, AAA advises. A fully loaded vehicle can put excessive stress on tires, brakes, and suspension components, so pack as lightly as possible. When loading the car, position luggage so it doesn't obstruct the driver's view or shift during braking or sharp turns.

Check your route for food, fuel, and rest stops. Stopping every few hours will help fight fatigue. Make hotel or motel reservations beforehand.

It's a good idea to carry as little cash as possible. A major credit card and travelers' checks are safer options. Take the telephone numbers of friends to call in case of emergencies and let someone know your itinerary.

AAA offers its members route planning, reservations, travelers' checks, car advice, and Emergency Road Service. No one can be assured of a perfect trip, but proper planning can increase the odds.

How To Keep Cars And Drivers From Overheating

Hot summer temperatures can be as brutal on a poorly maintained automobile as the most chilling winter weather.

When the temperature rises above 90 degrees, trouble begins for many motorists. Vehicles with weak batteries may have difficulty starting, air conditioning systems can fail, and poorly maintained cooling systems can overheat.

Cracked belts may snap and worn hoses can blister and begin leaking as temperatures rise inside and outside the engine compartment.

"While many motorists know the approach of cold weather signals the need for preventive maintenance, hotter temperatures also require special attention for motor vehicles," said Alfred Ruggerio, AAA's manager of Approved Auto Repair.

To keep vehicles free from heat-related problems, AAA recommends a complete inspection by a certified technician. At a minimum, the following maintenance items should be checked:

- Inspect antifreeze/coolant level, making certain proper 50/50 mixture of water and coolant is present.

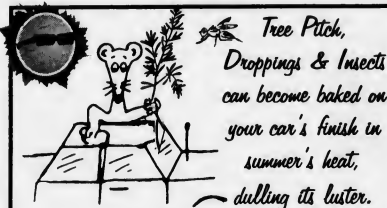

- Switch to a summer grade, thicker motor oil that carries the certification mark of the American Petroleum Institute specifying approval for gasoline engines.
- Inspect and replace worn or cracked belts as well as worn, cracked, blistered, or soft hoses.
- Check the air conditioning system for leaks and have it serviced using the refrigerant CFC-12 in older systems and HFC 134a in a new or modified air conditioners. Do not use substitute refrigerants.

It is also important to know that battery performance is compromised by extremes in temperature, whether hot or cold, so old or weak batteries should be tested and replaced if necessary.

Because even a well-maintained car can break down, it's a good idea to carry drinking water and a windshield shade that will reduce heat build-up inside the vehicle. A cellular telephone or citizens band radio can be used to summon help.

"Becoming stranded by a breakdown on a summer day may not seem threatening," Ruggerio said. "Yet, a hot day on the side of the road without water or shade can become a motorist's worst nightmare. To help prevent a breakdown, inspect your vehicle before warm weather hits and monitor its condition throughout the summer driving season."

Tree Pitch, Droppings & Insects can become baked on your car's finish in summer's heat, dulling its luster.

Big Changes In Safety Standards For Minivans

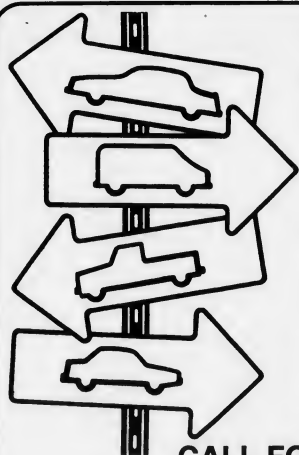

New technology is raising the bar when it comes to safety standards for minivans.

One design change, in particular, was made with the safety needs of families with young children in mind.

The new Personal Safety System in Ford's 2001 Windstar minivan detects when objects or occupants weighing less than 45 pounds are in the passenger seat and turns off the air bag.

The system was designed to help prevent injuries that can result when people seat young children in the passenger seat contrary to proper child-seating recommendations.

Other elements of the safety system include a crash severity sensor, a driver safety-belt sensor and other components that analyze crash and passenger conditions to tailor the deployment of the air bag to the situation, helping reduce the risk of injury to front seat occupants.

Granite In Postseason

By CHRIS POISSON

In the first half of Friday night's game at Randolph, the Quincy Granite had about as much rhythm as presidential candidates George W. Bush and Al Gore would have on MTV's The Grind.

But Quincy (5-2) overcame a turnover-crazed and penalty-plagued first half to choreograph a 26-16 win, clinching a spot in the postseason in its first season as members of the Eastern Football League.

Quincy will travel to Marlboro Saturday to take on the Shamrocks, the two-time defending national champs, at 7:30 p.m.

Before the bout against Randolph (2-6), Quincy had played only one game in 26 days as bye weeks sandwiched its match against Maine on Aug. 19. That help explains why the Granite turned the ball over three times and committed eight penalties in the first 30 minutes of play.

The Oilers, which had won their previous two games after a dreadful 0-5 start, build a 14-6 lead at the half. In the first quarter, Anthony Comer put them up 7-0 on a 4-yard TD run.

Quincy got on the board when quarterback Mike Thomas found his favorite target, wideout Bill MacDougall, for a 5-yard TD pass with 45 seconds left in the half. Randolph responded quicker than speed dial when quarterback Tom McLaughlin hit Dan Grew from 15 yards out seconds later.

After stern words from McPhee at the break, Quincy turned to its running game in the second half and it answered with three rushing touchdowns. Tailback Jackson Vetiack scored on the first drive of the third frame with a 20-yard TD run. Thomas connected with wideout Derrick Epps for the two-point conversion. Bernard Lynch punched one in from 2 yards out on the second drive for a 20-14 advantage.

Randolph picked up a safety to close within four, 20-16, when Quincy snapped the ball out of the end zone on a punt attempt. It got the ball back, but the Granite's Troy Parks intercepted a pass with about four minutes left to put to rest any thoughts of a comeback.

Vetiack added his second touchdown of the game with 8-yard run to close out the scoring.

THE SENIOR BOWLING League recently finished its summer season at Olindy's. Earning trophies were, from the left, Maureen Foley, high single (110); Nick Boulakes, men's high single (97); and Marie Rose, most improved.

Senior Summer Bowlers Honored At Dinner

The Senior Summer Bowling League recently finished its season at Olindy's Quincy Avenue Lanes followed by dinner at Quincy Adams Restaurant.

Maureen Foley of Sawyer Towers recorded the high single with a 110, and Nick Boulakes of Curtis Ave. bowled a 97 for the men's high single. Marie Rose earned the Most Improved award.

All other bowlers received cash prizes. Bill Norton, who started the league June 12, handed out the trophies and prizes.

A new league will begin Monday, Sept. 11 at Olindy's under President Helen MacDonald and assistant Alicia Hanson.

Degan Memorial Road Race Sunday

The eighth annual William F. Degan Memorial Road Race will be held Sunday, Sept. 10 at 10 a.m. at Veteran Memorial Stadium.

This 10K and 5K road race is being held in honor of Bill Degan (Deputy, U.S. Federal Marshal Service; Lieutenant Colonel, U.S. Marine Corps), who was killed in the line of duty in Ruby Ridge, Idaho, Aug. 21, 1992 while working for the Marshal Service.

Degan felt strongly about drug abuse, education, sports and the community. The Memorial Committee hopes, through annual scholarships and grants to different youth organizations, Degan will be remembered for the "Hero" he was, and some good may come from a terrible tragedy.

The beneficiaries of this year's event will be organizations that Degan would have supported.

John Gilpatrick, a former Suffolk University hockey player who became a quadriplegic when injured in a game several years ago and who recently made news by walking again, will speak and help child diabetic Caitlyn Peters start the race.

Last year's event had over 1,900 registered runners and the Degan Memorial Committee anticipates over 2,800 this year. Participants include many law enforcement agencies and military personnel from different parts of the country.

Cost is $15. For more information or an application, call (617) 576-9860.

St. John's Baseball Registration Sept. 12, 19

St. John's baseball registration for the 2001 season will be held Tuesday, Sept. 12 and Tuesday, Sept. 19 at St. John's Lower Church from 6 to 8 p.m. for girls and boys between the ages of 7-12.

The fee is $48 per child for Farm League (ages 7-9) and $53 for Little League (ages 10-12). All children who participate in the leagues are required to wear gray baseball pants. The charge will be an extra $8.

In order to be in the leagues, the child must be 7 years old on or before April 1 and a child can't turn 13 before April 1.

For more information, call (617) 472-6554 and leave a message.

A LOOK INTO THE TRANSMISSION

You can monitor the automatic transmission fluid (ATF) in your vehicle simply by checking the dipstick. Aside from checking the fluid level, observe the condition of the fluid to make sure the transmission is operating normally. The condition of the ATF can reveal a transmission problem even before you notice anything wrong with the transmission. ATF in good condition is transparent red or green, depending on the type. If it is dark and black, it could mean that clutch slippage is occurring, especially if the fluid has a burned odor. If the ATF is pink and milky, water coolant has mixed in with it, probably through a leak between the transmission cooler and the radiator.

Maintaining your car will help it retain value. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is very proud of our ASE Certified technicians and of the equipment they have on hand to properly service every system of your car. Whether your car needs a fluid change, a simple tune-up, or major repairs, see us first. If you are in the market for superior service that you can count on, then visit us today at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Open: Mon-Fri 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: If the ATF is in tacky, varnished condition, it may be a sign that the transmission is overheating or of incorrect fluid level.

3-On-3 Basketball Rec Tournament Winners Crowned

The Quincy Recreation Department recently held its annual 3-on-3 basketball tournament with teams from all 19 playgrounds competing.

Despite lousy weather during the week, the event was a success due to the hard work of specialists Ryan Bell, Geoff Meade and numerous playground leaders.

In the Midget Girls' Division, Brooke Lalay, Lauren DiBona, Alyssa DiBona and Stephanie Maze of Faxon Park, led by leader Caitlin Brillo, cruised to the championship.

In the Junior Girls' Division, the title was also a walk in the park for the Squantum team of Melissa Cochrane, Julie LaPorte, Suzi Sweeney and coach Joe MacRitchie.

The Midget Boys' Division was a different story as Patrick Dean of Palmer Park nailed a game-winning shot in overtime to upset LaBreaque Park. Helping Dean hand playground leader Caitlin Nichol her first coaching title were Ethan Thomas and Joe Carita.

The Junior Boys' Division was also hotly contested, but in the end the experience of O'Rourke's Terrence O'Connell, Brendan Linnane, Chris Tufo, Danny Gaughan and coach Kevin Gaughan was too much for Mass Fields.

The Senior Division title went to coach Adam Woo and Montclair Playground's Wayne DeSchamp, Rick Schifone and Steve Reardon, whose stellar ball movement did in an undermanned Kincaide team.

Youth Baseball, Softball Registration Saturday

Quincy Youth Baseball and Quincy Youth Softball will hold its registration for the 2001 season Saturday, Sept. 9 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Wollaston Element-tary School, Beale St., Quincy.

All Quincy boys ages 8-15 and girls ages 7-15 are eligible to play. For more information, call 472-9023.

Women's Fitness Classes At Fore River Clubhouse

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct Women's Fitness Classes at the Fore River Clubhouse, beginning Monday, Sept. 18, announces Recreation Director Barry Welch.

Two separate classes will be held Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. The first class is from 9 to 10 a.m. and the second class is from 10:15 to 11:15 a.m. The instructor will be Sarah Cobban.

Both classes offer the same instruction and are designed to strengthen muscle, increase flexibility and improve endurance while promoting overall fitness. Hand weights may be used in the class and adaptations in the exercise will allow participants to exercise at their own pace.

Cost is $30. The session will end Nov. 3. Registration will be taken at the first session of class. Late registration will be done at the main office of the Quincy Recreation Department at One Merrymount Parkway.

For more information, call the Quincy Recreation Office at 376-1394.

New Lincoln-Hancock Pool Recreation Schedule

The Quincy Recreation Department announces that its supervised Recreation Swim Program at the Lincoln Hancock Community School pool will reopen Monday, Sept. 11 at 6 p.m.

The swim program will resume on a new fall schedule effective Sept. 11. The schedule is as follows:

Mondays through Fridays: Family Swim from 6 to 6:50 p.m.; Scuba Monday, from 7 to 7:45 p.m.; senior citizens, to be announced; adults, 7:55 to 8:45 p.m.

Sundays: Youth, 1 to 1:50 p.m.; family, 2 to 2:50 p.m.; senior citizens, 3 to 3:45 p.m.; adults, 3:55 to 4:45 p.m.

Habitat For Humanity Golf Classic

The second annual South Shore Habitat for Humanity Golf Classic will be held Tuesday, Sept. 19 at the Ridder Country Club in Whitman.

The Florida-style, best-ball format will begin at 8 a.m. with a shot-gun start. Cost is $125 per person/$500 per foursome, which includes green fees, cart, giveaways and luncheon.

For more information or to register, call the Habitat office at (781) 843-9080.

Expectations High As North Boys Open Friday

Soccer

Last season, the North Quincy boys' soccer team finished with its best record in 15 years (11-6-3) and reached the EMass Division 1 South Sectional quarterfinal where it lost to eventual champ Needham.

When the Red Raiders open their 2000 campaign tomorrow (Friday) at 4 p.m. at Norwell High School, the expectations are the same. North Quincy is hoping to repeat its tournament appearances of the last two years.

But North Quincy will have to do it without its top two scorers from last season. Graham McShane (14 goals, 6 assists) and Stephen Rochon (10, 6), OCL first-team all-stars, graduated.

"We will have a lot of new faces on the field this year, but we're expecting the level of play to match that of last year," said head coach Bob Dano. "We have a solid defense returning, but we will have to spread out the scoring among three or four players. That's really our challenge for this year."

The defense is anchored by returning senior co-captains Shaun Jafarzadeh and Mike Petrucelli as well as senior Tim Lombard. Newcomer, Erik Ranstrom, a sophomore, rounds out North Quincy's back four. Jafarzadeh was named a second-team all-star last year.

Senior goalkeeper Ryan Graeber, coming off an outstanding junior season in which he recorded seven shutouts, returns to the net. He earned the team's most improved player award at last year's annual awards banquet. Backing up Graeber is senior Pat Lahar, who also doubles as a defender.

The midfield has an almost entirely new cast of characters with the exception of returning junior starter David Rochon. Seniors Charlie Acton, Jon Paquette, Tim Russell and Joe Tormey, and juniors Adam O'Hara, Steven Pizzi and Dan Wooster will share the responsibilities.

Carrying the attack at the two striker positions will be seniors Kostas Blathras, Marshall Doughty, David Riley, Paul Vasquez, Chris Wilson and Sunti Wiwatyukhan. Sophomore Mike Tormey has also made a strong bid during the pre-season to land a striker spot.

Team membership is up this year with 48 players completing double sessions. North Quincy will field a junior varsity team with a full schedule and a freshman team with a limited schedule this fall.

The coaching staff consists of volunteer coaches Jake Costa and Bill Santry, assistant coach/JV coach John Jarnis and Dano.

North Quincy will play its varsity home games at Teal Field, behind the high school, while the JV plays at Bishop Field on Holbrook Rd, behind the Montclair Elementary School, at 4 p.m. The public is welcome to all games. No charge for admission.

North Girls Eye Top Spot

After spending six days in Williamsburg, Va., for the pre-season, the North Quincy girls' soccer team is back in Quincy ready for its season opener tomorrow (Friday) at Notre Dame Academy.

Coming off its third straight tournament season, the Red Raiders return 15 players, eight of which are starters, from last year's 12-7-1 team and are looking to vie with Bridgewater-Raynham and Silver Lake for the Old Colony League championship.

"We're ready to challenge B-R and Silver Lake for the OCL championship this year," said head coach Paul Bregoli. "We play Silver Lake in the second game, so we'll know pretty much where we stand."

"The league is going to be very competitive, from top to bottom," he added. "Every game is going to be an adventure. But with the experience we have and the quality kids we have, we should do OK."

Defensively, North Quincy should be strong once again. Senior captain Jen Conley, a two-time OCL all-star, will lead the group. Joining her in the back are senior captain Stacy Szesuil, a four-year starter, and junior Kelly Rice, a three-year starter.

Junior standout goalie Kathryn MacRitchie returns as the backbone of the defense. As a sophomore last year, she posted eight shutouts.

"She's one of the top goalies in the league," Bregoli said. "She has great hands and good quickness. She missed the last game of the year with mono. She's healthy now and ready to go."

Senior captain Kellee Conley will be asked to lead the offense and replace the scoring punch of Kaitlyn O'Donnell (six goals), which the team lost to graduation. Conley enters the season with 13 career goals.

"We expect her to score a bunch," Bregoli said.

Senior captain Casey Ridge, a midfielder, will be counted on to use her great passing skills as the playmaker. Ridge, who transferred from Fontbonne Academy two years ago, excels in the playmaker role as she was the point guard on the basketball team that went to the tournament last year.

Junior forward Allie Lacey (3 goals, 4 assists) will be asked to be the Kellee Conley's counterpart. Junior Lauren Sleeth, who has nine goals and seven assists in two years, should also help out in the scoring column when she returns from a pre-season injury.

"[Conley] has a great shot and serves the ball well," Bregoli said. "She'll be expected to contribute to the offense in a much more significant role this year."

Sophomore Erin McFarland, who started every game as a freshman last year, will provide the physical play at midfield.

The coaching staff includes newcomer Tom Giatrakos, an All-American at Boston University, as the JV coach and Frank O'Donoghue as the freshman coach.

Kate Gaughan Memorial Scoreboard Dedication At Notre Dame Academy

Notre Dame Academy will dedicate a scoreboard in memory of North Quincy's Kate Gaughan Friday, Sept.

8 at 3 p.m. before the start of the Notre Dame girls' soccer team's game against North Quincy High School.

Gaughan, who played soccer at Notre Dame, graduated from the school in 1999.

Football Kicks Off Sept. 15

The Quincy High School and North Quincy High school football teams will open its seasons next Friday night away from Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Quincy will square off against Randolph at 7 p.m., while North Quincy tackles Stoughton at 7 p.m.

Both schools are looking to improve from last season. The Presidents finished 1-10 and the Red Raiders didn't fair much better at 2-8-1.

Home games for Quincy are:

Saturday, Sept. 23 (Catholic Memorial), Friday, Sept. 29 (Bridgewater-Raynham), Friday, Oct. 13 (Stoughton) and Friday, Nov. 3 (Silver Lake Regional).

North Quincy home games are:

Friday, Sept. 22 (Whitman-Hanson Regional), Friday, Oct. 6 (Barnstable), Friday, Oct. 20 (Plymouth South), Friday, Oct. 27 (Silver Lake Regional) and Thurs., Nov. 23 (Quincy).

In next week's Quincy Sun, there will be season previews of each school along schedules and rosters.

Smoking Cessation Program

Bay State Community Services offers free six-week smoking cessation programs at Quincy Center.

Charlene McDonald, smoking cessation counselor, will lead the group through a series of six smoking cessation sessions that provide education on methods for ceasing tobacco use, supportive counseling during the early quitting period, information and advice on nicotine replacement therapy, and referral to individual smoking cessation counseling.

The next session, held on Tuesday evenings at 6 p.m. at the medical center, began Tuesday, Sept. 5 and runs through Oct. 10.

Nicotine patches are available as part of this program free of charge along with counseling.

Call McDonald at (617) 472-6027, ext. 140 to register or for more information.

American Cancer Society Urges Men To Get The Facts Of Prostate Cancer

September is Prostate Cancer Awareness Month. Prostate cancer, the most common non-skin cancer in men, is predicted to kill nearly 32,000 Americans this year.

Here in Massachusetts, 700 men are expected to lose their lives. Many of those lives could be prolonged with early detection of the disease. Men who turn to the American Cancer Society for information will discover a host of resources to guide them in their decisions about early detection and treatment.

According to the American Cancer Society, men age 50 and over who have a least a 10-year life expectancy should talk with their health care professional about having a digital rectal exam of the prostate gland and a prostate-specific antigen (PSA) blood test every year.

Men who are at high risk for the disease — African American men or men who have a history of prostate cancer in close family members — should consider beginning these tests at an earlier age. "Although older men are more at risk for developing prostate cancer, every man should learn the signs, symptoms, and risk factors," says Dave Kindy, president of the American Cancer Society's South Shore Unit Board of Directors. "It can save their lives."

The American Cancer Society offers many services to men who have been diagnosed with prostate cancer. For example, the quarterly newsletter Man to Man, and the interactive Prostate Cancer Resource Center that can be reached through the Society's website, www.cancer.org. Additional services available to all cancer patients include referrals to local support groups, free transportation to and from treatment through Road to Recovery and weekend retreats for cancer patients and their families through We Can Weekend.

Hearing aid

"Tips from Tobias"

How do I clean my aid?

First you must know that approximately 90% or more in-the-ear style aids needing repair are due to wax entering the receiver. Careful cleaning and office visits can save you $100.00-$150.00!

There is not much that we can do about the ear producing wax. The glands responsible for this in our ear canals have a mind of their own and sometimes produce much more wax than is needed for protection of the ear. Yes, protection. Ear wax is not DIRT! It's nature's way to keep out infection, insects and more. Wax should be removed by medical personnel only. Keep out the swabs, bobby pins, pens etc. Your focus should be on wiping off the aid at night and every time you remove it from your ear! A careful visual examination under a bright light and magnifier is the best way to see what you're doing. If you see wax, carefully remove it with the tools provided by your specialist, without pushing it in further. When in doubt bring it to a Hearing Instrument Specialist.

Now you go and spread the news! -Steve

You can help support the third annual Marie Curry

Walk, which provides free mammograms to uninsured and underinsured women at Quincy Medical Center through the Marie A. Curry Fund, by purchasing a paper sneaker for $1 at local participating businesses, where they will be prominently displayed, in Quincy and neighboring towns.

The walk will be held Sunday, Sept. 17 in Quincy.

In addition to supporting the Fund, which has already provided more than 200 free mammograms for individuals without insurance, the Walk helps raise awareness about the early detection of breast cancer detection.

Citizens Bank and Quarry Hills Associates are co-sponsoring the 5-mile (8K) walk along Quincy Shore Drive.

Registration begins at Quincy City Hall at 8 a.m. and the Walk starts at 9:30 a.m., followed by a reception at The Summer House at Marina Bay.

For more information about becoming a sponsor or for a walk sponsor sheet, call (617) 376-5495.

Francis X. Aylward Jr., 32

Musician

A funeral Mass for Francis X. "Frank" Aylward Jr., 32, of Quincy, a musician for 18 years, was celebrated Sept. 2 at St. Paul's Church in Hingham.

He died Aug. 30 at his parents home in Hull.

Mr. Aylward was the lead guitarist in several Boston groups, appearing in many favorite Boston area locales with Scarecrow, Mother Funk and Wonderkat.

An avid runner, he completed the Boston Marathon last year and ran Hingham's Fourth of July road race for many years.

Born in West Roxbury, he moved to Hingham in 1977 and had lived in Quincy for the past five years.

He graduated from Xaverian Brothers High School, Westwood, and the University of Rhode Island.

He is survived by his parents, Sharon (Rubadue) and Francis X. Aylward Sr.; two brothers, Michael Aylward of Quincy and Robert Aylward of South Boston; a sister, Patricia Aylward of Quincy; a grandmother, Emogene Rubadue Skipton of Ohio; and many aunts, uncles and cousins.

Burial was in St. Paul's Cemetery, Hingham.

Funeral arrangements were by Pyne Keohane Funeral Home, 21 Emerald St., Hingham.

Donations may be made to Beth Israel Melanoma Fund, c/o Michael Atkins, MD, 330 Brookline Ave., Boston 02215.

Laurence J. Smith, 78

Retired Quincy Fire Captain

A funeral Mass for Laurence J. Smith, 78, of Holbrook, a retired Quincy Fire Department captain, was celebrated yesterday (Wednesday) at St. Joseph's Church.

He died Sept. 2 at Coyne Healthcare Center, Rockland, after a long illness.

Mr. Smith was a 32-year veteran of the Quincy Fire Department, retiring in 1979.

He was an Army veteran of World War II. Born in Arlington, he was raised in Dorchester and graduated from Dorchester High School for Boys. He lived in Holbrook for 45 years.

Husband of the late Edith J. (Baldwin) Smith, he is survived by two sons, Francis J. "Frank" Smith of Wakefield and Laurence J. "Bunky" Smith of Abington; two daughters, Lorraine M. Orth of East Bridgewater and Judy E. Smith of Holbrook; a sister, Patricia Berard of Wareham; seven grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Burial was in Union Cemetery, Holbrook.

Funeral arrangements were by Cartwright Funeral Home, Holbrook.

Donations may be made to Joslin Diabetes Foundation, 1 Joslin Pl., Boston 02215.

Mary E. Happel, 78

Secretary

A funeral Mass for Mary E. (Murray) Happel, 78, of Braintree, formerly of Quincy, a secretary at the former Fore River Shipyard for many years, was celebrated Tuesday at St. Francis of Assisi Church, South Braintree.

She died Aug. 31 at home after a brief illness.

Born in Quincy, Mrs. Happel lived in Braintree for 40 years. She was raised and educated in Quincy and graduated from Quincy High School and Burdette School of Business.

She is survived by her husband, Fred G. Happel; a son, Frederick Happel of Weymouth; a daughter, Jayne Oliver of Braintree; and five grandchildren.

Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Funeral arrangements were by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave.

Donations may be made to charity.

Carl Morgan, 92

Former College Professor

A memorial Mass for Carl H. Morgan, 92, of Quincy, formerly of Dorchester, a former college professor in California, was celebrated Aug. 31 at St. Joseph's Church in Quincy.

Mr. Morgan died Aug. 26 at the William B. Rice Eventide Home in Quincy.

Mr. Morgan was a professor at California State University at Fresno for more than 22 years until his retirement in 1973.

He was a World War II and a Korean War veteran, serving as a captain in the U.S. Army.

Born in Dorchester, he was educated in Boston public schools and graduated from Boston College High School in 1926 and Boston College in 1930. He received his doctorate in physics at the University of California.
